RESOLUTION ON THE REPORT OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE ON THE ADMINISTRATION OF WARDS, ATTACHED AND TRUST ESTATES IN THE PRESIDENCY OF BENGAL FOR THE YEAR ENDING 30TH JUNE 1913.

REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

LAND REVENUE.

CALCUTTA, THE 3RD JANUARY 1914.

RESOLUTION—No. 29 L. R.

READ—

The Report of the Board of Revenue on the Administration of Wards, Attached and Trust Estates in the Presidency of Bengal for the year ending on the 30th June 1913.

Number of estates under management.—The remaining one-third share of the Bhawal estate came under the management of the Court during the year, four estates were released, and the Eastern and Western Bengal portions of some estates were amalgamated. Fifty-nine estates were under management at the close of the year.

2. Payment of revenue and cesses.—The total amount of revenue and cesses, including arrears due to Government from the estates under management, amounted to nearly 14½ lakhs, of which a little less than 13½ lakhs, or 92·3 per cent., was realized. The heaviest balances are due from the Tagore and Mukharji estates in the 24-Parganas.

3. Rent and cesses due to superior landlords.—There has been an appreciable improvement in the payment of rent and cesses due to superior landlords, the amount paid being 71·6 per cent. of the amount due, as compared with 60·3 per cent. in the previous year. The balance still unpaid is nearly 2½ lakhs out of a total demand of Rs. 8,77,020. In most cases, the delay in the discharge of these liabilities is due to disputes with co-sharers and other legal difficulties.

4. Collection of rents and cesses.—The total collections rose to 106·1 per cent. of the current demand, against 103·1 in the previous year. The standard of 100 per cent. was exceeded in all divisions, the highest percentage (114·3) being in the Burdwan Division, and the lowest (102·4 per cent.) in the Presidency Division. The outstanding balances are however still large, amounting to nearly 55 lakhs, or 129·2 per cent., on the current demand, against 124·6 per cent. in the preceding year. Steps are being taken to reduce the balances by pushing on the collection of realizable arrears and by writing off those that are actually irrecoverable.

There was a decrease of 2,245 in the number of civil suits and of 497 in the number of certificates filed during the year for the recovery of rent and cesses due to wards' estates. Of the total number of certificates, more than half were disposed of and 52·8 per cent. of the total claim was realized, against 49·9 per cent. in the previous year. Out of 5,616 civil suits 3,999 were disposed of, but of the decretal amount less than a third was realized. Efforts should be made to execute the decrees as early as possible.

5. Payment of debts of estates.—The total liabilities of the estates which were under the control of Government during the year amounted to over 105 lakhs, of which over 8 lakhs were paid off during the year. Nearly 80 lakhs are due from six heavily encumbered estates. On the disposal of the suit brought by the mortgagees of the Tagore estate for the recovery of their dues, it is expected that the Court of Wards will be freed from the management of that estate with its liabilities of nearly 19 lakhs. Of the liabilities of the Bhawal estate, which are returned as over 25 lakhs, nearly 20 lakhs represent doubtful and disputed claims made by various members of the family against one another. An investigation is being made by the Collector. One estate in Bakarganj will probably have to be released, as the proprietors object to the sale of any portion for the liquidation of their liabilities, and the financial position is hopeless. Another estate has lately been sold in execution of decrees obtained by its creditors, but a suit has been instituted by the proprietors to have the sale set aside.

6. Cost of management and expenditure on improvements.—The cost of management was 12·1 per cent. of the current demand, as in the previous year. The standard of 10 per cent. was exceeded in all the divisions except in the Presidency Division, where it was 9·8. In many cases, the present high cost is due to temporary causes, such as the survey and settlement operations, but every effort should be made to reduce the cost of management in all estates, where it is considerably above the standard rate.

The total amount spent on works of improvement, schools and dispensaries was Rs. 1,45,891, or 3·4 per cent. of the current rent and cess demand. The Governor in Council is glad to notice that action has been taken by the Board, in consultation with the Director of Agriculture, to introduce agricultural improvements in all solvent estates, and that practical work has already been begun in some of the estates. His Excellency in Council entirely agrees with the Board that the proper policy to pursue in Wards' estates is the demonstration of definite results already known, and not the undertaking of new experiments.

7. Education of wards.—The education of wards continued to receive due attention, and the results attained are on the whole satisfactory. The Governor in Council trusts that the training in survey and settlement work received by the young wards about to attain majority, under the arrangement made by the Board in consultation with the Director of Land Records, will be of great value to them in after-life.

8. The thanks of the Governor in Council are due to the Board for its efficient administration of the estates under the management of the Court of Wards. Miss Cornelia Sorabji, the Lady Assistant to the Court of Wards, has continued to do most excellent and useful work in giving the ladies of the zenanas of wards' estates the benefit of her advice and in looking after their well-being and that of the minor wards. His Excellency in Council is glad to notice the commendation bestowed by the Board on the good work of several of the managers of estates under the Court of Wards.

By order of the Governor in Council,

J. H. KERR,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE CALCUTTA GAZETTE, JAN. 7, 1914.

DISTRICT REPORTS ON WEATHER AND CROPS

For the week ending on the 5th January 1914.

Summary.—During the week under report no rain fell throughout the province. Harvesting of winter rice is in rapid progress and is nearing completion in some districts. The outturn is reported to be fairly good. The standing rabi crops are doing well. Cattle-disease is reported from four districts only. The average price of common rice has fallen by about 2·2 per cent. as compared with that of the previous week. Agricultural loans and Government gratuitous relief were given in Midnapore.

IRRIGATION DEPARTMENT.

The 3rd February 1914.

No. 1 Notification.—The following draft of (1) rules and (2) schedule of rates of tolls, which, in exercise of the powers conferred by sections 6 and 11 of the Canals Act, 1864 (Bengal Act V of 1864), the Governor in Council intends to make and fix for the navigable channels of the Magra Hât Drainage scheme, as defined in Notification No. 4, dated the 22nd April 1913 (published at page 634, Part I, of the Calcutta Gazette of the 23rd idem), is published, as required by section 12 of that Act, for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

II. The draft will be taken into consideration on or after the 18th March 1914, and any objection or suggestion which may be received by the undersigned before that date will be duly considered.

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

DRAFT RULES FOR THE MAGRA HÂT CHANNELS.

1. Every vessel entering or making use of the Magra Hât channels shall be liable to measurement for the purpose of ascertaining the tolls payable. In case of any reasonable doubt, the persons appointed by the Governor in Council as Collectors of Tolls or Navigation Canal Officers shall have authority to again measure a vessel notwithstanding that it was measured before.

2. Vessels for the purpose of the determination of maundage shall be divided into three classes as follows:—

Class I.—To include all vessels of the usual native types of build known as saltees, but not bond fide tal (or palm-tree) dongas and not exceeding 50 maunds by canal measurement.

Class II.—To include all other vessels of usual native types of build or cutters.

Class III.—To include all steamers, flats, barges and other square-built boats.

The net maundage of every vessel, whether laden or empty, shall, for the purposes of the Canals Act, 1864, and of these rules be determined by the following measurements:—

CLASS I.

A.—The product of one-quarter the inside length of the vessel, measured along the centre line from stem to stern, multiplied by the interior greatest breadth of the vessel multiplied by three-quarters of the depth, measured from the top of the vessel amidships to the interior bottom of the vessel is to be taken as equal to the number of maunds upon which toll shall be levied.

B.—The measurement of the length to be made in feet, rejecting inches, and of the breadth and depth in feet and quarters of a foot, rejecting any remainder of less than a quarter of a foot.

C.—Any vessel the maundage of which calculated as above exceeds 50 maunds shall be reckoned as a vessel under class II.

CLASS II.

A.—The product of one-quarter the length of the vessel from stem to stern measured outside and along the water line, multiplied by the greatest interior breadth of the vessel multiplied by the greatest interior depth from the water line to the interior bottom of the vessel, is to be taken as equal to the number of maunds upon which tolls shall be levied.

B.—The measurement of the length is to be made in feet, rejecting inches, the measurement of the breadth and depth is to be made in feet and quarters of a foot, rejecting any remainder less than a quarter of a foot.

C.—The maundage on which the amount of toll is calculated shall be reckoned to the nearest integral multiple of  $12\frac{1}{2}$  maunds, rejecting any remainder of less than  $12\frac{1}{2}$  maunds. In the case of boats exceeding 500 maunds by measurement the maundage shall be reckoned to the nearest integral multiple of 50 maunds rejecting any remainder of less than 50 maunds.

D.—In the case of boats carrying passengers only, one foot shall be deducted from the full interior depth of the vessel, the other measurements and the calculations for maundage being made in the methods prescribed for vessels under Class II.

CLASS III.

A.—For vessels of class III, the number of maunds obtained by the system of measurement prescribed for vessels of class II shall be increased by one-half. For vessels of this class exceeding 1,000 maunds by measurement, the maundage shall be reckoned to the nearest integral multiple of 100 maunds rejecting any remainder of less than 100 maunds. In the case of steamers, the maundage determined as above shall be reduced by one-third as an allowance for engine space.

B.—In case of steamers that have been surveyed under the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884, the registered tonnage entered in the certificate may be accepted as the tonnage of the steamer in lieu of measurement.

3. All vessels under class I, known and defined as saltees, will be charged under a system of compounded tollage in accordance with rules contained in Appendix A.

4. Every vessel included in classes II and III entering or passing along the canal shall be furnished with a ticket on paying the prescribed toll. The ticket shall specify the station at which it has been issued, the name of the person in charge of the vessel, the date on which the voyage commenced, the point to which the vessel may proceed on the line of navigation, the maundage of the vessel, the amount of toll charged, the number of days allowed for the voyage, and the date of such last day. The number of days so allowed without additional payment shall be calculated as follows:—

Boats.—One day for every eight miles or portion of eight miles, to be traversed together with one day for every 100 maunds of measurement or part of 100 maunds.

Floats (timber).—One day for every five miles for any number of timbers not exceeding fifty, and one day for every additional fifty or part of fifty.

Rifts (bamboos).—One day for every five miles for any number not exceeding five hundred and one day for every additional five hundred or part of five hundred.

5. Every vessel which does not complete its voyage within the number of days allowed by rule 4 shall, for each day or part of a day in excess, be liable to an extra charge equal to one-half of the toll payable on the maundage of the vessel as per the Schedule of Rates in Appendix B, provided that in no case shall the demurrage charged exceed Rs. 5 per diem. The Superintending Engineer may, at his discretion, exempt any boats on any line of navigation, or any portion of line of navigation from the payment required by this rule.

Exemption from payment of demurrage may, at the discretion of the Collector of Tolls, be granted for vessels detained in the channels (steamers broken down and boats damaged) by stress of weather, should immediate notice of detention, for the information of the Collector of Tolls, Magra Hât channels, be given to the nearest toll-station.

6. All tolls are payable on demand and shall be paid at the toll-station before a vessel is permitted to proceed: Provided that the Collector of Tolls may, at his discretion, permit vessels belonging to individuals or firms of recognised standing to proceed without prepayment on an undertaking that the bills for tollage due shall be liquidated monthly on presentation.

7. The ticket must be kept on board the vessel and must be produced for inspection when demanded by any person authorised to do so. If, on demand, the ticket is not produced, such person shall assess the tollage as provided in rule 2, and shall require payment of toll, and unless and until the toll is paid, or the original ticket or a duplicate is produced as evidence that toll has already been paid, the vessel will be liable to seizure and detention in accordance with the provisions of section 9 of the Canals Act, 1864.

8. Duplicates of lost tickets, of which the numbers and dates can be satisfactorily established, will be granted by the Collector of Tolls on payment of a sum of Re. 1. Provided that for tickets on which the total tollage is less than Rs. 4, the fee to be charged for a duplicate shall be one-quarter of the total tollage with a minimum of As. 4.

9. A vessel, which has been detained under these rules or under section 9 of the said Act, may not be removed from the canal without the order of the Collector of Tolls until the toll due has been paid. During such detention the manjhi, owner or agent must make arrangements for the safety of the vessel and cargo.

10. All vessels, whether the property of Government or of private owners, are liable for toll, except those exempted by the provisions of Bengal Government Circular No. 11., dated the 11th July 1906.

11. Vessels may be hauled up for repairs on the banks of the canals with the previous written permission of the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer. A rent calculated at one-sixth the rate of ordinary demurrage will be charged for the time the vessel occupies the bank.

12. At places where mooring posts have been provided by the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer, vessels desiring to moor shall be made fast in single line along the banks to such posts in such manner as the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer may direct, and shall not be moored in any other manner.

13. The Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer may, by written notice to be posted at the toll offices, prohibit the dropping of anchors or the putting up of bamboos or luggies in any specified part of the canals or on the banks.

14. Vessels shall be allowed to make fast in single line along the canal banks in such manner as may be directed by the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer from time to time, and no boat shall be made fast or be placed outside of boats so secured. No boat or raft shall be placed in such a position as to endanger the safety or obstruct the passage of other boats. Every vessel, when stationary, shall be securely fastened, and shall at all times have some person in attendance on board. Every vessel in motion shall have a sufficient crew.

15. Vessels passing through the canals shall keep in separate lines, empty boats keeping close to the bank, and those that are laden in the centre.

16. In portions of the canals where only one towing-path exists, vessels shall moor on the side opposite to the towing-path, and the towing-path side shall always be kept clear.

17. Iron-built cargo boats, with outside angle iron projecting beyond the wooden fenders, will not be allowed to enter the locks unless permanent fenders are fixed over the edges of the angle iron so as to prevent them from causing damage to the locks.

18. No fire, or open, unprotected light of any description shall be used on boats containing petroleum, jute, hay or straw in any place prohibited by the Navigation Canal Officer or Supervisor, and no fire, or open, or unprotected light (except in the case of steamers, the galley and engine-room fires and the electric light) shall be used on any vessel while in a lock basin.

19. No person shall wilfully or negligently allow a vessel to sink in the canals.

20. In every case of a sunken vessel, whether due to negligence or otherwise, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer and his subordinates shall offer every assistance in removing the same.

If in three days after the occurrence of a wreck it is seen that prompt measures are not being taken by the owner to remove the sunken vessel from the line of navigation, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer and his subordinates shall make their own arrangements for the removal of the same at the expense of the owner, provided that, in cases where navigation is seriously obstructed, arrangements may be made at once to remove the wreck.

21. When a sunken vessel has been recovered, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer shall cause notices to be posted at the locks, toll offices or other prominent places calling on those concerned to pay to the Collector of Tolls all toll or demurrage which may be due, as well as the expenses incurred in the recovery of the vessel and cargo. Should the sum due be not paid within fifteen days of the date of notice, the vessel and its furniture, or so much of it as may be necessary for the recovery of the dues, will be sold under the procedure directed in section 9 of the Canals Act, 1884.

22. The purchaser of a vessel sold under the provisions of section 9 of the said Act shall have the right to take it out of the canal on the day of purchase, or within such time as may be allowed by the Collector of Tolls, without payment of tolls.

23. When any laden vessel which has sunk has been recovered, or when any laden vessel has been seized under the provisions of the said Act or of these rules, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer shall give immediate notice of the recovery or seizure to the owner of the cargo or his agent, requiring the removal of the cargo without delay and informing him that he will be required to pay all expenses necessary for the proper custody and storage of the cargo until removed.

24. If the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer be unable to ascertain the name and place of business or the abode of the owner of the cargo of such vessel, the notice prescribed in rule 21 shall be effected by a notice exhibited in his office and by advertisement in at least one English and one vernacular Calcutta-newspaper.

25. No steam-vessel, whose length exceeds thirty feet, shall ply in the Magra Hât channels except in the following:—Diamond Harbour creek, Usti Nainan outfall, Nazra khal, Sangrampur khal up to Sangrampur bridge, and the Sarjipur outer khal up to the Surjipur bridge.

26. Lights and Signals.—All vessels, whether travelling or moored in the Magra Hât channels, must, between sunset and sunrise, carry a white light in a lantern on the forepart of the vessel where it can be distinctly seen from all sides. All steam-vessels in motion shall carry the lights prescribed by the Board of Trade Regulations. Barges or boats attached to a steam-vessel, whether in motion or moored, shall carry the light prescribed above.

27. Speed of vessels.—Every vessel plying in the Magra Hât channels must, between sunset and sunrise, limit her speed to three miles per hour. No steam-vessels shall ply between sunset and sunrise in channels detailed in rule 25.

28. No vessel shall remain in the outer entrance channels of the locks at Diamond Harbour and Uttarbhag nor in the inner lock channel and diversion channel of the Diamond Harbour lock and sluice, nor in the approach channels to any sluice. A board will be put up limiting the portion of the channels in which boats are not permitted to moor.

29. The places at which boats cannot be loaded or unloaded will be fixed by the Superintending Engineer, South-Western Circle, and will be demarcated with suitable posts and notice boards.

30. For any contravention of rules 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 26, 27 and 28, the person in charge of the vessel or other person in fault shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 50 for any one infringement, or Rs. 5 a day for any continuing infringement.

31. The channels may be closed, whenever necessary, for effecting the necessary repairs to them on one month's notice of the intention so to close them being given; but, in the event of any sudden emergency, the channels may be closed at any time without prior notice, and no claim in such cases by owners of vessels or others for compensation on account of detention or otherwise shall be entertained.

32. The term "Navigation Canal Officer," as used in these rules, shall include all persons appointed to collect tolls under section 8 of the Canals Act, 1864, and all Public Works officers or subordinates in charge of the channel, not below the grade of Sub-Overseer.

33. No vessel whose beam exceeds 19 feet will be permitted to enter the channels through the Diamond Harbour lock. The same prohibition will apply in the case of the Uttarbhag lock to all vessels exceeding 14 feet beam.

34. Any vessel which enters the channels through the Diamond Harbour lock for the purpose of taking refuge during stormy weather will be charged a nominal toll of As. 8 per boat, provided the vessel leaves the channel again as soon as the weather conditions permit, and does not load or unload cargo inside the channel. All vessels seeking refuge under this rule must anchor in the creek close to the toll-collector's office and will not be permitted to proceed up the creek without paying the usual tolls.

35. Any vessel entering the channels through the Diamond Harbour lock and proceeding to load or unload at the Diamond Harbour station only will be charged tollage at the rate of As. 2 per 100 maunds to include the return journey. Should such boats proceed up the creek, they will be charged the ordinary tolls.

APPENDIX A.

Rules for licensing and registration of saltees or vessels under class I.

1. As provided for under rule 3, no vessel coming under class I, rule 2, shall ply, whether regularly or only occasionally in, or partly within and partly without the limits of, the Magra Hât channels unless licensed and registered by the Collector of Tolls of the Magra Hât channels.

2. Every owner of a vessel or his agent or manjhi shall apply to the Collector of Tolls, Magra Hât channels, for licensing and registration, giving the owner's name and residence or those of his agent duly authorised to act for him.

3. Every license granted under these rules shall continue in force for either six months or one year from the date of issue.

4. The license is not transferable, and if the ownership or manjhi or both of the vessel be changed, notice of the transfer must be given to the Collector of Tolls of Magra Hât channels, who will endorse the change of ownership on the certificate and register free of charge.

5. The license certificate granted for a vessel should contain the registered number of the vessel, owner's name and residence, name of manjhi, the maundage measurements, amount of compounded tollage and the dates of issue and expiry and shall be kept on board. It shall be produced, when required, by a Navigation Canal Officer and shall be delivered up on the expiration of the license.

6. The charge for the issue of a duplicate license to vessels in lieu of those defaced or lost is Re. 1.

7. The registered number of every licensed vessel shall be engraved, or branded, as well as painted in figures easily discernible on both sides of the vessel for which a charge of Re. 1 will be made. These figures shall be legibly maintained during the period of the license.

8. On the expiration of the license the manjhi shall deliver up his ticket to the toll collector at the station from which it was issued.

9. No person in charge of any licensed vessel plying within the limits of the Magra Hât channels shall use or have any ticket resembling those granted under the authority of these rules.

10. Every renewal of a license shall, unless the Navigation Canal Officer considers it unnecessary, involve the issue of a fresh license certificate without alteration in the registered number of the vessel.

11. Every vessel under class I, found plying in the channels without being licensed and registered shall be charged a demurrage rate of Rs. 8 for every such offence, provided that such vessel is not proceeding to the nearest toll station for the purpose of obtaining a license and being registered

DRAFT.

Steering rules to regulate the navigation of inland steam-vessels in certain portions of the river Hooghly.

1. All inland steam-vessels navigating the river Hooghly shall be navigated as follows:—

(a) Between Kidderpore Docks and Luff Point, they shall be navigated on the shallow side of the channel when meeting or being overtaken by sea-going vessels.

(b) In College Reach, they shall navigate on the edge of College Sand, and shall keep to the northward of the sea-going traffic between Shalimar Point and Camberbachies Point.

[Note.—College Reach is bounded to the west by a line drawn due north of Camberbachies Point and to the east by a line drawn from Shalimar Point flagstaff and Kidderpore Clock Tower.]

(c) In Panchpara and Sangral Reach, they shall navigate on the edge of Sangral Sand.

(d) In Jarmakers Reach, they shall navigate on the edge of Munikolli Sand.

(e) In Koffri Reach, they shall navigate on the edge of Koffri Sand.

(f) In the upper part of Budge-Budge Reach, they shall navigate on the right bank of the river; in the lower part, on the edge of Budge-Budge Sand.

(g) At Pujali Crossing and in the Ulubaria and Achipur Reaches, they shall navigate on the edge of the sand on the left bank of the river.

(h) At Moyapur Bar, they shall navigate the shallow tracks.

(i) In Royapur Reach, they shall navigate on the edge of the Royapur Sand.

(j) In Royapur Crossing, they shall navigate the shallow tracks.

(k) In Hog River Reach, they shall navigate on the edge of Hog River Sand.

(l) At Fisherman's Point and in Fulta Reach, they shall navigate on the edge of Fulta Sand.

(m) At Ninan, they shall navigate on the edge of Shibgunge Sand.

(n) At the James and Mary, they shall navigate the Western Gut when there is sufficient depth of water. When obliged to use the Eastern Gut, they shall navigate on the edge of Nurpur Sand and the Muckraputti Lumps.

2. When crossing from one reach to the other or from one side of the channel to the other, in the portions of the river Hooghly specified in rule 1, inland steam-vessels shall not obstruct the passage or cause risk of collision with any sea-going vessels crossing or passing at the same time, and if necessary, they shall slacken their speed, or shall stop and reverse engines until the sea-going vessel has passed them.

3. When inland steam-vessels meet other inland steam-vessels, they shall pass port to port.

The 24th February 1914.

No. 89 Marine.—Notification.—In accordance with the provisions of section 50, sub-section (2) of the Indian Ports Act, 1908, the following account of the receipts and expenditure of the Hospital Port Dues Fund of the Port of Calcutta for the year 1912-13 is published for general information. No. 1884.—The 1884 Municipality Act.—In exercise of the power conferred by section 100 of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884 (Bengal Act III of 1884), the Governor in Council makes the following rules, subject to which the Commissioners of the Narayanganj Municipality may allow communication-pipes to be laid down from the service-pipes of the Commissioners for the purpose of leading water to premises within the Municipality for domestic purposes only :—

Rules.

1. So long as the Commissioners deem it practicable and consistent with the maintenance of an efficient water-supply, they may allow any owner or occupier of a holding paying a water-rate imposed under the provisions of Part VII of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884, on the annual value of such holding when such annual value is not less than Rs. 100 to lay down communication-pipes from the service-pipes of the Commissioners for the purpose of leading water to such holding for domestic purposes only, subject to the following rules and conditions.

2. The owner or occupier of any holding requiring water to be laid on to such holding for domestic purposes, or requiring any addition or alteration to an existing water-supply must apply for the same on a printed form to be supplied free of cost at the Municipal Office.

3. A fee of Rs. 2 must be paid to the Commissioners by such owner or occupier for each connection before any work is commenced. This fee must be paid at the time when the application for the connection is deposited, and will be in addition to all other costs and charges imposed under these rules.

4. (i) Each holding shall have a separate connection from a service main, and extensions from the communication-pipe of one holding to another shall not be allowed.

(ii) A branch main may be allowed to rate-payers applying for the same at their own expense and from the branch main connections to holdings may be extended. Such branch main when laid down shall be the property of the Municipal Commissioners.

5. The owner or occupier of the holding in respect of which the connection is required must pay the entire cost of the connection, including the supply and fixing of the fittings referred to in rule 7, and must also pay the cost of such alterations in, or repairs to, roads, drains, sewers, gas or water mains or pipes and the cost of such other works as may be necessitated by, or result from, the work of making such connection.

6. (i) The work required may, at the option of the Commissioners, either be carried out by the Commissioners themselves at the expense of the owner or occupier of the holding in respect of which the work is required, or may be carried out by a person or firm employed by such owner or occupier and approved by the Commissioners.

(ii) No laying down, repair, alteration, removal or extension of any communication-pipes and fittings shall be undertaken except under the direct supervision of the Water-works Engineer of the Municipality.

7. A holding connection shall comprise the following parts or fittings :—

- (a) a brass or gun-metal ferrule inserted in the main supply pipe,
- (b) a galvanized iron communication-pipe from the ferrule to the meter,
- (c) a stop-cock and its surface-box,
- (d) a meter,
- (e) service-pipes from the stop-cock to the taps, and
- (f) taps.

8. (i) All the fittings referred to in rule 7 shall be exact duplicates of standard samples kept in the office of the Commissioners, and approved by them in a meeting.

(ii) All fittings shall be inspected and tested and stamped by an officer of the Municipality before being fixed.

(iii) If any owner or occupier shall desire to adopt any fitting of a pattern different from the standard patterns he must present such fitting for the approval of the Chairman, and any fittings so presented may, if considered satisfactory by the Chairman, be stamped and samples thereof may be purchased and placed among the standard fittings.

9. Every communication-pipe must be capable of withstanding a pressure of a column of water 100 feet in height and must be of a quality approved by the Water-works Engineer of the Municipality.

10. (i) Whenever any communication-pipe has to be laid across a sewer or open drain or in any place where in the opinion of the Commissioners it is liable to injury or contamination, such pipe must pass through a cast-iron pipe of sufficient length to afford due protection to the communication-pipe.

(ii) No more bends or elbows than are absolutely necessary shall be allowed in any communication-pipe. No bend by heating and no gradual bend or long sweep such as is likely to cause the pipe to split shall be allowed.

11. The stop-cock and its surface-box shall be placed as near as practicable to the points where the supply-pipes enter the holding to be supplied, but must not be within any private premises. The surface-box shall be so designed that it can be locked and the key of it shall remain under the control of the Water-works Engineer. The stop-cock shall be capable of adjustment so that the supply to the holding may be regulated thereby.

12. (i) The meter shall be placed as near to the stop-cock as possible and in a position where it can be conveniently examined.

(ii) The meter must be fixed in a brick chamber covered over with a cast-iron surface-box of approved pattern.

(iii) Subject to the provisions of rule 13, no meter must be touched or interfered with in any way except with the permission of the Chairman.

13. The Commissioners shall depute an authorized person to read every meter not less than once a quarter, and shall give notice to the occupier at least twenty-four hours before the reading is recorded.

14. Not more than one cistern connection shall ordinarily be allowed to any holding. All cistern connections shall be provided with a ball-cock. The size of all cisterns permitted shall be regulated by the Commissioners.

15. (i) No connection shall in any case be sanctioned unless and until the applicant makes provision to the satisfaction of the Commissioners for draining away waste water.

(ii) When the holding is within 50 feet of any public drain, a connection from the service-pipes shall not be sanctioned, unless and until the applicant constructs a drain of masonry work for carrying off the waste water to the said public drain.

16. When the Commissioners are satisfied that any owner or occupier of a holding having a connection from the service-pipe has wilfully contravened or has failed to observe any of the above rules and conditions or continues to wilfully waste water after having been warned against doing so, they may turn off the water from such holding for such time as they may think fit.

17. (i) Every owner or occupier of any holding in respect of which a connection has been made under these rules shall be entitled to a supply of 3,000 gallons of water per quarter for each rupee paid by him quarterly as water-rate in respect of such holding.

(ii) For all water in excess of the amount allowed under sub-rule (1) such owner or occupier shall be charged quarterly as follows:—

	Per 1,000 gallons. Rs. A.
(a) For any excess quantity of water not exceeding one-half of the amount of the free allowance.	0 6
(b) For any excess quantity of water exceeding one-half of the amount of the free allowance, but not exceeding the amount of free allowance.	0 8
(c) For any excess quantity of water exceeding the amount of the free allowance, but not exceeding twice the amount.	0 12
(d) For any excess quantity of water exceeding twice the amount of the free allowance.	1 4

18. If the owner or occupier of any holding which is supplied with water under these rules shall refuse or neglect to pay any of the fees or charges imposed in accordance with these rules for a space of fourteen days after he has been served with a notice of demand for the same, the Commissioners may, at any time after the expiration of that period, and without further notice, disconnect any pipe forming part of the connection made in respect of such holding, and may recover the cost of disconnecting such pipe from such owner or occupier:

Provided that the disconnection of such pipe shall not relieve any person from any liabilities which may have been incurred under these rules.

19. The sizes of the ferrules and the diameter of the communication-pipe referred to in clauses (a) and (b) of rule 7, and the number of taps shall be fixed in accordance with the annual valuation of the holding as follows:—

Annual valuation of holding				Sizes of ferrule	Diameter of communication-pipe	Number of taps
Under Rs.	200	...		$\frac{1}{8}$ inch.	$\frac{1}{2}$ inch.	1
From ..	200 to Rs.	399 ...		$\frac{1}{4}$ ..	$\frac{1}{2}$ ..	2
" ..	400 .. ..	599 ...		$\frac{3}{8}$ ..	$\frac{3}{8}$ ..	3
" ..	600 .. ..	899 ...		$\frac{7}{8}$ ..	$\frac{3}{4}$ ..	4
" ..	900 .. ..	1.199 ...		$\frac{1}{2}$ ..	$\frac{3}{4}$ ..	5
Rs. 1,200 and above	...			$\frac{3}{4}$ ..	$\frac{3}{4}$ ..	6

Every tap shall be of the same size as the pipe to which it is attached, and shall be of brass and of the pattern known as screw-down. Every tap shall be at least three feet above the surface of the earth in the holding.

II. This cancels rules (1) to (9) published under Eastern Bengal and Assam Government Notification No. 310M., dated the 19th January 1909.

No. 490M.—The 18th February 1914.—In exercise of the power conferred by proviso (a) to sub-section (3) of section 279 of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884 (Bengal Act III of 1884), the Governor in Council is pleased to direct that the water-rate shall not be levied in the Narainganj Municipality upon any house or land of which no part lies within a radius of 1,500 feet from the nearest stand-pipe or other supply of filtered water available to the public.

This cancels rule 1 published under Eastern Bengal and Assam Government Notification No. 310M., dated the 19th January 1909.

No. 492M.—The 18th February 1914.—The following draft of a sub-rule which the Governor in Council intends, in exercise of the power conferred by sub-section (1) of section 567 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899, to add to rule 24 in Schedule XVII of that Act (as amended by Notifications Nos. 543M., 164T.M., 1078T.M. and 577M., dated, respectively, the 5th March 1910, the 30th April 1910, the 24th October 1910 and the 14th March 1911), is published for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

II. The draft will be taken into consideration on the 15th April 1914, and any objection or suggestion received by the undersigned before that date will be duly considered.

Draft of proposed sub-rule (3) in rule 24.

"(3) Notwithstanding anything contained in this rule, where a site adjacent to the site of a proposed building is not occupied by a masonry building situated within ten feet of the boundary line between the two sites and within twenty-four feet from the frontage of the street on which the two sites abut, the proposed building may, with the sanction of the General Committee, be erected along the said boundary line up to a depth of twenty-four feet from such street frontage, unless, in the opinion of the General Committee, there is any objection to any building which may be subsequently erected on the adjacent site being attached to the building so erected."

No. 508M.—The 21st February 1914.—In exercise of the power conferred by section 27 of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884 (Bengal Act III of 1884), the Governor in Council is pleased to appoint Mr. W. DISTRICT REPORTS ON WEATHER AND CROPS

For the week ending on the 23rd February 1914.

Summary.—During the earlier part of the week under review light to moderate rain fell throughout the province. The rainfall greatly helped ploughing operations for jute and autumn rice and was also favourable to standing boro paddy, but was unfavourable to mango blossoms, the potato crop and pulses. Harvesting of rabi crops and pressing of sugarcane continue. The outturn is fair. Cattle-disease is reported from six districts. The average price of rice has slightly risen as compared with that of the previous week.

INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

Published in FOUR SERIES, viz.

CALCUTTA, MADRAS, BOMBAY AND ALLAHABAD.

THE Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, are printed in monthly Parts, which are issued, as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

The Reports comprise four Series—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court.

The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta Series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depot; and the Madras, Bombay and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

Persons desiring to subscribe for or purchase the Reports should apply to—the Officer in charge Bengal Secretariat Book Depot, Calcutta, or the Superintendent, Government Press, Madras, or the Superintendent, Government Central Press, Bombay, or the Curator of Government Books, United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, Allahabad.

Entrance to the Haiho—Establishment of river mouth leading marks and Inward and outward turning transit marks.

No. 100 (second publication).—The Coast Inspector, Shanghai, has given Notice (No. 563 of 1913), that the following aids to navigation have been established, to assist vessels in navigating between the Deep Hole and the entrance to the Haiho :—

Two black pyramidal Beacons, to be known as the River Mouth Leading Marks, have been established on the northern bank of the Haiho, about 1 mile to the north-westward of the Fort Light.

The high (or rear) Beacon exhibits a white light. The low (or front) Beacon exhibits a red light. The lights are Fixed, Dioptric, of the Sixth Order. These Beacons in transit mark the channel from the Spit Light-boat towards the entrance to the Haiho, until Central Fort (about 4 cables S.S.W. of Fort Light), is abeam.

Three Beacons, forming two sets of unlighted transit marks, and to be known as the Inward and Outward Turning Transit Marks, have been established in the neighbourhood of the Taku Bar Outer Leading Marks.

The high (or rear) Beacon is a black square. The low (or front) Beacons are two black pyramids.

The southernmost of these two sets of transit marks—the Inward Turning Transit Marks—indicate, when in line, where an inward-bound vessel should leave the Taku Bar Inner Leading Marks and proceed on the River Mouth Leading Marks. The northernmost of these two sets of transit marks—the Outward Turning Transit Marks—indicate, when in line, where an outward-bound vessel should leave the River Mouth Leading Marks and proceed on the Taku Bar Inner Leading Marks.

The accompanying plan shows the position of aids to navigation marking the entrance to the Haiho.

The customary withdrawal of the floating aids to navigation during the winter months is not affected by this Notice. The lighting of the several Leading Marks will be continued during the winter.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS.

No. 74 (third publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 1 of 1914), are republished :—

PART I.

CLOSING OF PORTS.

(1) My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, having taken into consideration the fact that local or other circumstances may arise in which it may be necessary, on account of periodical exercises, manœuvres, or otherwise, to forbid all entrance to certain ports of the Empire, this is to give Notice that on approaching the shores of the United Kingdom, or any of the ports or localities of the British Empire, referred to in Part III of this Notice, a sharp look-out should be kept for the signals described in the following paragraph, and for the vessels mentioned in paragraph (5), Part II, of this Notice, and the distinguishing and other signals made by them. In the event of such signals being displayed, the port or locality should be approached with great caution, as it may be apprehended that obstructions may exist.

(2) If entrance to a port is prohibited, three red vertical lights by night, or three red vertical balls by day, will be exhibited in some conspicuous position, in or near to its approach, which signals will also be shown by the vessels indicated in paragraph (5), Part II, of this Notice.

If these signals are displayed, vessels must either proceed to the position marked "Examination Anchorage" on the Admiralty charts and anchor there, or keep the sea.

(3) At all the ports or localities at home or abroad referred to in Part III of this Notice, search-lights are occasionally exhibited for exercise.

Instructions have been given to avoid directing moveable search-lights during practice on to vessels under way, but mariners are warned that great care should be taken to keep a sharp look-out for the signals indicated in paragraph (2) above, when search-lights are observed to be working.

PART II.

EXAMINATION SERVICE.

(4) Under certain circumstances it may become necessary to take special measures to examine vessels desiring to enter the ports or localities at home or abroad, referred to in Part III of this Notice.

(5) In such case, vessels carrying the distinguishing flags or lights mentioned in paragraph (7) will be charged with the duty of examining ships which desire to enter the ports and of allotting positions in which they shall anchor. If Government vessels, or vessels belonging to the local port authority, are found patrolling in the offing, merchant vessels are advised to communicate with such vessels with a view to obtaining information as to the course on which they should approach the Examination anchorage. Such communication will not be necessary in cases where the pilot on board has already received this information from the local authorities.

(6) As the institution of the Examination Service at any port will never be publicly advertised, especial care should be taken in approaching the ports, by day or night, to keep a sharp look-out for any vessel carrying the flags or lights mentioned in paragraph (7), and to be ready to "bring to" at once when hailed by her or warned by the firing of a gun or sound rocket.

In entering by night any of the ports mentioned below in Part III, serious delay and risk will be avoided if four efficient all-round lamps, two red and two white, are kept available for use.

(7) By day the distinguishing flags of the Examination Steamer will be a special flag (white and red horizontal surrounded by a blue border) and a blue ensign.

Also, three red vertical balls if the port is closed.

By night the steamer will carry :—

(a) Three red vertical lights if the port is closed.

(b) Three white vertical lights if the port is open.

The above lights will be carried in addition to the ordinary navigation lights, and will show an unbroken light around the horizon.

(8) Masters are warned that, before attempting to enter any of these ports when the Examination Service is in force, they must in their own interests strictly obey all instructions given to them by the Examination Steamer. In the absence of any instructions from the Examination Steamer they must proceed to the position marked "Examination Anchorage" on the Admiralty Charts and anchor there, or keep the sea.

Whilst at anchor in the Examination anchorage Masters are warned that they must not lower any boats (except to avoid accident), communicate with the shore, work cables, move the ship, or allow anyone to leave the ship, without permission from the Examination Steamer.

(9) In case of fog, Masters of vessels are enjoined to use the utmost care, and the Examination Anchorage itself should be approached with caution.

(10) The pilots attached to the ports will be acquainted with the regulations to be followed.

BRITISH EMPIRE.

Signals to be made by vessels approaching ports when inconvenienced by searchlights.

No. 75 (third publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 2 of 1914), are republished:—

Any vessel approaching a port in the British Empire when searchlight are being worked, and finding that they interfere with her safe navigation, may make use of the following signals, either singly or combined:—

(a) By flashing lamp, four short flashes followed by one long flash.

Whenever possible, both flashing lamp signals and sound signals should be used.

On these signals being made, the searchlights will be worked, as far as circumstances will permit, so as to cause the least inconvenience, being either extinguished, raised, or altered in direction.

The signals should not be used without real necessity, as unless the vessel is actually in the rays of a searchlight it is impossible to know which searchlight is affected.

Note.

These signals are designed to assist mariners and do not render the Government liable in any way.

ADMIRALTY PUBLICATIONS.

The introduction of TRUE bearings.

No. 76 (third publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 4 of 1914), are republished:—

Former Notices.—No. 1619 of 1911, No. 2 of 1912 and No. 3 of 1913 (This office No. 61 of 1912.)

Notice is hereby given that TRUE bearings are being gradually introduced in all Admiralty Publications.

Details of the new system are as follows:—

(a) On charts:

A new pattern compass is being gradually introduced which enables True Bearings to be laid off on the chart in addition to Magnetic Bearings. (See diagram overleaf.)

The compass consists of two graduated circles, clearly separated from each other.

The outer circle is a True compass, graduated from 0° (True North) to 360°, measured clockwise.

The inner circle is a magnetic compass, graduated in points and in degrees from 0° to 90° as heretofore.

The bearings of leading and clearing marks, etc., are given both True and Magnetic, and a note to this effect is placed in the title of the charts. (See overleaf.)

Example.—The bearing N. 62° W. true, with a Variation of 8° Westerly, will be shown thus: 298° (N. 54° W. Mag.).

(b) In Sailing Directions :

Bearings will be given as True only, in degrees from  $0^{\circ}$  (North) to  $360^{\circ}$ , measured clockwise; and a note to this effect will be given in the title page, in the Advertisement, and in the page immediately preceding page 1 of all volumes of Sailing Directions. The Variation will continue to be given on each page as at present, so that Magnetic bearings may be obtained when required.

This alteration only applies to new editions of Sailing Directions and their Supplements. In the case of Sailing Directions in which Magnetic bearings are still given, Magnetic bearings will be given in their Supplements.

(c) In Notices to Mariners :

All bearings are given both True and Magnetic in a similar manner to that adopted on charts.

(d) Lists of Lights :

Bearings will be given in all Parts of the List of Lights for 1914 as True only, in degrees from  $0^{\circ}$  (North) to  $360^{\circ}$ , measured clockwise.

On each page of the List of Lights, a footnote is placed stating that all bearings are TRUE FROM SEAWARD.

PATTERN OF COMPASS.

No. 77 (third publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 5 of 1914), are republished:—

Position.—At a distance of 13 cables,  $264^{\circ}$  ( $S. 88^{\circ} W.$  Mag.), from Taku light vessel.

Lat.  $38^{\circ} 56' 40'' N.$ , long.  $117^{\circ} 51' 15'' E.$ , on chart No. 598,

Description.—Hulk Tienching.

Remarks.—All vessels waiting to cross the bar must anchor northward of a line drawn between the Customs hulk and Taku light-vessel, and within a reasonable distance of the former.

The anchorage for vessels of heavy draught which discharge outside the bar is the same as formerly, but they must anchor as near the Customs hulk as their draft will safely permit.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 527 Medl.—The 12th February 1914.—It is hereby notified for general information that the Governor in Council is pleased to make the following rules for the management, admission and training of students in the medical schools in Bengal in supersession of all previous rules on the subject :—

SECTION I.—GENERAL.

The management of the Government medical schools in Bengal in all matters is vested in the Superintendents of the schools under the general control of the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, Bengal.

2. There are at present two Government medical schools in the Presidency, viz.—

Names of Government schools. (1) The Campbell Medical School at Calcutta, and (2) The Dacca Medical School at Dacca.

3. Both men and women are trained in these schools and granted licenses to practise Medicine and Surgery. The passed students are authorized to style themselves—

L. M. P. (Camp), i.e., Licensed Medical Practitioner of the Campbell Medical School; or

L. M. P. (Dacca), i.e., Licensed Medical Practitioner of the Dacca Medical School.

Length of course. 4. The course of study in the schools extends over four years.

5. The session commences on the 16th of June each year. Students must join on the opening day of the session. In special cases a student may be permitted to join within a fortnight of the commencement of the session, provided he is able to satisfy the Superintendent that the delay was unavoidable.

6. The number of students in each school is limited as follows :—

In the Campbell Medical School	...	...	300
.. Dacca Medical School	...	...	200

But to guard against excessive depletion by casualties of all kinds, the Superintendents may begin the session with 15 per cent. over the standard number.

Number of students admitted.

SECTION II.—ADMISSION.

7. Candidates for admission to the schools must produce the following certificates :—

(1) Certificate of general education.—Certificate of having passed the Matriculation examination or an examination equivalent thereto or the B Final examination or any higher examination in Arts or Science of an Indian University.

NOTE—(a) School Final examination for Indian schools and High School and Scholarship examination for European schools are accepted as equivalent to Matriculation examination.

(b) Ordinarily certificates from the Calcutta University only are accepted; but if a candidate can show that he is a resident of Bengal or is acquainted with the Bengali language, a certificate from any other University may be accepted.

[Exceptions.—(a) In special cases, and with the sanction of the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, a candidate may be accepted for admission on his producing satisfactory evidence of his having passed the Matriculation or any examination recognized as equivalent thereto, in two subjects, of which English must be one.

(b) A woman candidate who is unable to produce any of the above certificates may be admitted on producing one of the following certificates, if the Superintendent is satisfied after examining her that she is sufficiently intelligent and educated to study Medicine efficiently:—

- (i) certificate of having passed the Middle English Scholarship examination, or
- (ii) certificate of satisfactory completion of the full course in a Middle English School, or
- (iii) certificate of having passed the Primary examination held at the end of standard VI under the vernacular scheme of education, and of being qualified in English up to that stage, or
- (iv) certificate from an Inspector of Schools of having passed the Annual Class examination held at the end of standard VI in a recognized High English or Middle English school, in all the subjects of the prescribed curriculum, including English.]

(2) Certificate of character—From a Deputy Magistrate or a gentleman of equal position, or from the Principal or Head Master of the college or school in which the candidate last studied.

(3) Certificate of age.—Male candidates shall not be under 16 or over 23 years of age, and women candidates must be over 17 years of age, before commencing their studies.

8. Every woman candidate must produce a certificate of residence and respectability, signed by a Government officer, not below the rank of a Deputy Magistrate, serving in the district in which the candidate ordinarily resides, or by some other authority satisfactory to the Superintendent. The certificate should invariably be countersigned by the Magistrate of the district.

Certificate of residence and respectability required of women candidates.

9. If there are more candidates than vacancies, preference is ordinarily given to those who are natives of the Presidency and who possess better educational qualifications.

10. An application for admission into the medical schools should be submitted in Form A appended to these rules.

Form of application.

11. The application with the certificates referred to in rules 7 and 8 must reach the Superintendent's office on or before the 1st of June each year, or within 10 days of the publication of the result of the Matriculation examination.

12. Candidates selected for admission must appear before the Superintendent on the 15th of June or on any date notified by the Superintendent for examination as to their fitness for the study of Medicine.

13. All women students of the Campbell Medical School are required to reside in the Lady Elliot Hostel. If, therefore, any woman student is requested by the Ladies Committee to leave the hostel, she will automatically cease to be a student in the Campbell Medical School.

SECTION III.—FEES.

14. Every student, on admission to the first-year class, must pay a license fee of Rs. 10, a sports fee of Rs. 2, an entrance fee of Rs. 2 and a school fee of Rs. 4 for the month of June.

15. Muhammadan students are required to pay only such portion of the school fees as cannot be contributed by the Mohsin Fund.

16. Government scholars and free-studentship-holders are exempted from the payment of school fees.

NOTE.—The midwifery fee is included in the school fee of Rs. 4.

17. No fees are charged from women students either on admission or tuition.

18. School fees must be paid in advance on or before the 15th of each month, failing which the student will be liable to pay a fine to be fixed by the Superintendent or each day's delay. Should the 15th of a month fall on a Sunday or on a recognized holiday of the schools, the school fees will be received without fine on the re-opening day, except in the case of the Summer and the Durga Puja vacations.

19. A student, whose name has been removed from the school registers for non-payment of fees, may be re-admitted at the beginning of the next session into the class to which he belonged, on paying a re-admission fee of Rs. 4 (or Rs. 2 in case of a Muhamadan student) if his conduct and attendance while in the school have been good.

20. A first-year student, who is removed from the school for failure at the school test examination, or who leaves during the session without the permission of the Superintendent, may be re-admitted at the beginning of the next session; but he must pay all the fees required of a new candidate. He will not be eligible to compete for the scholarships and free-studentships that are open to first-year students. He will, however, be eligible for the privileges common to all in subsequent years.

21. Students rusticated may be re-admitted after their period of punishment is over.

22. Second, third or fourth-year students, who have failed once in the annual examination, may be retained in the same class for another year on paying the usual monthly school fees. If they, however, leave the school without the Superintendent's permission and ask for re-admission, they must pay a special fee of Rs. 10, and will also be required to pass the necessary test examination before the 15th June prior to their readmission.

23. The Superintendent can refuse re-admission to or dismiss any student on account of incompetence or misconduct.

24. No fees paid and credited in the school books can be refunded under any circumstances, except in the case of a student who has been awarded a scholarship or free-studentship.

SECTION IV.—SCHOLARSHIPS AND FREE-STUDENTSHIPS.

25. The following scholarships and free-studentships are tenable by the men students at the schools. Only natives of the province are entitled to these:—

NAME OF SCHOOL.		First-year class.	Second-year class.	Third-year class.	Fourth-year class.
Campbell Medical School.	Scholarships ...	9 of Rs. 5 each	9 of Rs. 5 each	9 of Rs. 5 each	9 of Rs. 5 each.
	Free-studentships	9	9	9	9
Dacca Medical School.	Scholarships ...	6 of Rs. 5 each	6 of Rs. 5 each	6 of Rs. 5 each	6 of Rs. 5 each.
	Free-studentships	6	6	6	6

26. Thirty Government scholarships are available for women students at the Campbell Medical School, and 26 at the Dacca Medical School. The value of a Government scholarship is Rs. 10 a month.

Besides those given by Government, scholarships given by District Boards, Municipalities, Countess of Dufferin Fund and other approved associations or individuals are tenable at these schools.

A list of these scholarships is given in Appendix B.

NOTE.—As a condition of the grant of a Government scholarship, the student will be required to give a written undertaking signed by her father or guardian to the effect that she will serve Government or a local authority for a period not exceeding four years, if required to do so by the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals.

27. Scholarships are awarded to first-year students in order of merit on the basis of the certificates of general education, as stated in the admission rules. Ordinarily no scholarship will be awarded to any first-year student who has not passed the Matriculation or any higher examination in Arts or Science of an Indian University. Scholarships are distributed to the second and fourth-year students on the results of the annual examination, and to the third-year students on the result of the first qualifying examination, irrespective of their certificates of general education.

28. One special scholarship of Rs. 15 shall be awarded annually to a poor student of first-year class by the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, Bengal. Preference will be given to a member of depressed class. Subject to the scholarship-holder's good conduct and satisfactory progress and poverty, these scholarships are tenable for four years.

29. Free-studentships are awarded at the discretion of the Superintendent to the really deserving students requiring financial assistance.

30. Scholarships and free-studentships are tenable in the first-year class from the beginning of the session to the 31st March following, and in other classes from 1st April to the 31st March.

31. Scholarships and free-studentships are liable to forfeiture at the discretion of the Superintendent for misconduct, want of progress, irregular attendance or failure to show satisfactory results at subsequent examinations.

32. A list of the prizes and medals available at the Campbell and the Dacca Medical Schools and the conditions on which they can be obtained are given in Medals and prizes.

Appendix C.

SECTION V.—TRANSFER OF STUDENT TO OTHER MEDICAL SCHOOLS.

Transfers.

33. Transfers are allowed only at the beginning of a session and under special circumstances.

34. A student applying for transfer should submit his application to the Superintendent of the school to which he is attached, who on receiving the application will satisfy himself—

- (1) that the applicant's conduct in the school has been good;
- (2) that he has successfully passed the examination that he should have passed in the previous session; and
- (3) that he possesses such a certificate of general education as is accepted by the school to which he wishes to be transferred.

35. The Superintendent will, if these conditions are satisfied, forward the application to the Superintendent of the school the student is desirous of joining, with his recommendation, and, on receiving sanction from the latter, will grant the certificate of transfer to the applicant.

SECTION VI.—DISCIPLINE AND PUNISHMENTS.

36. For the maintenance of discipline, the punishments set forth in the rules immediately below shall be enforced at the discretion of the Superintendents of the schools according to the nature of the offence.

Discipline.

37. The punishments are verbal reprimand, written reprimand in the order-book, extra duty, fine, stoppage of leave, deprivation of scholarship or free-studentship, rustication and expulsion from the school.

Punishments.

38. Expulsion from the school shall be enforced for offences of a heinous nature involving disgraceful and dishonourable conduct, or persistent and wilful infringement of the school rules, or for gross insubordination and disrespect to the constituted authorities of the school.

39. When a student is expelled, a full report of his case, with as much information as may be available for his identification, should be submitted to the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, who will take measures to prevent the student's admission into any other medical

SECTION VII.—ATTENDANCE AND LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

40. The Superintendent shall publish for general information a programme of the lectures of each teacher at the commencement of each session.
41. Second, third and fourth-year students are required to be present in the wards of the hospital at 6-30 A.M. in summer and at 7-30 A.M. in winter for clinical duties and instruction. They must not absent themselves from the ward without the permission of the medical officer in charge.
42. Each dresser or clinical clerk will have charge of a certain number (not less than six in the surgical wards and six in the medical wards) of cases and must write out a full history of such cases, with their daily symptoms, treatment, etc., in the form prescribed and read it to the teacher. He should enter such cases with the corrections made by the teacher in his case-book, and will have to read them and be examined on them before leaving the ward at the end of his term of duty. The teacher, when granting a certificate of attendance at hospital to a student, should specially mention, for the information of the Superintendent, the number of cases in his ward satisfactorily recorded by the student.
43. The dressers have, in addition, to dress the cases allotted to them under the supervision of the medical officer in charge.
44. All the students attending the hospital will have to take their turn of day and night duty, as may be arranged by the medical officer attached to the ward. During such time they will be responsible for the proper working of the ward, and they must not leave it until relieved by their successors or until permitted to do so by the officer in charge. Any infringement of the hospital rules by a student will be reported by the medical officer to the Superintendent.
45. The total amount of leave admissible to a student, including regular vacation, casual leave, leave on private affairs or on account of sickness, is limited to 72 days in a year.
46. Not more than 30 days' leave shall be granted to a student at a time except on medical certificate.
47. The regular vacation leave shall always be notified in school orders. These are—
- |  |     |     |          |
|--|-----|-----|----------|
| (a) The long summer vacation from the 15th April to the 15th June, both days inclusive | ... | ... | 62 days. |
| (b) The Durga Puja vacation—a period of  | ... | ... | 21 „     |
| (c) The Christmas vacation—a period of   | ... | ... | 11 „     |
48. For regular vacation leave students will be divided into two batches—A and B. Batch A will go on leave for the first half of each regular vacation, batch B meanwhile remaining on duty in the wards. On the return of batch A, batch B will go on leave for the second half of the vacation, batch A taking up duty in the wards.
49. No leave except leave on medical certificate shall be granted to a student—
- when he is placed on special duty in the wards,
  - when he is undergoing any punishment,
  - when there is any matter pending in connection with which he has been directed to appear before his teacher or before the Superintendent,
  - when he is on duty during the regular vacations, or
  - to extend regular vacation leave.
50. No student is allowed to absent himself from the hospital without obtaining, in the first instance, the recommendation of the teacher under whom he may be working, and then the sanction of the Superintendent.
51. Any student who absents himself from school without leave for a period of more than one month will be liable to dismissal under order of the Superintendent.
52. A student overstaying the authorised vacation leave or absenting himself immediately before the commencement of the leave, without a medical certificate (vide rule 58) or other good cause approved of by the Superintendent, will be liable to one of the following punishments at the discretion of the Superintendent—

- (i) fine up to one rupee for each day's absence;
- (ii) forfeiture of all claim to future vacation leave;
- (iii) deprivation of scholarship or free-studentship, if any;
- (iv) a withholding of the usual certificate for hospital or dispensary attendance.

Absence without leave.

53. Scholarship-holders absent without leave will forfeit their scholarships for the days they are absent.

54. A student who absents himself from classes or hospital duty shall, except in case of sickness or sanctioned leave, be liable to pay a fine at the discretion of the Superintendent for each absence.

Unauthorised absence of all students.

55. Should it be apparent to the Superintendent that any students have combined to stay away in order either to defy or to defeat discipline, such offenders will be liable to the severest punishment under rules 36 to 38.

56. On no account will any student be certified as having attended hospital or receive the benefit of promotion or be admitted to the Diploma examination who is absent from hospital on leave for more than 72 days in the year as counted from the 1st April.

57. No student shall on any account be certified as having completed his course of instruction, and receive the benefit of promotion or be admitted to a Diploma examination who has not attended at least 75 per cent. of all lectures and demonstrations on all subjects embraced in such examination.

58. Except in the circumstances referred to in the concluding portion of this rule, all medical certificates in support of absence from classes or hospital duty must be from a medical officer in Government employ, and they must be forwarded to the Superintendent through the teacher within three days of the date the student states that he was ill: when delayed beyond that time, the student will be considered as having been absent without leave. If a student happens to be in the interior of a district where no Government medical officer is available within a reasonable distance, a certificate from a qualified private medical practitioner may be accepted.

SECTION VIII.—COURSE OF STUDY.

Curriculum of study.

59. The course of study shall be as follows:—

First year.	Second year.	Third year.	Fourth year.
Anatomy, including Dissections.	Anatomy, including Dissections.	Medicine and Therapeutics.	Medicine and Therapeutics.
Physiology ...	Physiology	Surgery	Surgery.

		In and out-patient practice.	Vaccination.
			In and out-patient practice.

* For those students only who failed to pass in those subjects at the examination held at the end of their first-year class.

60. The curriculum of study may be modified according to the resources of the school on the recommendation of the Superintendent and with the sanction of the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals.

61. Each student will be required to dissect the whole human body at least once during his first two years of study. During the third and fourth years of study each student shall be required to assist with his own hands at not less than six post-mortem examinations. All students shall, as far as possible, be made to attend all post-mortem examinations.

62. Each student shall have practical instruction in vaccination.

SECTION IX.—EXAMINATIONS.

63. —(a) The class examinations of first and third-year students for promotion are held by the teachers at the close of the session. Students who fail to gain one-third of the marks in each subject will not be promoted to the second and fourth-year classes, respectively.

Class examinations—first and third-year students.

(b) Monthly examinations of the second-year students are held by the teachers in all subjects of that year's course; and no student shall be admitted to the first qualifying examination, unless he has gained in the aggregate 33 per cent. of the marks in each subject in the whole series of these examinations.

Monthly examinations—second-year students.

(c) A test examination of fourth-year students is held by the teachers towards the end of the year in all the subjects of that year's course. No student shall be admitted to the second qualifying examination unless he has gained in the aggregate 33 per cent. of the marks in each of those subjects.

Test examinations—fourth-year students.

This and the preceding clause may be relaxed by the Superintendent of the school in the case of a student who through illness or other cause has been prevented from gaining the prescribed percentage of marks, especially if his class examinations have been satisfactory.

(d) Qualifying examinations, viz., the examinations for the Licensed Medical Practitioner's certificate are two in number, a first or junior and a second or final. They are held at the end of the second and fourth year of study, respectively. These examinations are written, oral and practical. The following are the subjects of examination and the marks allotted to each subject (the detailed syllabus of instruction and examination is given in Appendix D) :—

Pathology	...	...	...	150	150	300
Hygiene and Vaccination	...	...	...	100	100	200

* The students who successfully pass in Chemistry and Physics in the examination held at the end of their first-year class are not required to appear in these subjects.

64. Students who obtain not less than 50 per cent. of the total marks in each subject shall be judged to have passed, provided they have obtained not less than 50 per cent. in the oral and practical portions. Students obtaining 75 per cent. of marks or upwards in the Second or Final Examination are to be considered to have passed with honours, those obtaining 66 per cent. to be placed in the first and the rest in the second division.

65. The qualifying examinations for the Campbell and the Dacca Medical Schools shall be held at Calcutta and Dacca respectively. The questions for the written portion of the examinations shall be set by the Superintendent of one of the schools, in rotation, and the answer-papers examined and marked by the teachers of each school, also in rotation. The oral and practical parts of the examinations shall be conducted by the Professors of the Medical College, Calcutta, in respect of the students of the Campbell Medical School, and by a Special Examining Board, constituted for the purpose, in respect of the students of the Dacca Medical School.

66. The teachers of medical schools who examine and mark the written answer-papers of the students shall be allowed a fee of rupee one per paper.

67. A first-year student who fails to get promotion is removed from the school. He may, however, be re-admitted under exceptional circumstances at the discretion of the Superintendent.

Penalty for failure at the examination.

68. Students who fail for the first time at either of the qualifying examinations for the Licensed Medical Practitioner's certificate, or at the class examinations, shall be remanded for another year to their respective classes. Students who fail twice in any of the abovementioned examinations shall be removed from the school.

69. A student who fails at the first qualifying examination in one subject only may be provisionally promoted to the third-year class and allowed to present himself for a special examination in that subject at the end of three months.

Re-examination.

A student who fails in the second qualifying examination in not more than half the subjects, and who obtains at least 33 per cent. aggregate in the examination, or in that part of the examination in which he had to appear, will be considered as having passed in those subjects in which he obtained the requisite number of marks, and may, at the discretion of the Superintendent, be allowed to present himself for re-examination in the remaining subjects at the end of three months. In qualifying examinations grace marks can only be given by the examiners and not by the Superintendent.

70. After the result of the second qualifying examination has been decided, the names of successful students, arranged in order of merit, shall be reported to the Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals for publication in the Government Gazette.

Publication of the result of the Final examination.

Pass certificate.

71. Successful students will receive a certificate or license in the form given in Appendix E.

72. An applicant for a duplicate copy of his pass certificate must pay a fee of Rs. 2 and produce before the Superintendent of the School from which he passed an affidavit sworn in a magisterial court, showing—

Duplicate copy of pass certificate.

- (1) His name and residence.
- (2) Father's name and residence.
- (3) Date on which he passed the second qualifying examination and obtained the certificate.
- (4) Name of the school from which he passed.
- (5) Circumstances in which he lost the certificate.

The affidavit should also show that due search has been made for the certificate, that there is no hope of its recovery, and that the affidavit has been made by the applicant with a view to the Superintendent to issue a duplicate in his favour.

5. Six silver medals of the value of Rs. 13-4 each shall be annually awarded to the fourth-year student who obtains the highest marks in each of the following subjects, viz.—Surgery, Medicine, Midwifery, Medical Jurisprudence, Pathology and Hygiene, at the Final Qualifying examination.
6. Three silver medals of the value of Rs. 13-4 each shall be annually awarded to the second-year student who obtains the highest marks in each of the following subjects, viz.—Anatomy, Physiology and Materia Medica, at the Junior Qualifying examination.
7. One silver medal of the value of Rs. 13-4 shall be annually awarded to the first-year student who obtains the highest marks in Chemistry at the Junior Qualifying examination.

PRIZES.

8. The Maharajah Scindia of Gwalior Prize of Rs. 6 shall be awarded annually for general proficiency to the fourth-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks at the Second or Final Qualifying examination.
9. Two pocket instrument cases of the value of Rs. 20 each shall be annually awarded to the two second-year students who have acted as prosectors during the year.
10. Two copies of the late Dr. Zahiruddin's book on "Surgery" in Bengali are presented annually to the two second-year students (one man and one woman) who obtain the highest marks in Anatomy in the First or Junior Qualifying examination in memory of the author by his son.
11. Three certificates of honour shall be annually awarded in each subject of examination to the next three most meritorious students of the fourth, second and first-year classes after the medalists defined in paragraphs, 5, 6 and 7 above, and to the three most meritorious students of the third and first-year classes on the combined results of the Progress and Sessional examinations. Should a smaller number than three students in each year be really deserving, then that number of certificates only will be awarded.

the following subjects and passes the Final Examination and obtains license to practise—

- (1) Anatomy (including rudiments of Physiology);
- (2) Surgery (including Operative Surgery and Medicine);
- (3) Midwifery;
- (4) Medicine; and
- (5) Medical Jurisprudence:

Provided that to render a candidate eligible she must have obtained—

- (1) a minimum of 60 per cent. marks in each of the above subjects in which she was examined, and
- (2) a minimum average of all subjects combined of 70 per cent. of the total number of marks obtainable.

13. Kadambini Prize Medal (silver) of the value of Rs. 17-8 shall be annually awarded to the fourth-year woman student who passes the Final examination of the Campbell Medical School and secures the highest aggregate marks among the women candidates, without any distinction of caste or religion, provided she is a native of India. No one with any trace of foreign or mixed descent (whether European, Eurasian, African, American or other Asiatic than Indian) will be eligible for it.

NOTE.—Medals, prizes and certificates of Honour will only be awarded to students who pass in all the subjects of the examination at the same time.

DACCA MEDICAL SCHOOL.

MEDALS.

1. A gold medal of the value of Rs. 35 shall be annually awarded for general proficiency to the fourth-year student of the Dacca Medical School who obtains the highest aggregate marks in all subjects at the Second or Final Qualifying examination, provided that his conduct has been uniformly good.

2. A silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be awarded annually to the third-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in all subjects at the Sessional examination, provided that his conduct has been uniformly good.

3. A silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be annually awarded to the second-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks at the First or Junior Qualifying examination, excluding Chemistry, provided that his conduct has been uniformly good.

4. A silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be annually awarded to the first-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in all subjects at the Sessional examination and the Junior Qualifying examination in Chemistry, provided that his conduct has been uniformly good.

5. Six silver medals of the value of Rs. 13 each shall be annually awarded to the fourth-year students who obtain the highest marks in each of the following subjects, viz., (1) Surgery, (2) Medicine, (3) Midwifery, (4) Medical Jurisprudence, (5) Pathology, (6) Hygiene at the Final Qualifying examination.

6. Three silver medals of the value of Rs. 13 each shall be annually awarded to the second-year students who obtain the highest marks in each of the following subjects, viz., (1) Anatomy, (2) Physiology, (3) Materia Medica at the Junior Qualifying examination.

7. One silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be annually awarded to the first-year student who obtains the highest marks in Chemistry at the Junior Qualifying examination.

PRIZES.

Two pocket instrument cases of the value of Rs. 20 each shall be annually awarded to the two second-year students who have acted as prosecutors during the year.

Three certificates of honour shall be annually awarded in each subject of examination to the next three most meritorious students of the fourth, second and first-year classes after the medalists defined in paragraphs 5, 6 and 7 above, and to the three most meritorious students of the third and first-year classes on the results of the Sessional examinations. Should a smaller number than three students in each year be really deserving, then that number of certificates only will be awarded,

MEDALS AND PRIZES OPEN TO WOMEN STUDENTS OF THE DACCA MEDICAL SCHOOL.

MEDALS.

1. One silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be annually awarded to the woman student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in Junior Qualifying examinations among the women students, provided she obtains not less than 66 per cent. aggregate marks.

2. One silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be awarded to the woman student who obtains highest aggregate marks in the Final Qualifying examination among the women students, provided she obtains not less than 66 per cent. aggregate marks.

3. One silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be awarded to the woman student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in Midwifery and Gynæcology in Final Qualifying examination among the women students, provided she obtains not less than 75 per cent. aggregate marks.

4. One silver medal shall be annually awarded to the first-year woman student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in Sessional examination among the women students, provided she obtains 66 per cent. aggregate marks.

5. One silver medal shall be annually awarded to the third-year woman student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in Sessional examination among the women students, provided she obtains 66 per cent. aggregate marks.

PRIZES.

Two special prizes of Rs. 10 each shall be awarded annually to women students for good conduct, progress and regularity of attendance in the class. Preference will be given to students living in the Government Boarding House for women students attached to Dacca Medical School.

NOTE.—Medals, prizes and certificates of honour will only be awarded to students who pass in all subjects of the examination at the same time.

APPENDIX D.

Detailed Syllabus of Instruction and Examination for the Medical Schools of Bengal.

N.B.—Instruction and examination in all subjects shall be conducted from a simple and practical standpoint, avoiding theories, and abstruse questions, and being limited to well ascertained facts of practical every-day importance, with special reference to tropical conditions.

The number of systematic lectures to be given is noted against each subject. The number of tutorial classes should be one per week in each subject and two per week in the practical classes in Pathology and Physiology.

ANATOMY.

(Number of Lectures—70.)

I.—OSTEOLOGY.

General description of the skeleton. Brief description of development. Attachment of muscles and ligaments.

II.—JOINTS

The articular surfaces. Ligaments and accessory structures. Brief description of their movements.

III.—MUSCLES AND FASCIAE.

Origin, relations, insertion and tendons. Nervous and vascular supply. Actions.

IV.—CIRCULATORY SYSTEM.

Heart.—Surface-marking, position, size, shape, pericardium, cavities, valves and openings. Arteries and veins leading from and to it. Nerve supply.

Arteries.—Origin, course, branches, and anastomosis and areas they supply. Relation of main arteries.

Veins.—Origin, course, branches and anastomosis. Relations of main veins.

Lymph Vessels (main).—The area they drain, course and termination. Lymph glands in their course.

V.—RESPIRATORY SYSTEM.

Larynx.—Brief description of the cartilages, glottis and vocal cords. Nerve supply.

Thyroid Gland.—Lobes, vascular supply.

Trachea and Bronchi.—Relation and subdivisions, surface-marking.

Lungs.—Surface-markings, pleuræ. Lobes of lungs. Borders. Nervous and vascular supply.

VI.—DIGESTIVE SYSTEM.

Mouth.—Dentition. Temporary and permanent. Eruption of teeth. Tongue, muscles, nervous and vascular supply. Salivary glands. Pharynx. Tonsils, soft palate. Nervous and vascular supply. Oesophagus. Length and relations.

Stomach.—Surface marking, walls, shape, size and relations. Cardiac and pyloric openings. Nervous and blood supply.

Small Intestine.—Duodenum. Jejunum and Ileum. Peritoneal and other relations. Nervous and blood supply.

Large Intestine.—Cæcum. Appendix. Colon. Sigmoid flexure rectum and anus. Length. Blood supply. Peritoneal and other relations and nervous supply.

Liver.—Surface-marking, borders, surfaces, relations, nervous and blood supply. Gall bladder.

Spleen.—Surface-marking, surfaces, borders, relations, nervous and blood supply.

VII.—URINARY ORGANS.

Kidney.—Position, surface-markings, size, shape, relations, capsule, hilum, borders. Suprarenal capsules. Ureters. Course and relations.

Bladder (urinary).—Position, size, shape, peritoneal reflections. Interior.

Urethra.—Structures seen on its walls. Composition of the walls. Nervous supply of urinary organs.

VIII.—REPRODUCTIVE SYSTEM.

Penis.—Prepuce, glans, corpora cavernosa and spongiosum, nervous and vascular supply.

Prostate.—Capsule and relations. Male perinæum. Fasciæ. Relations. Nervous and blood supply.

Scrotum.—Layers.

Spermatic Cord.—Structures contained in relations, nervous and blood supply.

Testis and Epididymis.—Position and coverings (tunica-vaginalis).

Female Uterus.—Body and cervix, position, peritoneal reflections, surfaces, ligaments and vascular supply.

Fallopian Tubes.—Course, ligaments and blood supply and nervous supply.

Ovaries.—Relations and blood supply. Their surfaces and borders. Nervous supply.

Vagina.—Wall, fornices and relations. Nervous supply.

IX.—BRAIN AND CENTRAL NERVOUS SYSTEM.

Meninges, blood supply. Venous sinuses. Fissures and lobes of the cerebrum. Blood supply. Short description of the cerebellum. Pons and medulla. Brief description of the grey matter. The ventricles. Brief description of the different regions of the spinal cord.

X.—PERIPHERAL NERVOUS SYSTEM.

Origin of cranial nerves, course, branches and distribution. Origin, course, branches and distribution of the peripheral nervous system. Brief description of brachial and cervical and sacral and lumbar plexuses. Relation of main nerve trunks and their distribution.

XI.—SYMPATHETIC SYSTEM.

XII.—ORGANS OF SPECIAL SENSE.

Orbit and Eye.—Walls, contents, the muscles acting on the eyeball, their nerve supply, the vessels and nerves found in the orbit. Lachrymal apparatus.

Nose.—Formation of the walls and the septum. Structures found on the outer walls, the turbinated bones, the meatuses and the openings into them.

Ear.—External ear direction, lining, membrana tympani. Middle ear—ossicles. Openings on its walls. Eustachian tube. Internal ear—short description. Auditory N. Distribution.

PRACTICAL ANATOMY.

BOOKS RECOMMENDED.

Gray's Anatomy, Cunningham's and Mustafi's.

MATERIA MEDICA AND THERAPEUTICS.

(Number of Lectures—70.)

1. Definition of—

- (1) the various technical terms used in describing the action and preparations of medicinal agents and drugs, with examples on each;
- (2) the uses and methods of preparations of the more commonly used official and non-official pharmacopoeial preparations, e.g., tincturæ, pilulæ, gaulzes, gargarismata, pigmenta, etc.
- (3) apothecaries' scales of weights and measures and signs;

2. The source, preparation, composition, dosage, pharmacological action, therapeutic use and incompatibility (physical, chemical and pharmaceutical) of the more commonly used drugs and their preparations in the British Pharmacopœia, and the indigenous drugs in the Indian and Colonial addendum..

PRACTICAL.

- 3. Recognition of crude drugs and their commoner pharmaceutical preparations, by their sensible qualities.
- 4. Reading and writing of prescriptions, labelling and marking doses and writing directions.
- 6. Practical pharmacy and dispensing, including labelling.

PHYSICS AND CHEMISTRY.

(Number of Lectures—40.)

A.—PHYSICS.

I.—HEAT.

Sources of heat.

Effects of heat on bodies.

Mercurial thermometer; maximum and minimum thermometer; clinical thermometer.

Simple facts relating to conduction and absorption and reflection of heat.

Combustion; Davy lamp.

II.—LIGHT.

Sources of light.

Simple facts relating to reflection, refraction and dispersion of light.

Plane and concave mirrors.

Double convex and concave lenses.

Prisms.

Simple and compound microscopes.

Eye as an organ of vision: long and short sights, their causes and rectification.

III.—ELECTRICITY.

Production of electricity by friction.

Two kinds of electricity.

Electric induction; electrophorus: Voss's machine.

Gold leaf electroscope.

Leyden jar.

Effects of frictional electricity.

Electric conductors.

Production of electricity by chemical action.

Voltaic cell.

Electrolysis.

Electro-magnet.

Galvanometer.

Induction of currents; magneto-electric machine.

B—CHEMISTRY.

Chemical and physical changes.

Indestructibility of matter.

Elements and compounds.

Chemical symbols, formulæ and equations.

Simple laws of chemical combination.

Difference between mechanical mixtures and chemical compounds.

Simple methods of preparation, and principal properties and simple tests of the following :—

Oxygen; hydrogen; nitrogen; carbon; chlorine; bromine; iodine; sulphur; phosphorus; ammonia; nitric acid; carbon monoxide; carbon dioxide; marsh gas; hydrochloric acid; hydrobromic acid; hydrotic acid; sulphur dioxide; sulphuric acid; sulphuretted hydrogen; oxides and sulphides of arsenic; boric acid; hydrocyanic acid.

General study of water, air, oxides, bases and acids.

General properties of the following metals, and the preparation, properties and simple tests of their undermentioned compounds :—

Potassium, its hydroxide, nitrate, chlorate, iodide, bromide permanganate and cyanide.

Sodium, its hydroxide, carbonate, bicarbonate, chloride, sulphate and phosphate.

Calcium, its oxide and hydroxide, carbonate and chloride.

Magnesium, its oxide, carbonate and sulphate.

Zinc, its oxide, chloride and sulphate.

Copper, its oxides and sulphate.

Mercury, its oxides and chlorides.

Lead, its oxides, nitrate and acetate.

Preparation, properties and tests of the following organic compounds used in the Pharmacopœia :—

Alcohol, ether, chloroform; chloral hydrate; acetic acid, oxalic acid, carbonic acid; and such alkaloids as morphine, brucine, strychnine and quinine.

Simple qualitative examination of urine and calculus.

BOOKS RECOMMENDED.

For Physics.—Ganot's "Popular Natural Philosophy."

For Chemistry.—"Manual of Chemistry," by Luff and Candy.

For both Physics and Chemistry (in Bengali).—"Rasayana-Sutra." Parts I and II, by Chuni Lal Bose, M.B., F.C.S.

PHYSIOLOGY.

(Number of Lectures—70.)

I.—HISTOLOGY.

The animal cell. Epithelium. Areolar, fibrous retiform, elastic, adipose and lymphoid tissues. Cartilage and bone. Dentine. Muscle (striped and unstriped). Nerves.

II.—HÆMATOLOGY.

Histology of blood corpuscles. Varieties of leucocytes. Definition of plasma and serum. Chemistry of blood. Phenomena of coagulation.

III.—PHYSIOLOGY OF MUSCLE.

Chemistry of muscle. Physical properties of muscular tissue. Phenomena of muscular contraction. Effects of muscular exercise.

IV.—PHYSIOLOGY OF NERVE.

Classification. Degeneration and regeneration of nerve fibres. Nerve impulse, its velocity and direction. Electrical phenomena of nerves.

V.—FOODS.

Classification. Nitrogenous. Hydrocarbons or fats. Carbohydrates or starches. Inorganic or mineral, with examples. Principles of dietetics. Effects of insufficient or improper diet; excess and starvation.

VI.—CIRCULATORY SYSTEM.

Heart.—Structure of cardiac muscle. The heart as a mechanical apparatus. The cardiac cycle. Action of the valves. Heart sounds. Intra-cardiac pressure. Innervation of the heart. Frequency of action.

Circulation—Of the blood. Histology of the arteries, veins and capillaries. Velocity of the blood-flow. The time of a complete circulation. The pulse. Arterial pressure. Innervation of blood-vessels.

VII.—RESPIRATORY SYSTEM.

Lungs.—Structure and vascular supply. Respiratory muscles. Mechanism of respiration. Nervous mechanism.

Changes in the air and blood in respiration. Effects of respiration on the circulation. Tissue-respiration. Modified respiratory acts. Vital capacity. Apnoea. Dyspnoea and asphyxia.

VIII.—ALIMENTARY SYSTEM.

Mouth.—Teeth. Mastication. Tongue. Function. Salivary glands. Structure. Action and composition of saliva. Innervation of salivary glands.

Pharynx and Oesophagus.—Structure. Mechanism of deglutition.

Stomach.—Small intestine, large intestine, pancreas. Histology. Composition of digestive juices, and bile. Selective action on varying classes of foods. Process of digestion, in stomach, duodenum, small intestine and large intestine. Chyme. Absorption. Composition of faeces. Structure of rectum. Function of sigmoid and rectum. Mechanism of defaecation.

Liver.—Histology. Portal circulation. Hepatic functions.

IX.—LYMPHATIC SYSTEM.

Structure of lymphatic glands and vessels. Composition of lymph. Lymph flow. Chyle. Thoracic Duct.

X.—URINARY SYSTEM.

Kidneys.—Structure and capillary blood supply. Action of glomerular and renal epithelium. Urine. Physical properties and chemical composition. Commoner abnormal constituents.

Bladder.—Structure. Micturition. Nervous mechanism.

XI.—CUTANEOUS SYSTEM.

Skin and its appendages. Structure of. Vascular and nerve supply. Sweat and other glands. Composition of sweat. Functions of skin.

XII.—GENERAL METABOLISM.

Body-heat.—Thermo-taxis mechanism in warm blooded animals.

XIII.—DUCTLESS GLANDS.

Structure and functions of spleen. Thymus. Thyroid. Parathyroids. Adrenals. Pituitary body.

XIV.—NERVOUS SYSTEM.

Brain.—Structure and function of the cerebral convolutions. Localization of cerebral centres.

Structure and functions of basal or central ganglia. Corpora quadrigemina. Mesencephalon. Crura cerebri. Pons Varoli.

Cerebellum.—Structure and functions.

Medulla Oblongata.—Structure and functions. Decussation of fibres. Localization of spinal centres.

Spinal Cord.—Structure. Columns. Function. Localization of spinal centres.

Physiology of Nervous System.—Efferent and afferent course of the motor fibres. Course of the impulses. Sensory fibres. Functions of the cranial nerves. Functions of the spinal nervous system.

Sympathetic System.—Structure and functions.

XV.—ORGANS OF SPECIAL SENSE.

Eye.—Anatomy and histology. Cornea. Sclerotic. Aqueous humor. Iris and ciliary body. Ciliary muscle. Vitreous humor. Choroid. Retina. Macula lutea. Optic disc. Ophthalmoscopic appearances. Sight. The eye as an optical instrument. Mechanism of accommodation. Commoner errors of refraction.

Ear.—Anatomy of middle and internal ear. Hearing. Semicircular canals. Equilibration.

Larynx.—Anatomy and function. The mechanism of phonation and speech.

Special Senses.—Taste and smell. Tactile sensation. Heat and cold. Muscular sense.

XVI.—REPRODUCTIVE ORGANS.

Male.

Testis. Epididymis and vas deferens. Vesiculae seminales. Structure and functions. Semen and spermatozoa.

Female.

Ovaries. Fallopian tubes. Uterus. Structures and functions. Menstruation. Ovulation. Corpus luteum.

Development.—Impregnation. Conception. Implantation and development of ovum. Formation of placenta and foetal coverings. Brief development of foetus and foetal circulation.

Mammary Gland.—Histology and function. Milk. Chemical composition.

XVII.—PRACTICAL PHYSIOLOGY.

Recognition of histological specimens. Staining and mounting of sections.

Use of microscope. Sphygmograph and Manometer. Blood Coagulometer. Blood Alkalimeter. Hemoglobinometer. Hemocytometer.

SURGERY.

(Number of Lectures—70.)

I.—GENERAL SURGICAL PATHOLOGY AND BACTERIOLOGY (ÆTIOLOGY AND SYMPTOMATOLOGY).

1. Local—Inflammation, suppuration, abscess, cellulitis, sinus and fistula. Ulceration, phagedena and gangrene.

2. General and Special Infections.—Sapremia. Pyogenic infections—boil, carbuncle and pyæmia. Cellulitis erysipelas and septicæmia. Coli infections. Anthrax Tetanus. Venereal infections, gonorrhœa, soft chancre and syphilis. Tuberculosis. Mycetoma. Parasitic, 9 filariasis and guinea worm.

3. New Growth.—Innocent. Malignant—carcinoma and sarcoma.

II.—GENERAL SURGERY AND SURGICAL PHYSIOLOGY.

1. Contusions, wounds and burns. Repair. Sutures.
2. Prevention of wound infection. Natural protection. Asepsis. Antisepsis and treatment of local and general sepsis. Vaccines. Anti-sera. Snake-bites anti-venene. Insect stings.
3. Shock. Asphyxia. Treatment.
4. Anaesthetics. Local, general.

III.—SYSTEMATIC SURGICAL INJURIES AND DISEASES (SYMPTOMATOLOGY AND TREATMENT).

1. Skin and its appendages.—Corns, warts, fibroma, sebaceous and dermoid cysts, onychia, ingrowing toe-nail.
2. Vascular System.—Aneurysm and embolism. Varix, phlebitis and thrombosis. Haemorrhage and hæmophilia.
3. Lymphatic System.—Lymphangitis and lymphadenitis.
4. Muscular and Peripheral Nervous Systems.—Rupture of muscles and tendons, tenosynovitis, ganglion, bursitis and bunion. Wounds of nerves and pressure neuritis.

Osseous System.

5. Bones.—Contusions, fractures—varieties. Repair. Special fractures (long bones). Diseases. Periosteitis, osteitis, abscess, necrosis, caries, osteomyelitis, epiphysitis and rickets. Tumours of bone, innocent and malignant.

Joints.—Contusions, sprains and dislocation. Dislocation of special joints. Diseases. Synovitis, acute and chronic, traumatic, pyæmic, rheumatic and gonorrheal. Anchylosis. Loose bodies. Tubercular hip-joint disease as a type. Arthritis.

IV.—REGIONAL SURGICAL INJURIES AND DISEASES (SYMPTOMATOLOGY AND TREATMENT).

1. Head.—Hæmatoma and scalp wounds. Fractures on skull, vertical and basal. Cerebral concussion, compression and irritation. Intra-cranial hæmorrhage. Cerebral laceration. Osteomyelitis. Meningitis. Cerebral tumours.

2. Spine.—Fracture-dislocation. Caries and curvature.

3. Face and Neck.—Common injuries and diseases, rodent ulcer.

4. Larynx and Chest.—Laryngeal obstruction. Tracheotomy. Foreign bodies in air passages. Contusions and wounds of parietes and thoracic viscera. Empyema.

5. Breast.—Galactocele, mastitis and abscess. Tumours.

6. Mouth, Pharynx and Oesophagus.—Stomatitis and cancrumoris. Dental caries and abscess, pyorrhea alveolaris. Glossitis and epithelioma of tongue. Ranula. Peritonsillar abscess. Follicular pharyngitis. Stricture of and foreign bodies in oesophagus.

7. Abdomen.—Parietal contusions and visceral rupture. Penetrating wounds. Peritonitis.

Liver.—Abscess, carcinoma, gallstones.

Stomach and Duodenum.—Ulcer and carcinoma. Subphrenic abscess.

Intestines.—Acute obstruction, varieties. Appendicitis and abscess.

Ulcer: Rectum and Anus.—Polypi. Carcinoma. Stricture. Prolapse. Hæmorrhoids. Ischiorectal abscess and fistula in ano. Fissure.

Hernia.—Inguinal, femoral and umbilical.

Kidneys and Bladder.—Renal calculus and colic. Surgical kidney hydro and pyonephrosis. Floating kidney. Suppression of urine and uræmia. Cystitis, hæmaturia and stone in bladder. Tumours. Enlargement of prostate. Retention of urine.

8. Penis and Scrotum.—Balanitis. Phimosis and paraphimosis. Condylomata. Urethritis. Stricture and sequelæ. Retention and extravasation of urine. Varicocele, hydrocele and hæmatocele, and abscess of tunica vaginalis. Orchitis and epididymitis. Tumours of testis. Elephantiasis scroti.

9. Ear.—Foreign bodies. Otitis externa and media. Mastoiditis. Otorrhea.

10. Orbit and Eye, and its appendages.—Orbital tumours. Stye. Conjunctivitis. Corneal ulcer and foreign bodies. Iritis. Panophthalmitis. Inflammation of uveal tract. Cataract. Glaucoma. Optic neuritis and atrophy. Dacryocystitis.

11. Commoner Deformities.—Spina bifida. Hare lip and cleft palate. Spadias (Epi and Hypo). Knock-knee. Club-foot and flat-foot.

V.—PRACTICAL AND OPERATIVE SURGERY.

1. Clinical cases and case-taking.
2. Minor operations, including simple amputations and intravenous transfusion.
3. Recognition and use of instruments.
4. Bandaging and application of splints.
5. Practical asepsis for operations.
6. Administration of chloroform and artificial respiration.
7. Surgical Anatomy and surface-markings.
8. Clinical microscopy. Preparation, staining and examination of smears for pyogono and streptococci.

MEDICINE.

(Number of Lectures—70.)

ETIOLOGY, SYMPTOMATOLOGY, DIAGNOSIS AND TREATMENT OF THE FOLLOWING DISEASES:—

I.—FEVERS, INFECTIVE AND OTHERWISE.

Plague. Small-pox. Chicken-pox. Measles. Mumps. Diphtheria. Malaria (varieties). Black-water Fever. Enteric. Malta or Undulant Fever. Kala-azar. Trypanosomiasis. Relapsing Fever. Epidemic Cerebro-spinal Meningitis. Dengue. Seven-day or Urban Fever. Rheumatic Fever. Heat-stroke. Influenza. Febricula.

II.—INFECTIVE AND OTHER BOWEL COMPLAINTS.

Dysentery. Cholera. Ptomaine-poisoning. Sprue. Hill Diarrhoea.

III.—INFECTIVE GRANULOMATA.

Syphilis. Yaws. Leprosy. Tubercle.

IV.—DISEASES OF THE CIRCULATORY SYSTEM.

Pericarditis. Endocarditis (varieties). Valvular diseases—(a) Aortic Regurgitation; (b) Aortic Stenosis; (c) Mitral Regurgitation; (d) Mitral Stenosis. Cardiac dilatation. Cardiac hypertrophy. Angina Pectoris. Arteriosclerosis. Thoracic Aneurysm.

V.—DISEASES OF THE RESPIRATORY SYSTEM.

Coryza. Tonsillitis (varieties). Laryngitis. Laryngismus—Stridulus. Pleurisy. Pleural effusions. Bronchitis (acute and chronic). Whooping Cough. Bronchiectasis. Bronchial Asthma. Emphysema. Lobar Pneumonia. Broncho-Pneumonia. Pulmonary Tuberculosis.

VI.—DISEASES OF THE DIGESTIVE SYSTEM.

Gastritis (acute and chronic). Dyspepsia. Dilatation of stomach. Gastric Ulcer. Cancer of stomach. Duodenal Ulcer. Enteritis. Appendicitis. Colitis.

VII.—INTESTINAL PARASITES.

Tape worm. Round and thread worms. Ankylostomiasis.

VIII.—DISEASES OF THE LIVER.

Jaundice (varieties). Hepatitis. Acute Biliary. Cirrhosis. Cirrhosis of liver. (Atrophic and hypertrophic.) Abscess of liver. Cancer of liver. Cholelithiasis.

IX.—DISEASES OF THE PERITONEUM.

Ascitis. Peritonitis (general). Tubercular peritonitis.

X.—DISEASES OF THE KIDNEY.

Hæmaturia. Hæmoglobinuria. Albuminuria. Chyluria. Uræmia. Acute Bright's Disease. Chronic Bright's disease. Chronic interstitial nephritis. Hydronephrosis. Renal Calculi and Colic.

XI.—DISEASES OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

Cerebral affections—Hemiplegia. Cerebral Apoplexy, Embolism and Thrombosis. Tumours and Abscess. Optic Lesions. Epilepsy. Migraine. Bulbar-Paralysis. Hysteria.

Affections of the Spinal Cord.—Myelitis. Paraplegia (Spastic and Ataxic). Anterior Poliomyelitis. Progressive muscular atrophy. Locomotor Ataxy. Disseminated Sclerosis.

Affections of Cranial Peripheral Nerves.—Ocular Palsis. Bell's Paralysis. Peripheral Neuritis. Sciatica. Neuralgia. Tic Doloureux.

XII.—DISEASES OF THE BLOOD AND DUCTLESS GLANDS.

Chlorosis. Pernicious anæmia. Leukæmia. Hodgkin's Disease. Purpura. Henoch's Purpura. Goitre. Exophthalmic Goitre. Splenic Enlargements.

XIII.—INTOXICATIONS.

Alcoholism. Delirium Tremens. Lathyrism. Beri-beri. Epidemic Dropsy (?)

XIV.—CONSTITUTIONAL DISEASES.

XV.—DISEASES OF THE SKIN.

Pityriasis Versicolor. Pityriasis Rubra. Urticaria. Pemphigus. Psoriasis. Eczema. Prurigo. Acne. Herpes-Zoster. Scabies. Dhobie's Itch. Ringworm.

XVI.—PRACTICAL MEDICINE.

1. Clinical cases.—Case-taking.

2. Surface-markings.—Thoracic and abdominal viscera.

3. Urine Analysis.—Qualitative for Phosphates. Urates. Albumen. Sugar.

Quantitative for albumen. Sugar (Carwardine's Saccharometer). Microscopic for urinary deposits.

4. Use of Instruments.—Microscope. Stethoscope. Sphygmograph. Manometer. Stomach tube. Nasal tube. Long rectal tube. Southey's tubes.

5. Aseptic Technique.—Precautions for hypodermic injections and paracentesis.

6. Clinical Hematology.—Use of hæmoglobinometer. Hæmocytometer. (R. and W.) Coagulation test. Collection of blood in Wright's capsules.

7. Clinical Microscopy.—Preparation, staining and examination of blood films. Sputum and other smears. For malarial parasite. Elastic tissue. Tubercle bacillus. Loeffler's bacillus. Fæcal ova and amæbæ.

TEXT-BOOK RECOMMENDED.

Taylor's "Medicine."

MIDWIFERY.

(Number of Lectures—70.)

1. Anatomy of the Pelvis and female generative organs obstetrically considered. Planes and diameters. Inclination of the pelvic axis. Contracted pelvis.

2. Menstruation and ovulation.—Mode of implantation of the ovum. Development of placenta and membranes. Fœtal circulation.

3. Pregnancy.—Clinical course, differential diagnosis and management. Duration and calculation of the probable date of labour.

4. Disorders of Pregnancy.—Pregnancy. Morning sickness. Albuminuria. Displacements of gravid uterus. Moles (carneous and vesicular). Hydramnios. Antepartum hæmorrhage and abortion. Extra-uterine gestation. Intercurrent diseases. Syphilis. Tuberculosis. Heart disease. Renal disease. Eclampsia. Tumours.

5. Normal Labour.—Phenomena and clinical course. Mechanism. Management and aseptic precautions. Twin labour.

6. Obstructed Labour.—Delay in first stage due to (1) maternal abnormalities and (2) fœtal abnormalities. Delay in second stage due to (1) maternal abnormalities and (2) fœtal abnormalities or mispresentations. Diagnosis and management.

7. Complicated Labour.—Anti-partum hæmorrhage. Placenta prævia. Prolapse of cord. Post-partum hæmorrhage (retained or adherent placenta). Eclampsia. Maternal injuries, Rupture of uterus and perinæum. Hæmatoma. Inversion of uterus.

8. Normal Puerperium.—Phenomena, clinical course and management.

IRRIGATION DEPARTMENT.

The 3rd February 1914.

No. 1 Notification.—The following draft of (1) rules and (2) schedule of rates of tolls, which, in exercise of the powers conferred by sections 6 and 11 of the Canals Act, 1864 (Bengal Act V of 1864), the Governor in Council intends to make and fix for the navigable channels of the Magra Hât Drainage scheme, as defined in Notification No. 4, dated the 22nd April 1913 (published at page 634, Part I. of the Calcutta Gazette of the 23rd idem), is published, as required by section 12 of that Act, for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

11. The draft will be taken into consideration on or after the 18th March 1914, and any objection or suggestion which may be received by the undersigned before that date will be duly considered.

H. H. GREEN,

DRAFT RULES FOR THE MAGRA HÂT CHANNELS.

1. Every vessel entering or making use of the Magra Hât channels shall be liable to measurement for the purpose of ascertaining the tolls payable. In case of any reasonable doubt, the persons appointed by the Governor in Council as Collectors of Tolls or Navigation Canal Officers shall have authority to again measure a vessel notwithstanding that it was measured before.

2. Vessels for the purpose of the determination of maundage shall be divided into three classes as follows :—

Class I.—To include all vessels of the usual native types of build known as salties, but not bonâ fide tal (or palm-tree) dongas and not exceeding 50 maunds by canal measurement.

Class II.—To include all other vessels of usual native types of build or cutters.

Class III.—To include all steamers, flats, barges and other square-built boats.

The net maundage of every vessel, whether laden or empty, shall, for the purposes of the Canals Act, 1864, and of these rules be determined by the following measurements :—

CLASS I.

A.—The product of one-quarter the inside length of the vessel, measured along the centre line from stem to stern, multiplied by the interior greatest breadth of the vessel multiplied by three-quarters of the depth, measured from the top of the vessel amidships to the interior bottom of the vessel is to be taken as equal to the number of maunds upon which toll shall be levied.

B.—The measurement of the length to be made in feet, rejecting inches, and of the breadth and depth in feet and quarters of a foot, rejecting any remainder of less than a quarter of a foot.

C.—Any vessel the maundage of which calculated as above exceeds 50 maunds shall be reckoned as a vessel under class II.

CLASS II.

A.—The product of one-quarter the length of the vessel from stem to stern measured outside and along the water line, multiplied by the greatest interior breadth of the vessel multiplied by the greatest interior depth from the water line to the interior bottom of the vessel, is to be taken as equal to the number of maunds upon which tolls shall be levied.

B.—The measurement of the length is to be made in feet, rejecting inches, the measurement of the breadth and depth is to be made in feet and quarters of a foot, rejecting any remainder less than a quarter of a foot.

C.—The maundage on which the amount of toll is calculated shall be reckoned to the nearest integral multiple of  $12\frac{1}{2}$  maunds, rejecting any remainder of less than  $12\frac{1}{2}$  maunds. In the case of boats exceeding 500 maunds by measurement the maundage shall be reckoned to the nearest integral multiple of 50 maunds rejecting any remainder of less than 50 maunds.

CLASS III.

A.—For vessels of class III, the number of maunds obtained by the system of measurement prescribed for vessels of class II shall be increased by one-half. For vessels of this class exceeding 1,000 maunds by measurement, the maundage shall be reckoned to the nearest integral multiple of 100 maunds rejecting any remainder of less than 100 maunds. In the case of steamers, the maundage determined as above shall be reduced by one-third as an allowance for engine space.

B.—In case of steamers that have been surveyed under the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884, the registered tonnage entered in the certificate may be accepted as the tonnage of the steamer in lieu of measurement.

3. All vessels under class I, known and defined as saltees, will be charged under a system of compounded tollage in accordance with rules contained in Appendix A.

4. Every vessel included in classes II and III entering or passing along the canal shall be furnished with a ticket on paying the prescribed toll. The ticket shall specify the station at which it has been issued, the name of the person in charge of the vessel, the date on which the voyage commenced, the point to which the vessel may proceed on the line of navigation, the maundage of the vessel, the amount of toll charged, the number of days allowed for the voyage, and the date of such last day. The number of days so allowed without additional payment shall be calculated as follows:—

Boats.—One day for every eight miles or portion of eight miles, to be traversed together with one day for every 100 maunds of measurement or part of 100 maunds.

Floats (timber).—One day for every five miles for any number of timbers not exceeding fifty, and one day for every additional fifty or part of fifty.

Riffts (bamboos).—One day for every five miles for any number not exceeding five hundred and one day for every additional five hundred or part of five hundred.

5. Every vessel which does not complete its voyage within the number of days allowed by rule 4 shall, for each day or part of a day in excess, be liable to an extra charge equal to one-half of the toll payable on the maundage of the vessel as per the Schedule of Rates in Appendix B, provided that in no case shall the demurrage charged exceed Rs. 5 per diem. The Superintending Engineer may, at his discretion, exempt any boats on any line of navigation, or any portion of line of navigation from the payment required by this rule.

Exemption from payment of demurrage may, at the discretion of the Collector of Tolls, be granted for vessels detained in the channels (steamers broken down and boats damaged) by stress of weather, should immediate notice of detention, for the information of the Collector of Tolls, Magra Hât channels, be given to the nearest toll-station.

6. All tolls are payable on demand and shall be paid at the toll-station before a vessel is permitted to proceed: Provided that the Collector of Tolls may, at his discretion, permit vessels belonging to individuals or firms of recognised standing to proceed without prepayment on an undertaking that the bills for tollage due shall be liquidated monthly on presentation.

7. The ticket must be kept on board the vessel and must be produced for inspection when demanded by any person authorised to do so. If, on demand, the ticket is not produced, such person shall assess the tollage as provided in rule 2, and shall require payment of toll, and unless and until the toll is paid, or the original ticket or a duplicate is produced as evidence that toll has already been paid, the vessel will be liable to seizure and detention in accordance with the provisions of section 9 of the Canals Act, 1864.

8. Duplicates of lost tickets, of which the numbers and dates can be satisfactorily established, will be granted by the Collector of Tolls on payment of a sum of Re. 1. Provided that for tickets on which the total tollage is less than Rs. 4, the fee to be charged for a duplicate shall be one-quarter of the total tollage with a minimum of As. 4.

9. A vessel, which has been detained under these rules or under section 9 of the said Act, may not be removed from the canal without the order of the Collector of Tolls until the toll due has been paid. During such detention the manji, owner or agent must make arrangements for the safety of the vessel and cargo.

10. All vessels, whether the property of Government or of private owners, are liable for toll, except those exempted by the provisions of Bengal Government Circular No. 11., dated the 11th July 1906.

11. Vessels may be hauled up for repairs on the banks of the canals with the previous written permission of the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer. A rent calculated at one-sixth the rate of ordinary demurrage will be charged for the time the vessel occupies the bank.

12. At places where mooring posts have been provided by the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer, vessels desiring to moor shall be made fast in single line along the banks to such posts in such manner as the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer may direct, and shall not be moored in any other manner.

13. The Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer may, by written notice to be posted at the toll offices, prohibit the dropping of anchors or the putting up of bamboos or luggees in any specified part of the canals or on the banks.

14. Vessels shall be allowed to make fast in single line along the canal banks in such manner as may be directed by the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer from time to time, and no boat shall be made fast or be placed outside of boats so secured. No boat or raft shall be placed in such a position as to endanger the safety or obstruct the passage of other boats. Every vessel, when stationary, shall be securely fastened, and shall at all times have some person in attendance on board. Every vessel in motion shall have a sufficient crew.

15. Vessels passing through the canals shall keep in separate lines, empty boats keeping close to the bank, and those that are laden in the centre.

16. In portions of the canals where only one towing-path exists, vessels shall moor on the side opposite to the towing-path, and the towing-path side shall always be kept clear.

17. Iron-built cargo boats, with outside angle iron projecting beyond the wooden fenders, will not be allowed to enter the locks unless permanent fenders are fixed over the edges of the angle iron so as to prevent them from causing damage to the locks.

18. No fire, or open, unprotected light of any description shall be used on boats containing petroleum, jute, hay or straw in any place prohibited by the Navigation Canal Officer or Supervisor, and no fire, or open, or unprotected light (except in the case of steamers, the galley and engine-room fires and the electric light) shall be used on any vessel while in a lock basin.

19. No person shall wilfully or negligently allow a vessel to sink in the canals.

20. In every case of a sunken vessel, whether due to negligence or otherwise, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer and his subordinates shall offer every assistance in removing the same.

If in three days after the occurrence of a wreck it is seen that prompt measures are not being taken by the owner to remove the sunken vessel from the line of navigation, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer and his subordinates shall make their own arrangements for the removal of the same at the expense of the owner, provided that, in cases where navigation is seriously obstructed, arrangements may be made at once to remove the wreck.

21. When a sunken vessel has been recovered, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer shall cause notices to be posted at the locks, toll offices or other prominent places calling on those concerned to pay to the Collector of Tolls all toll or demurrage which may be due, as well as the expenses incurred in the recovery of the vessel and cargo. Should the sum due be not paid within fifteen days of the date of notice, the vessel and its furniture, or so much of it as may be necessary for the recovery of the dues, will be sold under the procedure directed in section 9 of the Canals Act, 1864.

22. The purchaser of a vessel sold under the provisions of section 9 of the said Act shall have the right to take it out of the canal on the day of purchase, or within such time as may be allowed by the Collector of Tolls, without payment of tolls.

23. When any laden vessel which has sunk has been recovered, or when any laden vessel has been seized under the provisions of the said Act or of these rules, the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer shall give immediate notice of the recovery or seizure to the owner of the cargo or his agent, requiring the removal of the cargo without delay and informing him that he will be required to pay all expenses necessary for the proper custody and storage of the cargo until removed.

24. If the Supervisor or Navigation Canal Officer be unable to ascertain the name and place of business or the abode of the owner of the cargo of such vessel, the notice prescribed in rule 21 shall be effected by a notice exhibited in his office and by advertisement in at least one English and one vernacular Calcutta newspaper.

25. No steam-vessel, whose length exceeds thirty feet, shall ply in the Magra Hât channels except in the following:—Diamond Harbour creek, Usti Nainan outfall, Nazra khal, Sangrampur khal up to Sangrampur bridge, and the Sarjipur outer khal up to the Surjipur bridge.

26. Lights and Signals.—All vessels, whether travelling or moored in the Magra Hât channels, must, between sunset and sunrise, carry a white light in a lantern on the forepart of the vessel where it can be distinctly seen from all sides. All steam-vessels in motion shall carry the lights prescribed by the Board of Trade Regulations. Barges or boats attached to a steam-vessel, whether in motion or moored, shall carry the light prescribed above.

27. Speed of vessels.—Every vessel plying in the Magra Hât channels must, between sunset and sunrise, limit her speed to three miles per hour. No steam-vessels shall ply between sunset and sunrise in channels detailed in rule 25.

28. No vessel shall remain in the outer entrance channels of the locks at Diamond Harbour and Uttarbhag nor in the inner lock channel and diversion channel of the Diamond Harbour lock and sluice, nor in the approach channels to any sluice. A board will be put up limiting the portion of the channels in which boats are not permitted to moor.

29. The places at which boats cannot be loaded or unloaded will be fixed by the Superintending Engineer, South-Western Circle, and will be demarcated with suitable posts and notice boards.

30. For any contravention of rules 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, 26, 27 and 28, the person in charge of the vessel or other person in fault shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 50 for any one infringement, or Rs. 5 a day for any continuing infringement.

31. The channels may be closed, whenever necessary, for effecting the necessary repairs to them on one month's notice of the intention so to close them being given; but, in the event of any sudden emergency, the channels may be closed at any time without prior notice, and no claim in such cases by owners of vessels or others for compensation on account of detention or otherwise shall be entertained.

32. The term "Navigation Canal Officer," as used in these rules, shall include all persons appointed to collect tolls under section 8 of the Canals Act, 1864, and all Public Works officers or subordinates in charge of the channel, not below the grade of Sub-Overseer.

33. No vessel whose beam exceeds 19 feet will be permitted to enter the channels through the Diamond Harbour lock. The same prohibition will apply in the case of the Uttarbhag lock to all vessels exceeding 14 feet beam.

34. Any vessel which enters the channels through the Diamond Harbour lock for the purpose of taking refuge during stormy weather will be charged a nominal toll of As. 8 per boat, provided the vessel leaves the channel again as soon as the weather conditions permit, and does not load or unload cargo inside the channel. All vessels seeking refuge under this rule must anchor in the creek close to the toll-collector's office and will not be permitted to proceed up the creek without paying the usual tolls.

35. Any vessel entering the channels through the Diamond Harbour lock and proceeding to load or unload at the Diamond Harbour station only will be charged tollage at the rate of As. 2 per 100 maunds to include the return journey. Should such boats proceed up the creek, they will be charged the ordinary tolls.

APPENDIX A.

Rules for licensing and registration of saltees or vessels under class I.

1. As provided for under rule 3, no vessel coming under class I, rule 2, shall ply, whether regularly or only occasionally in, or partly within and partly without the limits of, the Magra Hât channels unless licensed and registered by the Collector of Tolls of the Magra Hât channels.

2. Every owner of a vessel or his agent or manjhi shall apply to the Collector of Tolls, Magra Hât channels, for licensing and registration, giving the owner's name and residence or those of his agent duly authorised to act for him.

3. Every license granted under these rules shall continue in force for either six months or one year from the date of issue.

4. The license is not transferable, and if the ownership or manjhi or both of the vessel be changed, notice of the transfer must be given to the Collector of Tolls of Magra Hât channels, who will endorse the change of ownership on the certificate and register free of charge.

5. The license certificate granted for a vessel should contain the registered number of the vessel, owner's name and residence, name of manjhi, the maundage measurements, amount of compounded tollage and the dates of issue and expiry and shall be kept on board. It shall be produced, when required, by a Navigation Canal Officer and shall be delivered up on the expiration of the license.

6. The charge for the issue of a duplicate license to vessels in lieu of those defaced or lost is Re. 1.

7. The registered number of every licensed vessel shall be engraved, or branded, as well as painted in figures easily discernible on both sides of the vessel for which a charge of Re. 1 will be made. Techs figures shall be legibly maintained during the period of the license.

8. On the expiration of the license the manjhi shall deliver up his ticket to the toll collector at the station from which it was issued.

9. No person in charge of any licensed vessel plying within the limits of the Magra Hât channels shall use or have any ticket resembling those granted under the authority of these rules.

10. Every renewal of a license shall, unless the Navigation Canal Officer considers it unnecessary, involve the issue of a fresh license certificate without alteration in the registered number of the vessel.

11. Every vessel under class I, found plying in the channels without being licensed and registered shall be charged a demurrage rate of Rs. 3 for every such offence, provided that such vessel is not proceeding to the nearest toll station for the purpose of obtaining a license and being registered

Secy. to the Govt. of India.

No. 3, dated Simla, the 24th July 1913.

From—The Government of India, Home Department.
To—His Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

WE have the honour to communicate for Your Lordship's information the result of an examination which we have made in consultation with local Governments of certain important considerations relating to the recording of the confessions of persons accused of criminal charges.

2. The enquiry formed part of a general examination, which was initiated in 1911, of the provincial rules in force governing various matters connected with the investigation of offences by the police, the object of which was to apprise all local Governments of the action which had been taken in other provinces towards dealing with the same subjects, and to ensure the further scrutiny of the local regulations with a view to remedying possible defects in them and embodying provisions which had been found useful elsewhere. With our Home Department letter of the 12th July 1911, we accordingly circulated a précis of the orders in force on the subject of the procedure to be followed in the production before Magistrates of accused persons who had intimated a wish to confess, and in the actual record by Magistrates of the confessions of persons who were thus brought before them, and while inviting opinions regarding amendments which might suggest themselves, we particularly asked for answers to the following questions, namely :—

- (1) whether, on a balance of advantages and disadvantages, it facilitated the ends of justice to have confessions recorded at all before the trial commences, except in very special circumstances and by the orders of the District Magistrates;
- (2) whether, assuming that the practice of recording confessions before trial continued, it was practicable to introduce more stringent safeguards against abuse; and
- (3) whether the actual procedure of Magistrates in recording confessions was susceptible of improvement.

We annex copies of the replies received (enclosures Nos. 2 to 11), and in reviewing the matter we have had regard to various suggestions which have been mooted by questions in the House of Commons and in the course of discussion in the Imperial Legislative Council, indicating possible lines of reform. Briefly these may be said to comprise the prohibition of all record of confessions prior to trial, or a legal instruction to the effect that no conviction could be based upon a confession, once made but subsequently retracted, unless the commission of the offence was materially corroborated by direct evidence.

3. As Your Lordship is aware, the powers of Magistrates to record statements or confessions made in the course of police investigations are defined in section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code which runs as follows :—

“164 (1) Every Magistrate not being a police-officer may record any statement or confession made to him in the course of an investigation under this Chapter or at any time afterwards before the commencement of the inquiry or trial.

“(2) Such statement shall be recorded in such of the manners hereinafter prescribed for recording evidence as is, in his opinion, best fitted for the circumstances of the case. Such confessions shall be recorded and signed in the manner provided in section 364, and such statements or confessions shall then be forwarded to the Magistrate by whom the case is to be inquired into or tried,

“(3) No Magistrate shall record any such confession unless upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it was made voluntarily; and when he records any confession, he shall make a memorandum at the foot of such record to the following effect :—

“I believe that this confession was voluntarily made. It was taken in my presence and hearing, and was read over to the person making it and admitted by him to be correct, and it contains a full and true account of the statement made by him.

(Signed) A. B.,
Magistrate.

“Explanation.—It is not necessary that the Magistrate receiving and recording a confession or statement should be a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.”

The major issue raised in the discussion of this matter involves the cancellation of these provisions; the minor issues cover the possibility of adopting further precautions with the object of securing that confessions are only recorded if voluntarily made. Underlying the consideration of the whole question is the desire to prevent any miscarriage of justice, arising from the record of confessions which are not willingly volunteered, or which are taken down in circumstances, in which it cannot be guaranteed that they contain a full statement of what the accused person really wishes to say; and with that desire it is needless to state that we are in complete sympathy. The dangers to be avoided are the misuse of their powers by the investigating police in order to induce persons charged with offences to make false admissions of guilt, and the intervention of inexperienced Magistrates who do not appreciate the necessity of ascertaining the circumstances in which a statement is made or of recording it carefully and in detail. We have no wish to deny these risks or to refrain from any measure calculated to minimize them, and we think that it may fairly be claimed that they have long been generally recognized, as is shown by the instructions already issued. There are, however, considerations which deserve to be carefully weighed before the simple expedient is accepted of abolishing the recording of all confessions made before trial, and in dealing with the question we think it essential that it should be approached, not from the standpoint of condemning the whole police force as unscrupulous but rather with the desire to encourage among the police a spirit of pride in their work, to discourage attempts to substitute confessions for intelligent detective methods, and to emphasise the disgrace which attaches to resort to the ill-treatment of prisoners. We believe that this feeling is to be found among the new generation of police to a greater extent than is frequently credited, and our policy should proceed upon its recognition rather than upon an attitude of widespread distrust.

4. Reverting to the main consideration whether the recording of confessions prior to trial shall be allowed at all, the salient feature of the correspondence is the practical unanimity of judicial authority against any prohibition. With the exception of the Lower Burma Chief Court, three Judges of the Madras High Court and one Judge of the Bombay High Court (differing, in the two instances last mentioned, from the majority of their colleagues), the leading Courts in other provinces traverse the arguments advanced in our letter of the 12th July 1911, and urge that no such departure of practice is required. That these high judicial officers are unwilling to approve of any such prohibition is a valuable indication of the fact that these confessions are not regarded in the majority of cases as false or tainted; in fact, the instances in which the courts express a positive opinion that a bogus confession has been obtained by reason of the tutoring or ill-treatment of the prisoner by the police are, we believe, few. It happens, no doubt, that the courts may think it unsafe, in the absence of other evidence, to convict upon the basis of a retracted confession, but this is not necessarily synonymous with a finding that the confession was untrue or that it had been obtained by improper means. The local Governments are in general agreement in this matter with the courts. The Government of Madras regard the idea of prohibition as unnecessary and inopportune; that of Bombay is convinced that to forbid the recording of confessions before trial would be to put a serious hindrance in the way of administering justice, which might end in the necessity of altering the law so as to make police officers competent to testify to statements made to them by accused persons. The Government of Bengal and the late Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam concur in the view of the Calcutta High Court that a man alleged to be implicated in a crime should be permitted to make any statement he likes before a trustworthy and experienced Magistrate. The Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces draws attention to various orders which are in force prescribing the proper use of confessions, and the Lieutenant-Governor of Burma regards a confession as evidence, for what it is worth, which should not be intentionally ignored; he holds that it would be disastrous to discard the evidence of confessions. The Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces considers that the abandonment of the magisterial record of confessions would in no way reduce either the temptation, or the opportunities to put pressure on accused persons, and if this, therefore, is the main object of change, it would not be achieved. The Chief Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province would encourage the making of confessions, leaving it to the judiciary to assess them at their proper value and to bring to notice any allegations of their having been extorted by improper means.

5. In the face of this consensus of opinion we are not prepared to support the radical modification of procedure which has been suggested. Practically the upshot of the discussion is that much experience shows that confessions are frequently willingly made in circumstances which afford no ground for doubting their truth; their prompt record by a responsible Magistrate at least ensures that there is no conflict as to what the accused actually did say, and as long as statements made to a police officer are inadmissible in evidence, this result can only be secured in this way; the degree of credence to be attached to such a statement is for the court to determine, but because abuses may occur there is no cause to refuse entirely to accept this source of information; the proper remedy is to minimise the chances of its being abused. The advocates of prohibition are ordinarily actuated by two expectations, firstly, that it will do away with one of the principal incentives that the police have for ill-treating accused persons, and secondly, that it will compel the police to rely upon evidence and the pursuit of clues in place of the confession of the accused, as a means of securing the conviction of the guilty. Of these two arguments most weight attaches, probably, to the second, which usually influences those executive and police officers who incline towards this policy, although it should be possible to achieve the end in view by other means. But the prohibition of confessions would do little in itself to diminish the risk of the ill-treatment of the accused, because the obtaining of a confession is not the sole, or even the principal, motive which induces incompetent or dishonest police officers to resort to a mixture of coaxing, threatening, worry and ill-usage; their object is rather to induce the accused to give up stolen property or to indicate where some clue may be found, and the opportunities of putting pressure on him with this in view would still exist. If this is the case it seems to us to be unwise to ignore the proved fact that the novice in crime in this country is frequently unable to keep his guilty knowledge to himself, while even the more hardened criminal not infrequently insists upon unburdening his mind, and the prohibition of confessions would only deprive the courts of evidence which in many cases may be quite reliable and of value, without ensuring that a higher standard of police investigation will be attained in consequence. That confessions, after they are made, are frequently retracted is not surprising; once the accused finds himself awaiting trial there are his fellow-prisoners and, in some instances, possibly even the prison-warders, to advise him to withdraw his statement and adopt a line of defence, which they sometimes suggest. It is easy to represent that retraction can do no harm, while it may turn the scale in his favour, and after the first moment of excitement in which the confession was made these considerations may well prevail; but that fact does not inevitably indicate that the first confession was false, and for what it is worth, we are strongly of opinion that the court should be able to consider it.

6. Our conclusion in this respect need not, however, prevent the adoption of any measures calculated to discourage the police from placing reliance on confessions and thus neglecting to pursue definite clues, to diminish the risk of the ill-treatment of accused persons, or to give surer guarantees that confessions made under section 164 are really voluntary and are carefully recorded, and we proceed to discuss seriatim the various suggestions which the correspondence has revealed. Some of these were put forward in our letter of the 12th July 1911, others have been advanced by local Governments.

The Madras Government recommended the issue of instructions to make it clear that when the police are endeavouring to discover the author of a crime there is no objection to their making enquiries of, or putting questions to, any person from whom they think they can obtain useful information, but that when once an accused person has been arrested, while they may, and indeed should, listen to any statements which he may voluntarily make they should be strictly forbidden to interrogate him or press him to make a statement. The primary duty of the police after arrest is to take an accused person before a magistrate within the time prescribed in section 61 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and it is only in very exceptional circumstances that he should thereafter be returned to police custody. We understand that the instructions actually issued in Madras further stipulate that if the police desire to question an accused after arrest, the permission of the magistrate must be obtained. We welcome these suggestions as most useful, and are prepared to direct their general adoption. It is true that no rules will prevent the police from questioning a man if they wish to do so and have the opportunity while he is in their custody, but if they do so they will know that they are acting contrary to rule, and it is only by the steady pressure of instructions, that they will be made to understand that attempts to obtain confessions are not only improper but a sign of want of intelligence or a lack of industry. It would be irrational to forbid the interrogation of a man while he is merely a suspect, but once he has been arrested (and he should not be arrested on insufficient evidence) he should not be pressed to incriminate himself. The object, in fact, is to limit the use of section 164 as far as possible to cases in which the accused is really anxious to unburden his mind before a magistrate. Making allowances for differences in the Indian system as to the evidential value of statements made to the police, the remarks of Lord Brampton on the point in an address to English constables [of which we annex an extract (enclosure No. 12)] seem to us clearly to summarise the appropriate principles to be followed.

(b) Proposal that a prisoner who has confessed should, in no circumstances, be returned to police custody.

This was mooted in our letter of the 12th July 1911, and the general views of those consulted is that an absolute prohibition of remands to police custody after confession is impracticable, since the prisoner may be required to identify persons or property, to assist at the discovery of property, or, generally, to be present while his statement is being verified. It is moreover to be remembered that it is not the prisoner who has made a confession that stands in much danger of ill-treatment; it is true that he might be further tutored, but it is rather the man who has been sent up to make a statement and who, at the last moment, declines to do so, whom the police are likely to molest. While, however, a rigid restriction of remands is opposed, there is evidence that the cautious exercise of the power to remand may rightly be insisted upon, and after consideration of the various suggestions made we think the following principles should be insisted upon:—

(i) A remand to police custody should not be given unless the officer making the application is able to show good and satisfactory grounds for it; a general statement that the accused may be able to give further information should not be accepted.

(ii) No such order should be passed by an officer of lower status than a stipendiary magistrate exercising 2nd class powers.

- (iii) Whenever possible, where the object of the remand is the verification of the prisoner's statement, he shall be remanded to the charge of a magistrate. (The Calcutta High Court would forbid the presence of the investigating police and direct the magistrate merely to confine his attention to verifying the facts alleged, while refraining from any attempt to obtain admissions in corroboration of new facts, but in practice, we think it impossible to attempt an absolute direction to this effect. The presence of the investigating police may, in certain circumstances, be essential, while the magistrate may be trusted to exercise a proper discretion.)
- (iv) The period of the remand should always be as short as possible.
- (v) A prisoner who has been produced for the purpose of making a confession, and who has declined to do so, or has made a statement which, from the point of view of the prosecution, is unsatisfactory, should in no circumstances be remanded to police custody.
- (vi) So far as is practicable, confessing prisoners while in jail awaiting trial should be separated from others.

All these safeguards should materially diminish any risk of abuse of the power to remand to police custody, and at the same time they recognise the practical conditions in which investigations, etc., are conducted, which in some instances preclude the issue of absolutely rigid rules.

- (c) Proposal that confessions should only be recorded by a magistrate having jurisdiction, a first class magistrate or a specially empowered 2nd class magistrate.

There is practical agreement among those consulted that the more experienced and responsible the magistrate who records a confession the better. While the risk that a junior magistrate is likely to be improperly influenced by the police is apt to be exaggerated, the presumption is that the more senior officers are more likely to observe carefully the prescribed procedure and to bring a more mature judgment to bear. Good reason has been shown for discarding the condition that the magistrate before whom the accused is brought must be the one who will commit or try the case, but we are willing to limit the recording of confessions to sub-divisional magistrates, stipendiary magistrates of the 1st class, or of the 2nd class if specially empowered. We have not overlooked the opinion of the Madras Government that an absolute restriction to 1st class magistrates, who may be on tour, may be inconvenient, or the suggestion of the Government of Bombay that recourse might be had to a magistrate of lower status if a higher officer cannot be reached within a specified time, which is analogous to a rule already current in the United Provinces to the effect that "every confession which a prisoner in police custody wishes to make should be recorded by the highest magistrate, short of the District Magistrate, who can be reached in a reasonable time." The Calcutta High Court would also recognise that a magistrate of lower status may be called in if no other is available, but on the whole, we think that such instances of practical inconvenience will be few, and we would be prepared to ignore them in view of the advantages of restricting the record of confessions to courts of status and experience.

- (d) Proposal that no prisoner should be produced for record of his confession unless he has spent at least one night out of police custody.

The answers received indicate that while the principle underlying the suggestion is recognised to be sound, no definite rule to this effect is practicable. We think that all that can be done is to deprecate the immediate examination of an accused person, directly the police bring him into court, and to suggest the advisability (where possible) of giving him a few hours for reflection, in circumstances in which he cannot be influenced by the police, before his statement is recorded.

- (e) Proposal that no accused person shall be produced before a magistrate to make a confession until he has been examined by the district superintendent or assistant superintendent of police.

A rule to this effect is current in the Meerut district of the United Provinces, but while it is desirable that the orders of such an officer should be taken at this stage (and equally before a remand to police custody is asked for) a definite instruction to this effect is likely to be inconvenient, as the higher police officers are frequently absent on tour. The procedure might be enjoined as desirable, when practicable.

- (f) Proposal that when a confession is recorded the investigating police shall not be present.

This suggestion is offered by the Bengal Government, with whom the High Court agrees, and in the United Provinces there is an instruction to this effect, as also that the fact shall be noted on the record. The precaution seems reasonable, and we would support it for general adoption.

- (g) Proposal that confessions should ordinarily be recorded in open court and during court hours, unless for exceptional reasons.

This too is favoured by the Bengal Government, the idea being, presumably, that all shall be done openly and above board. There may be circumstances requiring a different procedure, but ordinarily that suggested should be feasible, and it possesses some advantages.

- (h) Proposal that confessing prisoners should be questioned by the court whether they have any complaints of ill-treatment to make.

Of the local Governments who have noticed the point, those of the United Provinces and Eastern Bengal and Assam support the idea, but the Government of Bengal is opposed to the inviting of complaints, and the Allahabad High Court notes that the procedure would be of little benefit. The Chief Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province considers that it is open to strong objection. It appears to us that the essential point is that the magistrate should satisfy himself that the confession is being voluntarily made, and we would prescribe no direct interrogation of the kind suggested: if an accused person has been coaxed or intimidated into making a false confession, he will certainly have been tutored to deny that he has had any pressure or force put upon him.

- (i) Proposal that a magistrate should question the confessing prisoner with the view of ascertaining the exact circumstances in which his confession was made and the connection of the police with it.

This is advanced by the Government of Madras, and it merges in a wider proposition which emanates from other quarters (noticeably from Burma and the Central Provinces) that it should be the endeavour of the Court to record the confession in as much detail as possible, with a view of affording material from which its genuineness can be judged and of testing whether it is freely made or is merely the outcome of suggestion. We are aware that anything like the cross-examination of the accused has been rightly deprecated by the courts, but it seems to us to be desirable that, without any attempt at heckling or endeavour to entrap the accused, a magistrate should record his statement with as much detail as possible. The more detailed a confession the greater the chances of correctly estimating its value. It is also useful to know precisely how it came to be made, to what extent the police had anything to do with the accused prior to it, and in the confession itself, the fullest possible particulars of the incidents involved. The questions and answers would of course be recorded, and any misuse of the procedure would thus be detected. It would also be expedient that the magistrate should add to the certificate required by section 164, in his own hand, a statement of the grounds on which he believes that the confession is genuine, the precautions which he took to remove the accused from the influence of the police and the time (if any) given to him for reflection. In the United Provinces nine definite questions are prescribed calculated to ensure that the confession is being voluntarily made, but such detail is, on the whole, to be deprecated. But if a record of the general character indicated was made, the attention of the magistrate would be directed towards the possible risks against which he had to guard, and the full circumstances of the confession would be stated at the time.

7. These proposals cover the different safeguards which, after careful examination of the circumstances surrounding this difficult question, we are prepared to recommend, and if they meet with Your Lordship's approval, we will address local Governments requesting them to amend their rules in conformity with them, after such consultation with the different High Courts, etc., as may be necessary. So far as possible we would prefer to proceed by the issue of instructions, but the necessity of amending the law can be further considered when the policy to be followed is finally approved. We will await Your Lordship's reply, however, before any action on these lines is taken.

8. As it appeared to be possible that Your Lordship might desire to make public the discussions on the important questions now raised we have obtained the concurrence of the Judicial authorities who have been consulted to that course.

We have the honour to be,

My LORD MARQUESS,

Your Lordship's obedient, humble servants,

No. 781—790, dated Simla, the 12th July 1911.

From—A. EARLE, Esq., C.I.E., Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department,
To—The Chief Secretary to the Government of Madras; the Secretary to the Government of Bombay, Judicial Department; the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal; the Chief Secretary to the Government of the United Provinces; the Chief Secretary to the Government of the Punjab; the Chief Secretary to the Government of Burma; the Secretary to the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam, Police Department; the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces; the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor-General in the North-West Frontier Province; the Chief Commissioner of Coorg.

of the procedure to be followed both in the production before Magistrates of accused persons to have their confessions recorded, and in the recording by Magistrates of the confessions of persons so produced. The Government of India will be glad if [with the permission of <sup>the Governor in Council</sup> <sup>the Lieutenant-Governor in Council</sup> <sup>His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor</sup>] the provincial regulations on this subject may be examined, and a report submitted with specific suggestions for amendment, where needed, in the light of the remarks in the following paragraphs. To facilitate the task, a précis is sent herewith of the rules in force in other provinces for your information. It is suggested that, as the subject is so closely connected with the administration of justice, the views of the highest judicial authorities may be invited and that their efforts to put down such abuses as still exist may be co-ordinated with those of the local Government.

2. The question to be considered in connection with confessions is whether, on a balance of advantages and disadvantages, it pays to have them recorded at all, before the trial commences except in very special circumstances and by order of the District Magistrate. In an unsophisticated community a confessing prisoner will ordinarily persist in his confession throughout the proceedings against him and no good is secured by hurrying him before a Magistrate prior to his trial. In other circumstances a genuine confession may possibly be obtained in the first excitement of the enquiry, but it will frequently be retracted later, and experience shows that in such a case the courts will demand such ample corroboration as would have been adequate for a conviction even without the original confession. The Government of India wish, in the first place, that this question should be considered.

3. Should, however, <sup>Madras</sup> <sup>the Bombay Government</sup> <sup>Bengal, etc.</sup> not consider it possible in present <sup>you</sup> circumstances to go so far as to stop altogether the recording of confessions before trial on the motion of the police, the Government of India would wish the safeguards which already exist to be further examined with a view to increased stringency. It should, at any rate, be thought possible to forbid absolutely the production of prisoners before Magistrates of the third class and to give the power only to the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or at least to a 1st class, or specially selected 2nd class Magistrate. It should also be considered whether it is not feasible to make it an absolute rule that once a prisoner has confessed he should in no circumstances be given back into police custody. It might also be possible to lay down that before a confession is recorded an accused person should have spent at least one night out of police custody. In a separate letter, the Government of India have suggested the adoption of the Bombay rule that all persons when first produced after arrest should be questioned as to whether they have suffered ill-treatment at the hands of the police. The Government of India hope that it will also be possible to adopt the Bombay procedure on the same subject as regards confessing prisoners. Other precautions may, I am to add, suggest themselves to <sup>the Governor in Council</sup> [the Lieutenant-Governor in Council

you]. If so, the Government of India will be glad to consider them.

4. There remains the question of the actual procedure before the Magistrate in the event of confessions being allowed to be recorded. This is more a matter, the Government of India think, for the judicial authorities than for the local Government. Subject, however, to what they may have to say, the Government of India think that the material contained in the précis will be found to be suggestive.

Enclosure No. 1 (i).

APPENDIX.

The Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province.—Most elaborate rules have been laid down in the Punjab, chiefly by the Chief Court. Many of the instructions are merely a repetition or amplification of those contained in sections 164 and 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code, but the following are the chief additional instructions :—

- (1) Magistrates before whom the police produce any person to make a confession should, before recording the confession, consider whether the person should not be taken before a magistrate of higher rank, and, in doing so, should particularly bear in mind the distance to be travelled, the time it would take to cover the distance, and the urgency and importance of the case.
- (2) Magistrates deciding cases should bring to the notice of the District Magistrate any case of a confession which has, in their opinion, been recorded by a Magistrate of the 2nd or 3rd class without adequate reason.
- (3) Magistrates of the 3rd class should record confessions only under very exceptional circumstances.
- (4) The magistrate is directed to desire the accused person to add his signature or mark to the confession, and, if the accused person declines to do so, the magistrate has to state the fact and the reason, if any, assigned by the accused person for so declining.
- (5) The magistrate is required, before recording the confession, to record in the memorandum which he is bound by law to make, the steps taken by him to ascertain that the accused person is acting voluntarily in making a confession. In particular, he has to enquire into the circumstances under which a confession is made, the length of time a confessing prisoner has been under suspicion before arrest and the opportunities afforded to his accuser or to the police to induce a confession improperly.

(6) In considering whether the prisoner should be sent to a magisterial lock-up or be remanded to the police, the magistrate should be guided according to the opinion formed—

- (i) whether the confession is voluntary or improperly obtained, and
- (ii) whether, in case of opinion that the confession is voluntary, he considers that the return of the prisoner to the police is of importance to the proper preparation of the case.

Police instructions supplement the Chief Court's orders by laying down—

- (1) That police officers should take accused persons, who are ready to make confessions to the highest magistrate, short of the District Magistrate, who can be reached in a reasonable time, and should avoid, as far as possible, getting a confession taken by an Honorary Magistrate who, by reason of recent appointment, inexperience or other cause, is imperfectly acquainted with the law.
- (2) All cases in which the accused person is ready to make a confession should, whenever possible, be taken up personally by a gazetted police officer.
- (3) That, if the investigation of a case cannot be completed within the 24 hours prescribed by section 61 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the investigating police officer should never apply (under section 167 of the Code) to a magistrate for further detention in police custody on the ground that an accused person is likely to confess, and should not apply for such detention, except upon the following grounds :—
  - (i) That it is necessary to compare the accused person's footprints with the tracks to and from the scene of offence.
  - (ii) When the accused person offers to point out stolen property or property taken in the offence, a weapon or other articles with which the offence was committed, or evidence of value in the case, and there is reason to believe that the offer is made bond fide.
  - (iii) When it is believed that persons living along the supposed route taken by the accused person might be able to identify him, and when it is considered unreasonable to expect such persons to come forward upon the chance of being able to give evidence.
  - (iv) Any other good and sufficient special reason.

The rules in the North-West Frontier Province are the same as those in force in the Punjab with some omissions.

Madras.—In Madras, the instructions issued by the High Court are far less elaborate than those issued by the Chief Court of the Punjab. They are briefly to the following effect :—

- (1) Village magistrates are absolutely prohibited from reducing to writing or taking the signature of an accused person to any confession or statement whatever made by him.
- (2) No magistrate should record any confession or statement made by an accused person under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code until he has first recorded in writing his reason for believing that the accused is going to make such statement voluntarily, and until he has explained to the accused that he is under no obligation to answer any question at all, and warned him that it is not intended to make him an approver and that anything he says will be used against him.

- (3) Confessions or statements are not in any case to be recorded, nor the warning above mentioned to be given, in the presence of the police officers who have arrested or produced the accused.
- (4) If a magistrate has a doubt whether the accused is going to speak voluntarily, he may, if he thinks fit, remand him to a sub-jail before recording the confession or statement.
- (5) Magistrates are particularly cautioned to guard against accused persons, who are under remand in a sub-jail, being subjected to any interference or undue influence by the police. Once a prisoner is brought before a magistrate for remand (in a sub-jail), the investigating police officers should not be allowed to have anything to do with him nor to see him, except in the presence of the magistrate.

Police instructions supplement the High Court's order—

- (1) By explaining, with reference to the saving clause in section 26 of the Evidence Act, which recognises the validity of a confession made to a police officer in the presence of a magistrate, that as soon as the prisoner is produced before a magistrate that functionary, and not the police officer, must conduct all subsequent proceedings and take the statement of the accused.
- (2) By directing that all oppression and trickery in regard to obtaining confessions are to be avoided by the police under pain of the severest penalties.
- (3) By directing that the police are never to prosecute upon a confession alone, however spontaneously given, and explaining that the only use to make of such confessions is to follow up clues thereby given and circumstances so indicated from other unquestionable sources.
- (4) By directing, with reference to the special provisions of section 27 of the Evidence Act, which allows of the proving of so much of a confession made to the police as distinctly relates to facts thereby discovered, that if a disclosure is volunteered by any person in the custody of a police officer, the latter shall, with a view to refreshing his memory, if called on to give evidence, make, if possible immediately, a memorandum of the disclosure in the precise words used by the prisoner, and read over the memorandum to the prisoner, but should not take the prisoner's signature on the paper.

The United Provinces.—In the United Provinces the High Court have not laid down any orders of their own, but have, in their rules and orders, directed a reference to the instructions issued by the local Government. The local Government has issued instructions to the following effect :—

- (1) In addition to the memorandum required by section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the magistrate is required to state briefly his reasons for believing that a confession has been made voluntarily.
- (2) The magistrate is required to see that the police who have been concerned in the investigation, or effected the arrest, are excluded from the Court while the accused person is being questioned, and to take down a note that this precaution has been observed.
- (3) In cases of dacoity and other serious crime, it is directed that confessions should be recorded by the District Magistrate, or by a European Magistrate of some standing, in whatever part of the district the crime may have been committed.

The Police regulations lay down—

- (1) That the truth of a confession should be tested before steps are taken to have it recorded.
- (2) That confessions shall be recorded by the highest Magistrate, short of a District Magistrate, who can be reached in a reasonable time.

In addition to the above, a circular issued by the Inspector-General of Police, dated the 15th July 1908, warns all District Magistrates and Superintendents of Police against the tendency to rely on confessions and statements unsupported by material or corroborative evidence, and enjoins the free employment of assistant and deputy superintendents in supervising investigations with the object of counteracting the evil. Similar orders are contained in paragraph 4 of the Resolution of the local Government on the police report for 1907 and in paragraph 2 of the Resolution on the police report for 1908. These orders are further developed in paragraph 2 of the Resolution on the police report for 1909, wherein the responsibility of superintendents and their assistant and deputy superintendents in the matter is emphasised. In the Meerut district special orders obtain, directing that a confessing prisoner should not be taken before a magistrate to have his confession recorded, until he has been examined by the superintendent or by the assistant superintendent of Police, directing the police not to request tahsildars and local magistrates to record confessions, and laying down that as a general rule confessions should only be recorded before a first class magistrate at head-quarters or by a sub-divisional magistrate.

Eastern Bengal and Assam.—The instructions of the Calcutta High Court are—

- (1) The magistrates should act with deliberation in examining persons brought before them for the purpose of making confessions, and should satisfy themselves that the confession is voluntary, not merely from the declaration of the accused, but from an attentive observation of his demeanour.
- (2) That the police officers, who brought the prisoner, should not be allowed to be present while the confession is being taken, or to suggest questions to be put to the prisoner.

The police instructions are—

- (1) That though police officers should make use of confessions if they are voluntarily made, they are warned, firstly, against working with the object of obtaining a confession, and secondly, against relying unduly on confessions or admissions to prove a case.
- (2) That anything which savours of oppression or trickery in ascertaining a confession must be avoided, and that the first aim of a police officer should be to obtain the necessary circumstantial and oral evidence.
- (3) Police officers are warned that confessions are often made in order to mislead the enquiring officers, are rarely true in all particulars, are frequently made in order to throw blame on other persons, or with a view to deter from further enquiry and are generally retracted in Court, in which case, if they stand alone and uncorroborated, they have little or no prohibitive value.
- (4) That in many important cases the evidence of an approver is necessary to prove the organisation and doings of the gang, that, if an accused person confesses and names his accomplices, the investigating officer should at once take him before a Magistrate for the purpose of having his confession recorded, and that, after this has been done, he should consult the Superintendent of Police as to whether steps should not be taken to have the confession verified.

If the Superintendent considers the case of sufficient complexity and importance to justify this procedure being adopted he will lay the facts before the District Magistrate, who, if he agrees with the Superintendent, will depute a magistrate to verify the confession locally. During such verification the prisoner is to be in the custody of the magistrate, and the police are to have no concern with him.

Bengal.—The instructions of the Calcutta High Court are—

- (1) That Magistrates should act with deliberation in examining persons brought before them for the purpose of making confessions, and should satisfy themselves that the confession is voluntary, not merely from the declaration of the accused, but from an attentive observation of his demeanour.
- (2) That the police officers who brought the prisoner should not be allowed to be present while the confession is being taken, or to suggest questions to be put to the prisoner.

The police instructions are—

- (1) That the police should be made to realise that a confession, when it is made, is not a final, but rather an initial stage in the investigation, and that corroborative evidence is always required.
- (2) The investigating officers should be instructed not to work mainly for confessions, and not to rely on them too much, when made.
- (3) That in important cases in which an accused person confesses and names accomplices, the investigating officer shall produce the accused, as soon as possible, before a Magistrate with a view to having his confession recorded, and at the same time consult the Superintendent of Police as to whether steps shall be taken to have the confession verified. If this is agreed to by the authorities concerned the superintendent will ask the magistrate to depute some one in Government service, other than a police officer, to verify the confession locally by way of corroborating the confession.
- (4) That, during the period of verification, the confessing accused person shall be in the custody of the officer deputed to make the verification, and not in that of the police.

In Calcutta section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code is not in force, the Commissioner of Police taking the place of the magistrate. In the suburbs of Calcutta, confessing prisoners are taken before magistrates who have jurisdiction to try the case and to no other magistrate.

Bombay.—The Bombay High Court have issued the following instructions:—

- (1) Magistrates are particularly warned to satisfy themselves that no inducement, threat or promise has been made in order to induce a confession, and to arrive, by questioning the accused, at a positive belief that a confession has been voluntarily made, before signing the certificate prescribed by section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code. In the latter connection the magistrate should, wherever possible, examine the body of the accused, provided that the accused consents to such examination, and, if there appear to be grounds for suspecting violence, he should, if possible, have the accused examined by a medical officer.
- (2) Magistrates are directed to question the accused person as to the length of time during which he has been in police custody.
- (3) No police officers, other than those required to secure the safe custody of the accused person, when in the opinion of the magistrate, the duty cannot be safely left to other attendants, shall be present when a confession is being recorded under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code. In any case the police officer who made the investigation is not to be present.
- (4) When recording the confession, the magistrate should note (i) the date and hour of the commission of the alleged offence, (ii) the date and hour of the first detention in police custody, (iii) the section of the Code under which the confession is recorded, and (iv) the extent to which the orders referred to under (1) and (2) above have been complied with.

- (5) Before ordering the detention of an accused person in police custody under section 167 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the magistrate must explain in writing to what use he intends the presence of the accused in the hands of the police to be put, and will hear any objection which the accused person may have to offer to the proposed order.
- (6) When a confession is retracted before the committing magistrate and the Court of Session, and an allegation is made of ill-usage by the police, the Court is enjoined to enquire into all the circumstances in which the confession was taken and particularly as to the length of time during which the accused person was in custody. Further, the police officer in whose custody the accused person was, when the confession was made, must be produced and closely examined.

The instructions of the Bombay Government amplify the instructions as regards the examination of the bodies of confessing prisoners so as to include the case of all under-trial prisoners (whether confessing or not) on first production before magistrates. They also enjoin that a copy of the medical officer's report as to any marks of violence found on an under-trial prisoner when he first comes to jail should accompany the prisoner to the Court before which he next appears, and provide for immediate enquiry being made if the report discloses marks of violence in regard to which the prisoner makes allegations against the police or others responsible for his arrest or custody.

The Police Manual warns superintendents against the tendency of the police to rely too much on confessions and to neglect the procuring of corroborative evidence.

Burma.—Full instructions, issued under judicial authority, are incorporated in the Lower and Upper Burma Court Manuals. The chief of these are—

- (1) Confessions must ordinarily be recorded by the highest magistrate short of the District Magistrate, who can be reached in a reasonable time.
- (2) The magistrate shall not record a confession under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, that is, before the commencement of the enquiry or trial, until he is satisfied, after questioning the person making it, that it is made voluntarily. To show that this has been done, the magistrate, before recording a confession, has to record a memorandum stating the date on which and the place at which the confession is recorded, the circumstances in which the accused was produced before the magistrate, the period during which, and the place or places at which, the accused has been in police custody, the questions asked—and these must not be of a perfunctory nature—to ascertain that the confession is really voluntarily made, the answers of the accused to the questions, the magistrate's reasons for believing the confession to be voluntarily made, and any remarks the magistrate may wish to make. Any written communication made to the magistrate by the police regarding the wish of the accused to confess is to be attached to the memorandum.
- (3) When the confession of an accused person is being recorded, none of the police who have been concerned in his arrest or in the investigation of the case, shall be allowed to be present or to be within sight or hearing of the accused. No police officers shall be present, except such as may be necessary to secure the safe custody of the accused.
- (4) It is laid down that it is not necessary to warn an accused before recording his confession or examination, but that, when necessary, the law should be explained to him.

- (5) When an accused, on being brought before a magistrate, retracts a confession previously made and accounts for making it by charges of improper inducement, pressure or other misconduct against the police or other persons in authority, the magistrate is bound to give him an opportunity of proving his allegations. Accusations of the kind are to be thoroughly sifted. The magistrate is required not only to examine such witnesses as the accused may be able to produce, but to call any witnesses whom he himself may have reason to think are able to give evidence in the matter, and to hold a searching enquiry into the allegations. He must invariably record in his order his opinion whether the allegations have been proved or not, and, if the former, he must report the matter to the District Magistrate. Similar orders apply to Sessions Judges in similar circumstances.

The chief additional instructions contained in the Burma Police Manual are as follows :—

- (1) If an admission of guilt or complicity in crime is volunteered by any person, the investigating officer should, if possible, immediately make a memorandum of it in the precise words used. The memorandum is to be read over to the person making the disclosure, but such person is not to be required to sign the paper. The memorandum is to be preserved by the investigating officer with a view to refreshing his memory as to the precise words used, in the event of his being required to give oral evidence of any part of the disclosure under section 27 of the Evidence Act.
- (2) The police are particularly warned against the danger of unduly relying upon confessions or admissions, and reminded of the importance of substantiating a case, in which a confession is made, by reliable evidence.

The Central Provinces.—The orders issued under judicial authority (the Judicial Commissioner) are—

- (1) Where an accused person alleged to be desirous of making a confession is produced before a magistrate, and the magistrate's powers are lower than those required for trying or committing for trial (as the case may be) a person charged with the offence for which the accused has been arrested, the accused shall ordinarily be forwarded to the nearest magistrate having the higher description of powers, and escort required for the journey shall not include any of the police who have already taken part in the investigation. If for special reasons it is desirable to depart from this rule, those reasons shall be recorded by the Magistrate with his own hand.
- (2) Under section 164 (3) of the Criminal Procedure Code, it is essential to the proper recording of a confession that the accused should be questioned in the first instance with a view to ascertain whether the confession is made voluntarily. The questions so put, together with the answers thereto, must be recorded before the confession itself is taken down. If any allegation of ill-treatment is made the magistrate shall there and then examine the accused's person, if the accused consents, to see whether there are any marks of injuries as alleged, and shall place on record the result of his examination. If the accused refuses to permit such examination, the refusal and the reason therefor shall be recorded. If the magistrate finds that there is reason to suspect that the allegation is well-founded he shall at once record the complaint, cause the accused to be examined by a medical officer, if possible, and, if he has not power to take up the necessary enquiry himself, forward him to the magistrate having jurisdiction.

- (3) Before proceeding to record the confession itself, the magistrate must decide, upon the answers to the preliminary questions and upon the result of any examination of the accused's person, whether there is reason to believe that the confession, if recorded, will be irrelevant on any of the grounds set forth in section 24 of the Evidence Act. If he decides that the confession will be inadmissible on any of the said grounds, he will state his reasons for so thinking and will refuse to record any further statement by the accused.
- (4) No attempt shall be made to draw unwilling or unguarded admissions from the accused person by close and inquisitorial questioning; but he may properly be questioned, so far as may be necessary, to enable the magistrate—
  - (a) to elicit from him whatever facts he is willing to state,
  - (b) to understand exactly what is his meaning and how far he intends his confession or admissions to go.

The magistrate should invariably question the accused person as to the length of time during which he has been in the custody of the police. It is not sufficient to accept the date and hour of formal arrest as entered in the police papers. Every question put must be recorded in full with the most scrupulous accuracy, together with the answer.

- (5) The magistrate is to take the signature or the mark of the accused person to the record.
- (6) When the confession of an accused is being recorded, none of the police who have been concerned in his arrest or in the investigation of the case should be allowed to be present or to be within sight or hearing of the accused.
- (7) In every case in which the record of confession by an accused person, taken under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is received by the magistrate enquiring into, or trying the case, the magistrate shall enquire from the accused person whether he made the confession purporting to have been made by him before the magistrate from whom the record of the confession was received. The confession shall be shown or read to the accused person, and the fact noted by the magistrate, and the accused person's answer to the question shall be recorded in full.

The Jail Manual provides that if any wound or mark of recent injury is observed at the medical inspection, on the admission of any under-trial prisoner, the prisoner shall be questioned regarding it, and, if he attributes it to violent treatment while under arrest, the matter shall be immediately reported to the District Magistrate, or, in his absence, to the senior magistrate present at head-quarters.

The instructions of Government are—

- (1) The greatest caution should be exercised by an investigating officer in placing any reliance on a confession or admission of guilt by an accused person.
- (2) The practice of adopting a confession blindly and regarding it as obviating the need for further enquiry is absolutely forbidden. Every detail in it is to be put to the test and corroborated as far as possible by independent testimony, so that if, as frequently happens, it is retracted, sufficient evidence may still be forthcoming to ensure success.
- (3) Superintendents and assistant superintendents are to make the subordinate police understand that no sort of pressure, direct or indirect, is to be put upon persons to make them confess.

- (4) If a disclosure amounting to an admission of guilt or of complicity in crime be volunteered by any person, the investigating officer shall, if possible, immediately make a memorandum of it in the precise words used. He should read the memorandum over to the person making the disclosure, but he may not take the latter's signature on the paper. The memorandum will be preserved by the investigating officer with a view to refreshing his memory as to the precise words used, in the event of his being required to give oral evidence of any part of the disclosure under section 27 of the Evidence Act.
- (5) In important cases, if the disclosure thus noted down amounts to a confession of guilt, and there is a magistrate in the neighbourhood, the person making it should be taken before the magistrate as soon as possible in order that the confession may be formally recorded in the manner prescribed by section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Enclosure No. 2.

No. 1278-4, dated Ootacamund, the 12th June 1912.

From—The Hon'ble Mr. A. G. CARDEW, C.S.I., Acting Chief Secretary to the Government of Madras, Judicial Department,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

I am directed to reply to the Home Department letter No. 781-790, dated the 12th July 1911, dealing with the question of the procedure to be followed in the production before magistrates of accused persons to have their confessions recorded and in the recording by magistrates of the confessions of persons so produced. The Honourable the Judges of the High Court were invited to give their views on the subject and copies of their minutes are enclosed.

2. The first question raised in the letter under reply is "whether, on a balance of advantages and disadvantages, it pays to have confessions recorded at all before the trial commences." In this connection two extreme views have been expressed: that of Mr. Justice Spencer who would repeal sections 25 and 26 of the Indian Evidence Act so that confessions of the kind specified therein may be admissible as evidence for what they are worth, and that of Mr. Justice Ayling who would retain these sections but would repeal section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code and forbid the recording of confessions prior to trial.

3. The Government consider that there is much force in Mr. Justice Spencer's arguments, but they fear that it would at present be premature to repeal sections 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act. It is not only that the police have not yet reached a sufficiently high standard of trustworthiness, but also that the moral and civic sense of the general population is defective. People who have suffered loss or injury not infrequently urge the police to resort to methods of a highly irregular character, while there is among many classes an undercurrent of sympathy with the criminal.

4. At the same time the Governor in Council recognizes that of late years there has been a very great improvement in police morale. As pointed out by Mr. Justice Spencer, public attention is focussed on a few cases of misconduct while the enormous number of false charges against the police is overlooked. The Madras Government look forward confidently to yet further improvement in police methods and consider it altogether unnecessary and inopportune to repeal section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code and thus to withdraw from the hands of the investigating officer an instrument which, properly used, may be of great service, while its misuse is becoming increasingly infrequent and may be rendered still more difficult by the adoption of safeguards.

5. Moreover, it frequently happens, as observed by Mr. Justice Duthoit in the judgment reported in I.L.R., VI All., 550-551, that the confession made immediately after the commission of the offence is genuine: and even if it is subsequently retracted, the fact that it was made at once does possess some evidential value. There are again cases in which it is of the highest importance that we should have a trustworthy record of a confession at a very early stage of the investigation. For example, in the Tinnevely conspiracy case, which was recently tried by a Special Bench of the Madras High Court, the prosecution was able to rely on confessions by different persons which had been promptly recorded in circumstances which showed that there could have been no tutoring by the police.

6. After a very careful consideration of the question in all its bearings, His Excellency the Governor in Council has come to the conclusion that the existing statute law may be left as it is, though additional safeguards should be provided to minimise any tendency on the part of the police to put pressure on accused persons to make a confession.

7. Mr. Justice Phillips has suggested that no police officer below the rank of Inspector should be allowed to ask for the record of a confession. It is usually only at the commencement of the investigation that a prisoner is willing to confess, and as it would seldom be the case that the Inspector would be present then, the Government are unable to support the suggestion. They consider that the character of the new class of sub-inspectors recently created in this Presidency may usually be trusted, and that the supervision of superior officers and the careful attention of magistrates will be sufficient to prevent or detect any improper conduct.

8. In paragraph 4 of the letter under reply, the following further safeguards have been suggested :—

- (1) To prohibit the production of prisoners before third-class magistrates for recording confessions and to give such power only to the magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or to first and specially selected second class magistrates ;
- (2) To make it an absolute rule that once a prisoner has confessed he should in no circumstances be given back into police custody ;
- (3) To lay down that before a confession is recorded the accused person should have spent at least one night out of police custody ; and
- (4) To question all persons when first produced after arrest as to whether they have suffered ill-treatment at the hands of the police.

The Governor in Council agrees with the Government of India that no third-class magistrate should ordinarily record a confession under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and is prepared to limit the power to the magistrate having jurisdiction in the case or to magistrates of the first class. To limit it to first-class magistrates alone would cause considerable inconvenience in this Presidency as they are touring officers for the most part and often absent from their head-quarters, and the police might have to follow them into remote places with the confessing prisoner. In this Presidency a third-class magistrate is competent to commit persons to the Sessions for trial, and it may therefore happen that he would be the magistrate having jurisdiction in the case ; but such cases are likely to be exceptional.

9. With regard to the remaining safeguards suggested in the letter under reply, I am to say that, while the Government of Madras recognize the desirability of keeping all prisoners who express a wish to confess out of police custody for some time before recording their statements, they consider that executive instructions by reason of their greater elasticity would be more suitable than a legislative provision.

This Government are further of opinion that the instructions issued by the Madras High Court for the guidance of magistrates should be amplified so as to direct attention to the importance of ascertaining exactly what happened in regard to the confessing prisoner after the arrival of the police on the scene : e.g., How long after the commission of the offence did the police come and commence investigation? When did they first question the accused? Was he kept under detention before he was formally taken into custody? If so, under what circumstances? How often was he interrogated? Was he urged by the police to make a confession? Does he understand the consequences of the confession, and does he understand that he will not be remanded to police custody? The High Court is being addressed on the subject.

Orders have already been issued requiring an examination of the persons of prisoners when first produced before a magistrate.

10. With regard to the instructions which may be issued to the police, the Governor in Council would follow the English practice and make it clear that, when the police are endeavouring to discover the author of a crime, there is no objection to their making inquiries or putting question to any person from whom they think they can obtain useful information. But when once an accused person has been arrested, while they may, and indeed should, listen to any statement which he may voluntarily make, they should be strictly forbidden to interrogate him or press him to make a statement. It should be impressed on the police that, after arrest, their duty is to take the accused person before a magistrate within the time prescribed in section 61 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and that it is only in very exceptional circumstances that he should be thereafter returned to police custody under section 167 of that Code.

11. I am, in conclusion, to express regret that it was not found possible to send an earlier reply to the reference of the Government of India.

Enclosure No. 2 (i).

MINUTES OF THE HONOURABLE THE JUDGES OF THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT MADRAS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Sankaran Nair.

It is quite unsafe to base a conviction on confessions which are afterwards retracted.

If the confession is to be relied upon, it must appear that no police influence was brought to bear upon the person making it. For this I would suggest that, wherever possible, the accused must be taken to the nearest magistrate and by him forwarded, not under police escort, to the nearest civilian magistrate. As ordinarily there will be only one person to make a confession, it ought not to be difficult for the magistrate to provide escort out of his own peons.

I am not in favour of any second-class magistrate recording any confession. There may be, no doubt, as in every class there are, exceptions. But as a rule, they cannot be trusted to act without fear of the police. A prosecuting police inspector's pay is Rs. 150. The police inspector's pay is Rs. 150 to Rs. 250; the sub-inspector's pay is Rs. 50 to Rs. 100. The sub-inspector is the station-house officer who has to proceed to the scene of offence first. In more serious cases the inspector follows. And the higher officials—the Assistant, Deputy and Superintendents—follow in very serious cases like murder and dacoity and are expected to supervise the investigation. It will appear therefore that the investigation is really in the hands of the sub-inspector and inspector. A magistrate's pay is one hundred rupees except a few stationary sub-magistrates who, I believe, get Rs. 120. Pay determines the social grade and influence, and even a permanent sub-magistrate's presence is not a guarantee of the voluntary nature of the confession. As a fact, however, a large percentage of these sub-magistrates are permanent clerks on a pay of Rs. 50 or thereabouts made to act as sub-magistrates and draw a pay, say, of Rs. 75. They are considered decidedly inferior in status and position to the police officers who have to deal with them. They generally hesitate to act against police wishes. This is the reason of the want of popular confidence in them so far as the police are concerned. They must be therefore left out of consideration. As to first-class magistrates I take the civilian first. When an accused person is forwarded to him by a magistrate, if he considers there has been a sufficient interval of time to escape the police influence, he may with the usual precautions record the confession. Otherwise he may be allowed to detain him in his own custody (no police guard) as long as he likes and then may record it.

As to the Indian first-class magistrates, so far as this Presidency is concerned it is not desirable to authorise them to record confessions. Under the system of appointment which once prevailed, we had young and able men appointed first-class magistrates and they formed an independent judiciary who commanded and deserved popular confidence. But the men now appointed commenced their life as clerks below Rs. 40 or Rs. 50 pay. They are probably better revenue officials, but as magistrates they do not command popular confidence. There is no harm in giving the power to record confessions to the men appointed by competition. But the distinction may be invidious and it is safer not to give such power to any non-civilian magistrate.

The other suggestion I have to make is that there should be no remand to police custody. The purpose is served by keeping him under the custody of warders or peons who have nothing to do with the police or investigation of crime.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim.

In my opinion the most satisfactory solution of the problem would be to prohibit the use of any confession alleged to have been made by an accused person after arrest by the police and the recording of any such confession by a magistrate before trial. This will not of course prevent the police from making any use that they may find useful of any statement or information supplied by a person under suspicion or in arrest in making further investigation. It is so extremely rarely that any reliance is placed on a retracted confession that the presence of confessions made before trial on the record might well be said to have the effect of embarrassing the magistrates and judges rather than guiding them to the right conclusion. So long as such confessions are admissible in evidence the police officers will always, as experience has shown, be tempted to take the chance for a conviction on confessions alone, however stringent the instructions to them may be as to the proper use that should be made of confessions. And as it is well pointed out in the police instructions (3) of Eastern Bengal and Assam, confessions are often made to mislead the enquiring officers and, I may add, to get off from police custody at any risk. But police officers of the subordinate ranks are most often either successfully hoodwinked or are inclined to save themselves further trouble of investigation. The warning by the magistrate, however careful, is seldom of any use because the motive underlying most pre-trial confessions is to mislead the investigating officer and to be released from police custody as soon as possible and not to make a clean breast of everything, actuated by remorse. When the latter motive undoubtedly exists my experience shows that there is no difficulty in securing sufficient evidence to support a conviction without the confession, and such confessions are not usually retracted.

If pre-trial confessions are to remain admissible in evidence, I agree with Sankaran Nair, J., that the sub or stationary magistrates should not be authorized to record them and that they should be recorded by a civilian magistrate of some standing. I approve of the suggestion in paragraph 4 of the Government of India letter that before the recording of the confession the accused should be kept at least for one night out of police custody, and I should add that such arrangements be made for the accused's detention in the meantime as to effectively preclude all police influence.

As regards remands to police custody, it is my experience that the magistrates, generally speaking, are too prone to grant the application of the police officer and are seldom alive to the requirements of law on the subject. I am afraid that many magistrates of the subordinate rank have not the courage, when such an application is made, to properly examine the grounds for the application and to refuse the application when there are no sufficient grounds for remand. On this point the police instructions of the Punjab Government (3) are worthy of adoption, but I should add that the reasons should be fully and clearly stated in the application to the magistrate which ought to be made in writing. Instructions should also be issued to magistrates on the same basis. I should also suggest the adoption of the Bombay rule (5) that the accused or his pleader, if he is represented, should be heard with respect to the application for remand to custody. I should not authorise any but first-class magistrates to make orders for remand to police custody in any case.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Sundara Aiyar.

I agree in the view that only first-class magistrates should record confessions, but I would not confine the power to civilian magistrates. I would provide that a magistrate should take steps to keep the accused free of police influence for at least 24 hours, for a longer time generally. I would not provide that a confession should not be recorded before the regular trial or inquiry. Witnesses are often unwilling to depose in criminal investigations, but the fact that the accused has confessed of his own accord may induce them to depose.

The magistrate should question the accused about his treatment by the police and record any ill-treatment he may speak to.

I agree that when an accused is sent to a magistrate for the purpose of his confession being recorded he should not be sent under police escort.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Ayling.

In my opinion it does not pay (to quote paragraph 3 of the Government of India's letter) to get confessions recorded between arrest and commencement of trial; and the soundest plan would be to discontinue the practice altogether. So far from hampering, I believe such a step would have the most beneficial effect on police investigation and the administration of justice. At present, once such a statement is recorded, the average police officer considers the case is safe, and relaxes his efforts if he does not discontinue them altogether: in the majority of cases the confession is subsequently retracted, the court refuses to act on it, and unless good evidence has been secured before the confession, the case probably fails. In the comparatively few cases in which the accused adheres to his confession he would probably have confessed in the course of the trial without any preliminary recording thereof. If on the other hand the police knew that the confession would not be proved against the accused they would be driven to use all information furnished by him in the legitimate way, i.e., as a basis for further investigation, and I firmly believe the percentage of convictions would show a marked increase.

I am no believer in the efficacy of any of the measures designed to protect accused persons from police influence. It would be most unsafe to send prisoners charged with grave crime to a first-class magistrate with only peons for escort: and such a measure would not prevent the police having as much opportunity as they liked while on the journey to influence the prisoners. Even the distinction between the sub-jail and the police lock-up is in my opinion too much relied on. It is no doubt not so easy for the police to get hold of a man in the sub-jail: but it is not really difficult, especially if the sub-jail officer (usually the sub-magistrate) is amenable. So also with the status of the magistrate recording the confession. No doubt a first-class magistrate can be better trusted than a magistrate of lower class to put his foot down if he sees reason to suspect improper influences. But it all depends on the prisoner himself complaining and throwing himself on the magistrate's protection. I do not remember ever hearing of a case in which this was done. The fact is the police do not put a man whom they have induced to confess, unless they are pretty sure he will not give them away: and the preliminary questioning, etc., by a busy magistrate with plenty of other work to do is apt to be of a somewhat perfunctory character.

If it be deemed unsafe to amend section 26 of the Evidence Act, until some experience is obtained, I would suggest that departmental orders be issued forbidding the police to put up prisoners before a magistrate for recording confessions without the orders of the District Magistrate: whenever the latter sanctions such a step, he should report the fact to Government, stating briefly his reasons.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Bakewell.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Spencer.

I endorse most of what Ayling, J., has written, and so far as confessions mean statements of accused persons upon which a conviction may be based without any corroborative evidence, I would abolish the taking of them altogether between the arrest and the trial. I may be unorthodox in my opinion, but I would go a good deal farther and amend sections 25, 26 and 27 of the Evidence Act. The status of the police has been raised in recent years by introducing the sub-inspector grade, by endeavouring to recruit the more responsible native officer from a better class of families, and by remodelling the department. The best way to further improve the morality of the force is to encourage them to take a straight path in the detection of offences by showing a little more confidence in their rectitude than is now the fashion. Attention is apt to be focussed on the real cases that come to light from time to time of that survival of what used to be a common practice of a semi-barbarous country, namely, torture to procure confessions; the public is invited to become hysterical on the subject; and we easily lose sight of the enormous number of false complaints of extorted confessions, of foisted property, and of concocted evidence recklessly preferred against the police by criminals who see their only hope of salvation to lie in an attempt to prejudice the mind of the court against the persons responsible for their prosecution. The disastrous effect upon the morality of the population produced by the vast proportion of grave crimes that go unpunished owing to the limitations placed upon police investigation and the strict exclusion of statements made by accused persons is also a matter which deserves serious consideration. In the flash of excitement after the commission of a crime a man will often freely publish what he has done, but during the uneventful days that he spends in the sub-jail before his trial commences he has time for sober reflection on the probable consequences of what he has done and said, the natural desire of self-preservation reasserts itself and he denies all that he has said, or he attributes it to police influence, knowing that the police have a bad name and that his explanations will be readily accepted. The statement of a criminal at the moment of his arrest, if the account of it can be trusted, is often of the greatest importance. I would instance the case of the lascar who was recently convicted and hanged in England for the murder of a stewardess on a P. and O. steamer and made an incriminating statement or question regarding himself to the police officer who took charge of him on the arrival of the steamer in the Docks. The evidence of the police officer was admissible at a trial in an English Court and a conviction was the result. To take another concrete instance. In the Madura district a man murdered his wife in the dead of night, when she was lying asleep in a house, the doors of which were open. Then he rushed out and told the villagers whom he met what he had done. When he was taken before a magistrate he denied all concern with the murder and suggested that it was the work of thieves and persisted in this defence throughout the trial, although there was no evidence to support his version and no indication of thieves having come. On the side of the prosecution there was no corroborative evidence. A blood-stained piece of wood was found beside the corpse, but there was nothing to show who in particular had used it on the deceased's head. Although everybody knew the man to be guilty, the case ended in acquittal, because according to reported decisions a retracted confession, even if reduced to writing by a magistrate acting in conformity with section 164 and the Criminal Rules of Practice, cannot be acted upon unless corroborated by independent evidence, and verbal accounts of what an accused said must stand on an even lower level.

The statements of the accused were inadmissible in evidence as conduct under section 8 of the Evidence Act, because Explanation I to that section defines "conduct" as not including statements unless those statements accompany and explain acts other than statements. I believe I am right in thinking that such statements could be proved against a man in English law. If so, my point in citing these two instances of actual cases is this. It is time that an attempt should be made to raise our guardians of the peace to the level of those in England and other European countries and to encourage in them a sense of self-respect by showing we trust them in all cases where they prove themselves worthy of trust. Evidence may freely be admitted to contradict them or to prove that individual policemen are unworthy of credit, but it is not reasonable that a policeman just because he is a policeman should be trusted less than any one else on earth. The remedy that I propose is to abolish the rule of evidence that statements made to the police are not admissible in evidence; to lay it down that as against those that make them, confessions are not necessarily conclusive evidence of the matter stated in them, unless they are made by an accused person at his trial in court when pleading to a charge; to place the responsibility on courts of discriminating between the value of confessions made under varying circumstances and in every case allowing evidence to be adduced as to the circumstances under which they were made; and impose on sub-jail officers, who are generally magistrates, the duty of inquiring of all under-trial prisoners at their admission into jail whether they have any complaint to make of their treatment since their arrest, of recording their statements in full if they allege ill-treatment, and of having their bodies promptly examined by the nearest medical officer in such a case. Superintendents and Assistant Superintendents of Police should be instructed to constantly impress on their subordinates the importance of not relaxing their efforts to unravel cases to the bottom simply because one or more of the persons suspected to have committed the crime has made some sort of admission. As laid down by the Government of the Central Provinces in the words of Appendix II to the Government of India's letter the greatest caution should be exercised by an investigating officer in placing any reliance on a confession or admission of guilt by an accused person, and the practice of adopting a confession blindly and regarding it as obviating the need for further inquiry should be absolutely forbidden. Where however a statement has been made by an accused person in the hearing of any one and it has a direct bearing on the issues before the court, evidence of it should be admissible for what it is worth, and courts should be allowed full latitude in weighing such statements and assessing them at their proper worth. Confessions are made for various reasons. Some are intended to throw the authorities off the scent. Some are genuine. The danger lies in treating them all alike.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Phillips.

I do not agree that confessions before trial should be altogether prohibited. They may be induced by police influence or they may not, and I think that the recording magistrates should make a full inquiry in order to satisfy themselves that the confessions are voluntary before they proceed to record them. In my experience I have found that genuine confessions are retracted just as often as induced confessions, and it is extremely rare to find a case when a confessing prisoner, who has been confined in a large District or Central Jail for some time before trial, does not retract his confession even when made before a committing magistrate. The fact that a confession has been recorded may induce the police to slack off in investigation, but now that the general status of the department has been raised, I do not think that such slackness is so frequent as it used to be. It is well known in the Police Department that a retracted confession by itself will not secure conviction, and consequently an intelligent police officer will continue his efforts to secure corroborative evidence. As remarked by Sundara Aiyar, J., the existence of a confession is often an inducement to witnesses to come forward and give evidence, and this is a point which should not be lost sight of. I think it will be generally admitted that there has been considerable improvement in the work of the police in recent years, and I think that to prohibit confessions altogether would discourage police officers as casting an additional slur on their work. They have been quite sufficiently abused in the past and it might be advisable now to give them some encouragement in the hope that the improvement which has begun may be continued.

It is of course necessary that rules should be prescribed with a view to prevent police officers from inducing confessions by torture or otherwise, but it must not be overlooked that if the police wish to evade the restrictions placed upon them they can generally find some means of doing so. It is therefore a question for consideration whether it is advisable to increase those restrictions or whether it would not be better to trust more to the police themselves, and I think that the necessary restrictions might be laid down in departmental instructions. If it is laid down that no police officer below the rank of Inspector should be allowed to ask for a confession to be recorded, I think that some weight should be attached to his request. I do not think that it is advisable to restrict the right of recording confessions to first-class covenanted magistrates. They are already so overworked that it is doubtful whether a perfunctory inquiry by them would be of more value than an inquiry by a second class magistrate or a deputy magistrate. A civilian magistrate would certainly not be amenable to police influence, but I am inclined to think that the fear of wrongful police influence is somewhat exaggerated. Why should not a man of the rank of Inspector be trusted to do his work properly, subject of course to the control of his superior?

The question of custody of the prisoner before and after confession is also one of the points which in my opinion is not very material. If the police are bent on exerting a wrong influence, they can do so through peons or sub-jail warders. All that is required is that the recording magistrate should satisfy himself that the confession is voluntary, and for this purpose he should personally see that the prisoner is kept away from the police for some reasonable period and question him closely as to the reason for his confession.

I think, therefore, that the rules in force in Madras ought to be sufficient to ensure the proper recording of confessions. The question is really one of the proper working of the Police Department, and I do not think that that department will be improved so long as they are given to understand that under no circumstances will police officers be trusted to do their work as it should be done.

The Hon'ble the Chief Justice.

The difficulty of this question is illustrated by the divergence of view of the civilian Judges who have had practical experience, at first hand, of the working of the present system.

Although I think there is considerable force in Ayling J.'s observations, I am not prepared to adopt his suggestion that in no case should a confession made after arrest and before trial be admissible in evidence. Even if it were adopted it would have to be subject to the proviso that the fact that a prisoner had confessed might be taken into consideration in connection with the question of sentence if he is convicted. A prompt confession, made in circumstances which leave no room for doubt as to its truth and voluntary character, is a matter to be considered in the prisoner's favour in determining the sentence. This is a point which seems to have been lost sight of.

On the other hand, I do not think the time has come for making confessions to the police admissible in evidence, and leaving it to the Court to attach such weight to the confession as it thinks fit, which I understand to be Spencer J.'s suggestion.

As regards this Presidency, I hope I am not taking an unduly optimistic view in thinking that the morale of the police has improved and that it will continue to improve. Even if this is not so, I think the subordinate judiciary and the subordinate police must realise by this time that a confession, as the foundation of a case for the prosecution, is of very little use.

I would leave the statute law as it is.

As regards this Presidency, I think the High Court orders, supplemented by the existing police instructions, if honestly observed and enforced, ought to be sufficient to prevent abuses. But in this matter something in the nature of a uniform Code, applicable generally throughout India, seems desirable, and to secure this end I should raise no objection to the adoption of the Bombay rules.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Benson.

The papers were circulated when I was on leave, so I do not now think it necessary to record any lengthy minute on the questions raised. I may, however, say that I entirely agree with the minute of Phillips, J., and would accept the conclusions of the Chief Justice.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Wallis.

I am not prepared to recommend that confessions should be made inadmissible in evidence. The result of so doing would probably be the increased fabrication of evidence to prove what was well known but could not otherwise be proved. On the whole I regard the admissibility of confessions as the lesser evil. I agree generally with the conclusions of the Chief Justice.

Enclosure No. 3.

No. 3780, dated Bombay Castle, the 17th May 1912.

From—C. A. KINCAID, Esq., C.V.O., Secretary to the Government of Bombay, Judicial Department,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

I AM directed to refer to Home Department letter No. 781-790, dated the 12th July 1911, on the subject of the recording by magistrates of the confessions of accused persons before trial and to reply as follows.

2. The Governor in Council is unable to accept the premises on which the proposals embodied in the above letter are based. These are—

(a) that in an unsophisticated community an accused who makes a confession is likely to adhere to it throughout the course of the proceedings and that accordingly nothing is gained by having his confession recorded before the actual commencement of his trial;

(b) that in the case of retracted but genuine confessions the Courts will demand such corroborative evidence as would be sufficient in itself to secure convictions.

With regard to the first premise, I am to point out that in the interval between arrest and trial a prisoner, however unsophisticated, is necessarily subject to many influences tending to make him retract. In jail it is impossible to keep him separate from other prisoners, often old offenders, who explain to him the folly of telling the truth. He also receives similar advice from the friends and especially the lawyers who visit him.

With regard to (b), I am to point out that it has not been the rule of the Courts of this Presidency to demand in the case of retracted confessions such ample corroborative evidence as would be sufficient to prove guilt without any confession at all. Confessions of which the genuineness is apparent from their fullness and consistency and by the circumstances in which they have been recorded have always been regarded by the Bombay High Court as evidence so valuable as to justify, even when uncorroborated, a conviction.

3. The Governor in Council has obtained the opinions of the Judges of the High Court and of a number of the most experienced District Magistrates and District Judges of the Presidency. In view of the almost unanimous opinions expressed by these officers the Governor in Council is convinced that to forbid the recording of confessions before trial would be to put a serious hindrance in the way of administering justice. The accused will continue to be subjected to the influences already mentioned and will simply not confess at all. And, since in India the police cannot count on the public for assistance, the result will be a serious diminution in the detection and punishment of crime. Indeed, if the practice of recording confessions before magistrates were done away with, it would probably in the end prove necessary to alter the law in such a way as to make police officers competent to testify to statements made to them by accused persons, a step which would bring the criminal procedure of India into line with that of other countries.

4. I am to quote the remarks made by Sir Narayan Chandavarkar on the general question of the value of confessions in India:—

“It has been remarked in some quarters that the readiness with which illiterate and ignorant persons accused of crime confess in a large number of cases at the beginning of police investigation and retract the confession later on when trial has commenced shows that those confessions are, generally, the result of police torture or influence. This remark ignores one fact which is patent to any one who knows the character of our people, especially the illiterate and ignorant portion of them. In ordinary life we find that when a servant is suspected of anything wrong he will first deny, but after a little questioning he will give evasive answers and at the last admit. The fact is, our people cannot successfully conceal their acts or motives. Hence it is that when a man, who has committed a crime, is arrested, he will, after a little questioning, make a clean breast of it. The unsophisticated man in this country may be given to lying but he does not know, because he has not learnt, the art of persisting in his lie and keeping his own counsel so as to mislead others for any length of time.”

5. With regard to the restrictions proposed by the Government of India, the Governor in Council is of opinion that the rules already in force in this Presidency constitute ample safeguards. The Governor in Council is of opinion that it is inadvisable to lay down any rules as to the length of time the accused should be out of police custody before he is allowed to make a confession. Such a matter is essentially one for the exercise of the magistrate's discretion.

As to the proposal that an accused who has confessed should in no case be handed back to police custody, the Governor in Council would point out that it is often immediately after a confession that it is most essential for the police to have the accused handed over to them. He may be required to point out and identify his associates and to hand over property.

6. The Governor in Council is, however, prepared to accept the suggestion that, as far as possible, confessions should be recorded by the magistrate of the highest class available and that an accused should be taken before a third class magistrate only when it is impossible to produce him before a magistrate of higher rank within 12 hours. If this proposal meets with the approval of the Government of India the Governor in Council will move the High Court to embody it in their circular orders.

7. The Honourable Mr. M. B. Chaubal has made two suggestions, and the minute recorded by him is attached to this letter.

Enclosure No. 3 (i).

Minute recorded by the Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Chaubal, dated the 25th April 1912.

Though I believe that there is still considerable improper influence exercised by the police both in obtaining confessions and in making prisoners stick to them in the committing magistrate's courts, I agree that it will not do to give up retracted confessions and make them altogether inadmissible in evidence, and that such a step in the present state of efficiency in the police force must prejudicially affect the volume of crime in the country.

With reference to the concluding portion of paragraph 4 of the letter under reply, I desire to suggest for the consideration of the Government of India two proposals which I believe are calculated to materially check objectionable police practices and give to accused persons a fairness of trial which I consider desirable in the interests of judicial administration—

(a) I desire that section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code should be so amended as to secure to the accused or his pleader free access to police papers and to the statements of witnesses during the police investigation, certainly in the Courts of Session and perhaps also in the magistrate's courts. I am of opinion that there can be no useful purpose served by keeping the course of police investigation a sealed book to the accused or his counsel after such investigation has terminated, while on the other hand such access is likely to give to the accused opportunities for exposing some of the unfair practices resorted to by the police, and to enable the trying Judge to correctly appreciate the worth of the witnesses for the prosecution. A witness, e.g., has made three or four varying statements on material points during the police investigation. It is only his last and finished version which appears before the court, but the accused is often-times entirely ignorant of the changes and improvements in the witness' story, and is not in a position to show the Judge the degree of credibility which ought to attach to the statements of such a witness. Under the law as it stands at present, the accused is entirely at the mercy of the trying Judge who may or may not have been diligent enough to wade through the police papers, and at the mercy of the public prosecutor, who in the mofussil is not often fair enough to point out to the Judge the previous variations in the story of the witness. There is no reason why as regards these papers the prosecuting counsel should be in a position of advantage as compared with the accused's counsel. The desirability of this change would naturally not strike trying magistrates, but there is reason to believe that many Sessions Judges and the entire bar would be glad if the said section were amended as proposed. The desirability of such an amendment has been forced upon me during a fairly large practice at the bar extending over 27 years.

(b) The other suggestion I desire to make relates to what are known as magisterial lock-ups. There is one of these at almost every taluka station, and under-trial prisoners are confined in these. Though known as magisterial these lock-ups are controlled and guarded by the same subordinate police force to which the investigating police belong. Practitioners in criminal courts often complain that these lock-ups are easily accessible to the investigating police, notwithstanding rules and departmental circulars to the contrary, and in some cases these complaints are justified. There is of course no positive ill-treatment while prisoners are there, but if confessions have been obtained wrongly, this easy access is frequently utilized for such intimidation or inducement as will make the accused stick to his confessional statement. The remedy I suggest in order to mitigate and check this evil is that the police manning these places of confinement should be a separate branch of the police, and their leave, promotions, etc., should all be entirely in the hands of the District Magistrates.

Enclosure 3 (ii).

*Minutes recorded by the Honourable the Judges of the High Court.
Bombay, re recording of confessions.*

With regard to the first question on which our opinion is asked, viz., whether, "on a balance of advantages and disadvantages it pays to have confessions recorded at all, before the trial commences except in very special circumstances and by order of the District Magistrate," I have the honour to state as follows.

I must premise that I speak from the point of view of a barrister for 21 years and a Judge of the High Court for nearly eleven years in the Town and Island of Bombay only.

I am strongly of opinion that if the recording of voluntary confessions were done away with the course of justice throughout this Presidency would be most seriously interfered with. I have sat frequently on the Appellate Side; so am speaking with authority, as to that and the Original Side of the High Court.

For many years I have thought that the current views as to pressure and torture by the police are much exaggerated. With some Judges the idea is almost a "fetish." It is common knowledge that the ordinary native in India will, when he is in a strait, prima facie say what he thinks will please the Sahib. This peculiarity often leads them to say things which the inexperienced addressee styles untruths but which really are not so. This I am convinced is the motive power at the bottom of a large percentage of confessions. The next point is that where more than one person are engaged in a crime and are arrested, each one fears that the other will tell on him and he wants to be first in the field with his statement.

This is a striking feature in dacoities and similar crimes.

Another thing that prompts the majority of confessions is that the accused thinks that by confessing he has a better chance of the Sirkar taking a more lenient view of his case. I am absolutely convinced—after having given many hours' reflection to the matter—that to do away with confessions would prevent the greater number of serious offences being detected at all. In the present state of unrest in India such a step would in my opinion be nothing short of a fatal error. Moreover, such a step would be a fatal blow to the prestige and position of the police in India who—looking at the late charges against them in Calcutta—have lately been seriously depreciated. It is their duty to detect crime, and after all if an accused person is foolish enough to give himself away by confessing he has only himself to blame. At the same time if I ever had a suspicion that a confession had been extorted by improper means I would insist on the fullest inquiry, and, if the offender were guilty, would punish him with the utmost severity.

With regard to the second point submitted in paragraph 4—

In my opinion a third class magistrate is as qualified as one of a higher grade to take a confession. To deprive them of this power would in my opinion be to cast a certain slur upon them.

The sections of the Criminal Procedure Code and the rules are plain enough to the poorest understanding and I would deprecate such an alteration as is suggested.

If it can be worked, I see no objection to ordering that, after his confession, the accused be not placed again in police custody.

In conclusion I do not see how the Bombay rules can be improved upon and would suggest that they be adopted in toto in all the other Presidencies and Burma.

LOUIS P. RUSSELL.

The first question proposed in the letter of the Government of India "in connection with confessions is whether, on a balance of advantages and disadvantages, it pays to have them recorded at all, before the trial commences, except in very special circumstances, and by order of the District Magistrate." In my opinion, it will pay. Experience shows that in a large majority of cases, in which confessions have been recorded before trial, they have been retracted at the trial and that the retraction is due, where the accused is defended by counsel or pleader, to legal advice, and where he is not so defended, to his consciousness that, since he is going to be tried and is called upon to defend, the safest course for him is to let the prosecution prove its case and try his luck. What will happen, therefore, if the proposal in question passes into law, is that in almost every case the accused will not confess after trial has begun. And this result will have an unfortunate effect on the detection and punishment of crime in a country where the first and greatest difficulty in this respect has long been felt to lie in the passivity of the people, who will not willingly come forward to help the police, to give evidence and bring a criminal to justice.

Further, the proposal is open to this objection that "special circumstances," under which alone it is suggested a confession should be recorded, is a vague term. No doubt the District Magistrate is, according to the proposal, to determine whether "special circumstances" exist. If what in some quarters is alleged is true, viz., that the police are corrupt and extort confessions, it will not be difficult for police officers to make out special circumstances and get the District Magistrate's order in almost every case. They have only to satisfy him that it is impossible to get independent evidence, because witnesses are reluctant to come forward. And such a case may easily be made out in a large number of crimes committed, having regard to the passivity of the people in this country. What District Magistrate will deem it expedient to refuse to give an order, if the police come and say: "Sir, it is so difficult to get to the bottom of this offence, unless you permit the accused's confession to be recorded. Or else the crime will go undetected"? Will the District Magistrate in such a case take the responsibility on himself and let the police shirk theirs on the ground that the District Magistrate has made the crime impossible to detect?

Such a proposal would be indeed welcome and I should endorse, if all that has been alleged against the police at this day were either wholly or mostly true. I have no intimate knowledge of the state of things in this respect in the parts of India other than the Presidency of Bombay. Confining myself to this Presidency, I venture to think that the police to-day are an improvement on what they were, say, 15 or 20, or 30 years ago. In the first place, our policemen have been, generally speaking, drawn from among the people of whom they form a part socially. That gives them the advantage of local knowledge and sympathy. Secondly, corruption is very much less now than it used to be in the police, and the native police force in its higher grades is officered by men better in point of education and enlightenment than their predecessors of, say, a quarter of a century ago. Thirdly, the severity with which policemen who have been found to have extorted confessions are punished by the Courts has, I believe, proved a great deterrent. In this Presidency at any rate I have observed during the period of my judicial experience, that there has been no remissness on the part of those at the head of the police to bring to justice police officers found torturing accused persons for the purpose of extorting confessions. And in this connection I should call attention to the significant fact that during these three or four years, though in and outside the House of Commons grave charges have been made against the police and they have been assailed, responsible police officers at the head of the Department have not been slow to detect and bring to justice cases of police extortion. This shows that there is a wholesome feeling growing in the police force, that its higher officers are alive to their responsibility, and are not given to shielding their department, where public interests and welfare are concerned.

It has been remarked in some quarters that the readiness with which illiterate and ignorant persons accused of crime confess in a large number of cases at the beginning of police investigation and retract the confession later on when trial has commenced shows that those confessions are, generally, the result of police torture or influence. This remark ignores one fact which is patent to any one who knows the character of our people, especially the illiterate and ignorant portion of them. In ordinary life we find that when a servant is suspected of anything wrong, he will first deny but after a little questioning, he will give evasive answers and at last admit. The fact is our people cannot successfully conceal their acts or motives. Hence it is that when a man who has committed a crime is arrested, he will after a little questioning, make a clean breast of it. The unsophisticated man in this country may be given to lying, but he does not know, because he has not learnt, the art of persisting in his lie and keeping his own counsel so as to mislead others for any length of time.

If these facts are borne in mind, I think Government will perceive that it will not conduce to the better administration of justice to do away with the recording of confessions except after trial has commenced. Such a restriction will hamper justice and only succeed in promoting crime.

Nor can I approve of the proposal to forbid absolutely the production of prisoners before magistrates of the third class and to give power only to the magistrate having jurisdiction in the case or at least to a first class, or specially selected, second class magistrate. What is the complaint against magistrates of the third-class? They are no longer the inefficient men that their predecessors years ago were. They are drawn from the educated classes; they know the people. And if a magistrate, whatever his class, knows his duty, he can by careful inquiry of the prisoner brought to him, after taking all prudent and necessary precautions, find out whether in confessing, he is speaking voluntarily and telling the truth or is telling a story manipulated by the police. All depends on the kind of men chosen as magistrate, not on the class or grade they occupy. I venture to think our magistrates of the third class are upon the whole intelligent men who know what it is to record a confession and what responsibility it entails.

As to the proposals to make it an absolute rule that once a prisoner has confessed, he should in no circumstance be given back into police custody, and that before a confession is recorded, an accused person should have spent at least one night out of police custody, I have to say this. All such rules are good and will serve as useful safeguards, so far as they go. But it should be remembered that our Courts in dealing with confessions look to all the surrounding circumstances and act upon them only when they are satisfied that there has been nothing suspicious about the conditions in and under which a confession was recorded. If a few rules by way of restrictions are made, some magistrates and judges are apt to think that that is all they have to look to before accepting or rejecting a confession. The matter is one which after all has to be left to the sound discretion of the Court. Our Evidence Act has wisely provided that a Court should not act upon or admit as evidence a confession which appears to it to have been extorted. The use of the word appear, as contrasted with the word proved in the Evidence Act, shows how large a discretion is given to the Court. And whatever rules are made, however fine they may look on paper, all must depend on the one hand on the soundness of judgment of those who administer justice and on the personnel of the police force on the other. It is improvement in these directions that alone can effectually remove such abuses as exist. These abuses have lessened considerably owing to the improvement made in those directions.

N. G. CHANDAVARKAR.

The 18th September 1911.

The only question in this letter from the Government of India on which I hold a very definite opinion is the question "whether, on a balance of advantages and disadvantages, it pays to have confessions recorded at all." I am decidedly of opinion that it does pay, in the sense that it materially aids what I conceive to be the principal object of criminal law and procedure, namely, the detection and punishment of offenders. I would not object to any reasonable method of still further safeguarding confessions, but I am of opinion that to rule them all out as inadmissible in evidence is quite unnecessary and would be little short of disastrous.

2. If that heroic step was ever to have been taken, it should have been taken many years ago. There is no necessity for it now in the Bombay Presidency, where, as I believe, police oppression in extorting confessions is already of rare occurrence, and is every year becoming rarer.

3. It is worth observing that in this country, so far as my observation goes, there is virtually no public opinion in favour of the law as against the individual criminal: that he is "a poor man with a family" or "is not likely to do it again" is popularly a grave and serious argument for the offender's escape. And I cannot doubt that to a large number of the persons who conduct the campaign against the police and confessions it is a matter of serene indifference whether offenders against the criminal law go unpunished or not. That, however, is not a view which is possible to a civilised Government responsible for law and order; such a Government cannot lightly throw away a useful weapon in a country where their armoury against crime is necessarily meagre and imperfect.

4. That such is in fact the position of an Indian Government is manifest; the causes operating to produce this effect are, or should be, so obvious to any one discussing the problem that I will allude only to one of them. Our criminal law, which (for historical reasons quite apart from India) is extraordinarily tender to an accused person, depends for its success on the realisation of the underlying assumption that the citizen is willing to help the State, willing to give information of crime brought to his knowledge, willing to give information of crime brought to his knowledge, willing to give evidence in Court against the accused. This assumption is grotesquely untrue in India, where (I speak as my experience suggests) the only willing witness is the false witness or the personally interested witness. That is one great and constant difficulty in the way of the police in this country, where the sense of any communal interest has not yet developed.

5. There are many other difficulties equally familiar. I have no time to refer to them, nor should it be necessary to do so. It is obvious, I think, that if, in the hands of an experienced magistracy and judiciary, confessions are of real assistance in securing the punishment of crime, they ought not to be abandoned. On this point one can speak only from his own experience: my experience is that in numerous cases the existence of a confession which, though afterwards retracted, was, to my mind, clearly voluntary and true, has turned the scale, enabling me, with clear conscience and convinced mind, to convict the offender of his guilt.

6. I entirely deny that considerations adduced from English life and English characteristics can properly be appealed to as guides in this matter. In England, it is constantly said, the criminal generally does not confess. Quite so. It is not the English way (if one excludes special crimes of passion). But I believe that the normal Indian is far more prone to confess. I believe that, conscious of his own guilt, and suddenly confronted by authority, specially if that authority be armed with the smallest piece of apparent proof, the Indian is apt to collapse and confess, where the Englishman with centuries of different training behind him would harden his heart and make no sign.

7. For these and many similar reasons, including the skill and trustworthiness of our superior magistrates and our judges, I should record my vote decidedly against the proposal to make all confessions inadmissible.

8. But I quite agree that no effort should be spared (as, I believe, none is spared now) to drive home to the Indian police constantly and continuously that their first business is to work for the collection of evidence, not for the obtaining of confessions. I would agree even with the Meerut rule that a confessing prisoner should not be taken before a magistrate to have his confession recorded until he has been examined by the Superintendent of Police or his Assistant; indeed my own opinion has long been that, in the case of any confession, of any serious offence, the intervention of a gazetted officer of police might with advantage be more frequent than it now is.

9. I also see no objection to the proposal that the power to record confessions should be reserved to first class magistrates or the magistrate having jurisdiction in the case.

S. L. BATCHELOR.

The Government of India have ascertained that the Hon'ble Chief Justice Sir Basil Scott entirely agrees with the opinion recorded by the Hon'ble Justice Batchelor.

I am and for the last twenty years have been strongly of opinion (a) that retracted confessions should be excluded altogether, (b) that we should delete section 24 from the Evidence Act. As the law stands Sessions Judges in the mufassal are required to do violence to their conscience or intellect every time they admit a retracted confession.

2. For every Sessions Judge of any experience, who knows the native, would upon rigorous self-examination, I think, admit that the average mufassal criminal would never confess if left entirely to himself. In fact he confesses literally in shoals. The Sessions Judge of experience who knows the mufassal police as well as he knows the native, in his heart knows very well WHY.

3. It is in my opinion safe to say that, excepting violent crimes, what I call passional crimes, when the murderer is half mad, or actually proud of what he has done, all other retracted confessions have been directly or indirectly induced by improper means. It is impossible within the limits of a readable note to exhaust the reasoning by which I hope I could convince any reasonable and unprejudiced man of the certain truth of this conclusion. Where actual torture is not used, the widespread belief that it ordinarily is used upon obstinate suspects, and the knowledge that it will be used, may induce a number of criminals who would not otherwise confess to do so in anticipation of the methods they dread being employed upon them. This is as far as any reasonable man, who is acquainted with the conditions prevailing in the remoter parts of the mufassal, would go in the way of concession to those who believe that all the confessions made by prisoners while in police custody and uniformly retracted at the Sessions trial, are voluntary. And I may add that the opinions of Judges whose experience has been restricted to the criminals and police of the Presidency towns, is relatively valueless on this point. They do not know and cannot know what goes on in the mufassal. I feel that I must enter this protest because I anticipate that judged by numbers only, I shall be in a minority, if not altogether alone, amongst my learned brethren of the High Courts. I have devoted much thought to this subject for many years, have written much upon it, and have had ampler opportunities than most of my colleagues for gaining experience at first hand.

4. Those who contend that if we abolish retracted confessions we might as well abolish the Penal Code really mean that it is necessary to admit confessions that have been improperly induced. I am not concerned now with that point, though as I began by saying this is the only logical alternative to excluding retracted confessions altogether. But let us be frank about it. Further I dispute the broad proposition. I deny that it is true. I believe that after a year or two, we should be able to convict as many accused persons without the need of retracted and deeply tainted confessions as we are now able to do with that questionable aid. I go further: I believe we should convict more. First because a retracted confession always has a most damaging effect upon a prosecution where a case is tried by jury. Next because by excluding this time-honoured and much-valued weapon, we should put the police on more intelligent and vigorously prosecuted enquiry. They might be expected by degrees to become more efficient in that department of their duty in which, in the mufassal, they are now most backward—Detection.

5. The average low caste native of this country is not by common consent addicted to the truth. Why is it that the average criminal who is drawn from this class, should suddenly show himself a marked exception and volunteer the truth.....to the police.....in a matter where he is most vitally interested in concealing it. Why should the most untruthful people in the world become in one set of conditions and one only, the most confessing people in the world? And why again should this phase coincide precisely with the period during which they are helplessly at the mercy of the mufassal police? Surely the answer is only too plain. With respect to those who allow themselves to hold and express the opinion that the native of India is "prone to confess," I must say emphatically that in my judgment such a generalization cannot be sustained. It can only be supported by referring to the disproportionately large number of confessions supplied by our criminal courts, and assuming that these are all voluntary. It is hardly necessary to point out that this is begging the question. I answer shortly that these confessions are not voluntary, and therefore do not afford any proof that the native is prone to confess.

6. The theory of moral collapse much in vogue with those who contend that these retracted confessions are voluntary, is as inadequate as, in my opinion, it is absurd. The average native criminal is utterly devoid of nerves, in the Western sense, and left to himself would certainly not suffer from any "moral collapse" merely because he was arrested upon a charge which he knows could not be brought home to him without his own assistance. What he does suffer from is sheer, well-grounded terror of what may be and in all human probability is in store for him, if he refuses to confess when the police exhort him to do so.

7. It is a commonplace that the conditions of police work here differ widely from those prevailing in England. Here the police get hardly any assistance from the people themselves. At home every one who can, is ready and willing to help the detection of crime. The villager dreads being involved in a criminal case, almost as much as being accused of having committed the offence. It means that he may be dragged away from his fields for weeks and kept hanging about Magistrates and Sessions' Courts, and exposed all the time to police pressure on one side, and the pressure of personal influences on the other. The remedy for this might be found in local assizes, bringing the trial of local crimes to the doors of the people where they were committed. But from a theoretical point of view, this kind of argument resolves itself into this. We cannot detect crime unless criminals confess; therefore let us make them confess, somehow.

8. I accept my brother Hayward's practical suggestion. If for no other reason, because it would prove convincingly and dramatically that I am right upon all my main grounds. If confessions were so restricted, there would be none. I except always those rare cases of passion crime to which I have once referred. And in those cases the confessions are almost always unnecessary. Res ipsa loquitur. So that where confessions are genuine we find that they are superfluous. They ought to be superfluous in all cases.

9. It may be objected that if the police were stopped from extorting confessions, the prisoners would be in no better case. The police would still torture to extort information. That is true. It would be true at least for a year or two after all retracted confessions were excluded. But gradually we might hope to find the police training themselves in detective work and relying less and less upon the traditionary disreputable methods. In England the police do not rely on confessions; as a rule they do not want them and would rather be without them. Yet they obtain convictions. So it would be in India once they were shut off from this easy road to getting them. It is needless to dwell on the farce which is gone through before the third class Magistrate, intended to guarantee the voluntariness of the confession. Everyone knows that it is a farce and that it guarantees nothing.

10. I have no time to examine the persistent confusion of thought which would make the believed truth of a confession, justification for its extortion. Doubtless many true confessions are extorted. But what we are concerned with is the grave reproach cast upon our present system by the need of having recourse to such ways of eliciting the truth. I am most strongly in favour of excluding retracted confessions altogether from Judge and Jury at Sessions trials. Either that or abandoning the rather thin and naive belief that they have all been voluntarily made, and frankly acknowledging that we do not care how they were obtained as long as we believe them to be true. I could adduce a great many more reasons in support of my own position, and in refutation of all arguments to the contrary, but I could not do that satisfactorily within the limits of a note. What I have said will be enough to indicate one or two main lines of reasoning that, followed up, must necessarily lead to a true conclusion.

F. C. O. BEAMAN.

P. S.—I wish to guard myself against being supposed to have attacked in a controversial spirit any of the opinions or reasons of my learned colleagues. I have not seen any of their minutes. I do not know what views they have expressed or what reasons they have given. Mr. Hayward informed me orally of his suggestion.

F. C. O. BEAMAN.

I think the time has fully come for insisting* that the main object of a police investigation should be the collection of evidence and not the extraction of confessions. I should therefore be in favour of limiting the powers of recording confessions to first class Magistrates at head-quarters provided with a prison in the independent charge of the Jail Department; of providing that no confession should be recorded until the prisoner had been at least 24 hours in the independent custody of the officers of the Jail

Department; and of prohibiting remand to police custody after confession except upon the orders of the District Magistrate.

M. H. W. HAYWARD.

9th September 1911.

Enclosure No. 4.

No. 1347-P. D., dated Darjeeling, the 28th May 1912.

From—The Hon'ble Mr. C. J. STEVENSON-MOORE, C.V.O., I.C.S., Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

I am directed to refer to Sir A. Earle's letter Nos. 781—790, dated the 12th July 1911, in which this Government was asked to examine the regulations in force in Bengal regarding the procedure to be followed in the matter of the production before Magistrates of confessing accused persons and the recording of their confessions by such Magistrates, and to suggest, in consultation with the highest judicial authorities, amendments, where necessary, of the existing rules after a consideration of the following specific questions:—

- (i) Whether, on a balance of advantages, and disadvantages, it pays to have confessions recorded at all before the trial commences, except in very special circumstances, and by order of the District Magistrate;
- (ii) Whether, in case it is not considered possible to stop altogether the recording of confessions before trial on the motion of the police, the safeguards which already exist, cannot be made more stringent with a view to maintain the voluntary character of confessions;
- (iii) Whether it is possible to withdraw the power of recording such confessions from Magistrates of the third class and to give it only to the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case, or at least to a first class or specially selected second class Magistrate;
- (iv) Whether it is not feasible to make an absolute rule that once a prisoner has confessed he should in no circumstances be given back into police custody;
- (v) Whether it might not be possible to lay down that, before his confession is recorded, an accused person shall have spent at least one night out of police custody; and
- (vi) Whether it might not be possible to introduce in Bengal the Bombay procedure of questioning a confessing prisoner, when first produced after arrest, as to whether he has suffered ill-treatment at the hands of the police.

2. Selected officers both of the executive and judicial branches of the service and the High Court have been consulted in the matter and their opinions have been subjected to careful scrutiny and consideration by the Governor in Council. I am now to enclose a copy of the High Court's letter on the subject and to submit the views of His Excellency in Council on the suggestions made in the letter under reply.

3. In regard to the first question I am to say that the weight of opinion and notably that of the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court is against the exclusion from evidence of confessions recorded under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code. His Excellency in Council has given the matter his careful consideration and agrees with the High Court that a man alleged to be implicated in a crime should be permitted to make any statement he likes before a trustworthy and experienced Magistrate. The Governor in Council does not deny that abuses exist and that from time to time cases occur in which confessions are alleged or proved to have been obtained by means of violence or threats of violence and in which Magistrates who have recorded confessions have, by neglect of the rules on the subject and by want of the exercise of proper care and intelligence, failed to detect that the confessions were not made voluntarily. It is important, however, not to lose sight of the first principle involved. The object of criminal proceedings is to find out whether persons accused of offences have in fact committed them or not and this result can best be arrived at by examining all the evidence obtainable on the subject. No one is able to give more conclusive evidence as to what was done than the person who did it and any general rule to exclude that person from giving the assistance which he is obviously in a position to give amounts to an artificial obstruction to the attainment of the object for which the whole judicial system has been created. His Excellency in Council, therefore, thinks that the proper course is not summarily to rule out a most important class of evidence, least of all without the support of the high judicial authorities who habitually scrutinise all evidence with the utmost vigilance, and show the greatest anxiety to secure fair play for accused persons, but to try to eradicate such abuses as are known to occur. I am also to observe that the proposals of the Government of India in this matter relate solely to the judicial use of confessions and are not likely, in the opinion of the Governor in Council, to provide a complete remedy for the disease. Most police officers know that a confession is chiefly valuable for the clues which it provides and an unscrupulous police officer in search of clues would not be deterred from ill-treating an accused person by the fact that the accused's statement would not be placed on the record as a confession. His Excellency in Council, therefore, would deprecate the introduction of any such rule as that suggested by the Government of India, but he thinks that steps should be taken to strengthen the existing rules by the provision of further safeguards with a view to maintain the voluntary character of confessions.

4. The following are some of the measures which commend themselves to His Excellency in Council as likely to be helpful in attaining this result. It should be strictly laid down that at the time when a confession is about to be recorded, the officer who brought the confessing prisoner in custody must not be in evidence at all. Again the recording of confessions in open Court during Court hours should be prescribed as the correct practice only to be departed from in exceptional circumstances. Further before recording a confession the Magistrate must impress on the accused that he will not be returned to the custody of the officer who arrested him or brought him before the Magistrate, and that he has nothing to fear at his hands. Finally to impress on Magistrates the importance of satisfying themselves as to the voluntary nature of the confession, the certificate to that effect should not be printed as it is at present on the form on which such statements are usually recorded but should be filled in by hand in each case.

5. The Governor in Council accepts in the main the suggestion of the Government of India that confessions should be recorded only by first class Magistrates. He would only modify it by adding that authority should be given to any Subdivisional Officer as such, whatever his magisterial powers, to record confessions within his subdivision, since it is sometimes necessary to place a Civilian officer not yet endowed with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class in temporary charge of a subdivision, and difficulties would arise if such an officer had not the power to take a confessing prisoner's statement.

6. In regard to the fourth suggestion made by the Government of India the conclusion arrived at by His Excellency the Governor in Council is that, once a prisoner has confessed he should not ordinarily be given back for the verification of his confession except to the charge of a Magistrate but that, when no Magistrate is available, the prisoner may be placed in custody of a police officer not lower in rank than an Inspector of Police of the first or second grade who has had no previous concern with the accused in the case. His Excellency in Council does not think it feasible to prohibit absolutely the remand of a confessing accused to police custody. Such a provision might seriously hamper a perfectly honest investigation and a rule on the lines proposed supplemented by the conditions of section 167, Criminal Procedure Code, should be effectual in preventing abuses.

7. The Governor in Council is prepared to accept the proposal that before a confession is recorded an accused person should have spent at least one night out of police custody, subject to the addition of the words "where practicable." This slight modification seems necessary to provide for cases where a confessing accused is taken before a Subdivisional Officer when he is out in camp and far removed from head-quarters.

8. Finally with regard to the last suggestion made in your letter under reference I am to point out that the Bombay rules do not seem to provide as is stated for the questioning of a confessing prisoner when first produced before a Magistrate as to whether he has suffered ill-treatment at the hands of the police and such a procedure is, in the opinion of the Governor in Council, to be deprecated, since it would invite complaints. His Excellency in Council considers that the requirements of the case would be met by the imposition of a rule directing that the Jail Superintendent must examine medically a confessing prisoner immediately on his admission to the jail as a matter of routine, and that if any marks are discovered the medical report should be forwarded at the same time as the confessing prisoner to the Magistrate, who will record the confession.

Enclosure No. 4 (i).

No. 75, dated Calcutta, the 29th February 1912.

From—R. L. Ross, Esq., I.C.S., Registrar of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, Appellate Side.

To—The Secretary to the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam. Revenue and General Dept.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 2844-Pl., dated the 24th August 1911, with which you forwarded a copy of a letter No. 781-790, dated the 12th July 1911, and enclosures, from the Government of India in the Home Department, regarding the procedure to be followed both in the production before Magistrates of accused persons to have their confessions recorded, and in the recording by Magistrates of the confessions of persons so produced. You requested that the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam might be favoured with the expression of the views of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice and Judges on the subject.

High Court.

PRESENT :
The full Court.

1. In reply I am to say that the first question on which the opinion of the Court is asked is whether, on a balance of advantages and disadvantages, it is desirable to have confessions recorded at all, before the trial commences except in very special circumstances and by order of the District Magistrate. In the opinion of the Judges, the answer to this question should be in the affirmative. They think that any man who is alleged to be implicated in a crime should, if he so desires, be permitted to make any statement either admitting his guilt or explaining any facts or circumstances which appear to inculcate him, and to have that statement recorded by a trustworthy and experienced Magistrate.

2. The next point raised in Sir Archdale Earle's letter touches the safeguards which exist and suggests that they may be made more stringent. On this point the Court recommends that the statement made by an accused person should ordinarily be recorded by a Magistrate who has jurisdiction to try or enquire into the case. Only in the event of such a Magistrate not being available should a junior or an Honorary Magistrate be allowed to record it. No police officer who has been engaged in the investigation should be allowed to be present when the statement is recorded and only those officers who may be necessary to guard the prisoner.

3. The Judges think that the practice of verifying confessions should be carefully limited and should be confined to a verification of the facts which have been stated by the prisoner. Cases have been brought to notice in which the so-called verification has been used as a means of obtaining admissions to corroborate facts which have come to light after the confession has been made. This practice should be discontinued, and a verification for the purpose of amplifying a confession should not be allowed. A verification of a confession should be entrusted to an experienced Magistrate who should accompany the accused to the places referred to by him and his proceedings should be restricted to the verification and discovery of facts and local features which themselves either prove or disprove the truth of the statement. The investigating police officer should not be present at the time of the verification and only sufficient police guard to prevent the prisoner from escaping.

4. The Judges think that the practice of verifying confessions should be carefully limited and should be confined to a verification of the facts which have been stated by the prisoner. Cases have been brought to notice in which the so-called verification has been used as a means of obtaining admissions to corroborate facts which have come to light after the confession has been made. This practice should be discontinued, and a verification for the purpose of amplifying a confession should not be allowed. A verification of a confession should be entrusted to an experienced Magistrate who should accompany the accused to the places referred to by him and his proceedings should be restricted to the verification and discovery of facts and local features which themselves either prove or disprove the truth of the statement. The investigating police officer should not be present at the time of the verification and only sufficient police guard to prevent the prisoner from escaping.

5. Where the prisoner alleges that improper influence, physical or moral, has been brought to bear on him to induce a confession, the charge should be promptly investigated; and where physical violence is said to have been used, the prisoner should be examined at once by a medical officer.

6. In conclusion the Judges desire to suggest that the best safeguard against the acceptance of an untrue confession improperly obtained will be found in the care and ability displayed by the Magistrate who is entrusted with the duty of recording it. They think that no advantage would be gained by a further elaboration of the rules in force in this province regulating the procedure to be followed after the prisoner has been brought into the presence of the Magistrate. The only essential is that the Magistrate who records the statement shall be an officer of intelligence and experience sufficient to enable him to determine whether it is a free and voluntary confession and not a statement which is the result of outside influence.

Enclosure No. 5.

No. 1532, dated Naini Tal, the 8th May 1912.

From—S. P. O'DONNELL, Esq., Secretary to the Government of the United Provinces, Judicial Dept.,
To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

I am directed to reply to Home Department letter No. 781-790, dated Simla, the 13th July 1911, on the question of the procedure to be followed both in the production before Magistrates of accused persons to have their confessions recorded and recording by Magistrates of confessions made by persons so produced. In that letter the Lieutenant-Governor was requested to examine the Provincial regulations on the subject and submit a report with specific suggestions for amendment and to invite the views of the high judicial authorities.

The practice in this province is contained in orders 851 to 853, Manual of Government Orders, and in the Police Regulations:—

United Provinces Manual of Government Orders.

"851. Every confession which a person in police custody wishes to make should be recorded by the highest magistrate short of the District Magistrate who can be reached in a reasonable time."

"852. Magistrates should comply carefully with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code with regard to the recording of confessions or statements made by accused persons. Section 164 requires that no magistrate shall record a confession unless, upon questioning the person making it, he has reason to believe that it will be made voluntarily. No confession, therefore, should be recorded until the magistrate has thoroughly satisfied himself by all reasonable means that the person before him has not been subjected to improper influences of any kind, and that the statement he is about to make will be his own free and spontaneous statement. The magistrate should also, in addition to the memorandum prescribed by the section, record the fact that he has duly questioned the prisoner for the above purpose, and should further state briefly his reasons for believing the confession to have been made voluntarily. In no case, if possible, should the police, who have been concerned in the investigation or who have arrested the accused, be present while the latter is questioned and his statement taken down; a note that this precaution has been taken should also be put on the record."

NOTE.—Care should be taken that the memorandum required by section 164 is added.

"853. In view of the special importance of securing a trustworthy and correct record of any confession made in cases of organized dakaiti, a confession by one of a gang of dakaitis should, wherever the circumstances permit it, be recorded by an experienced and well-qualified officer. The task requires patience and judgment, and instances have occurred of its being inefficiently performed. Confessions in important cases of dakaiti made under section 164, Criminal Procedure Code, should, therefore, be recorded by the District Magistrate or by a European magistrate of some standing, preferably the joint magistrate of the district in whatever part of the district the dakaiti may have taken place. The same principle may with advantage be observed in regard to other serious criminal cases."

Paragraph III, United Provinces Police Regulations.

"Before having a confession recorded it is advisable to test the truth of it; if not supported by strong corroborative evidence it may be of little value in court though recorded before a magistrate. The main use of a true confession is to determine the direction of the investigation."

"Every confession which a person in police custody wishes to make shall be recorded by the highest magistrate short of the District Magistrate who can be reached in a reasonable time. The higher the rank of the magistrate recording a confession, the greater is its value in evidence."

2. I am to enclose copies of the opinions of the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court and of the Judicial Commissioner and of the Additional Judicial Commissioners of Oudh and to state the views of His Honour upon the subject.

3. I am to draw attention to the following remarks in the resolution on the work of the police in the United Provinces in 1907:—

"The Lieutenant-Governor's experience from the cases that have come before him on applications for remission or commutations of sentence strongly bears out the view that investigating officers too frequently overlook the necessity of obtaining evidence to corroborate facts ascertained from the confessions made by accused persons. The practice ordinarily followed seems to be to endeavour to get some admission from the accused person at as early a stage in the investigation as possible. Once this has been obtained the investigating officer is apt not to worry himself too much in making an exhaustive investigation: at some later stage of the proceedings before the courts the accused person withdraws his confession. Nothing could be more unsatisfactory than this system of investigation which begins at the wrong end. The proper course for the investigating officer to pursue is to test every possible theory for the commission of the crime by investigating and analysing every fact that becomes available. If, as the net is drawn closer round an individual by the ascertainment of facts that bring the case home to him, he elects to confess, the confession adds confirmation to the evidence already collected. But the process of beginning the case by securing some admission from an accused person instead of first endeavouring to procure all the direct or circumstantial evidence that may be available is certain to shake the confidence of the courts in the results of the investigation by the police. In the Lieutenant-Governor's opinion there is no matter connected with police administration that demands reform more urgently than this."

The following passage occurs in Mr. Trethewy's report on the police administration in the United Provinces in 1909:—

"It is very hard to eradicate the tendency of subordinate police officers to rely too much on confessions. This is a question which has engaged the earnest attention of the Deputy Inspector-General and myself. I have gone through the proceedings in many cases leading to acquittals of important offences, such as dakkaiti and murder, in order to look out for defects in the action of the police and can say that most superintendents are now alive to the necessity of exercising caution before allowing a confession to be recorded and accepted as the basis of the investigation. Mr. H. G. Richardson and Mr. B. M. Hamilton may be specially mentioned as taking great pains in this direction. The Magistrate of Meerut remarks: 'I am rapidly coming to the opinion that it would be better for police work if confessions were entirely inadmissible in evidence. The tendency to try and get some sort of a confession and then to build up evidence around it seems inevitable. Undoubtedly the cleverer criminal now realizes that all he has to do to ensure his comfort when tackled is to confess, and that he is practically certain of acquittal when he retracts later on. I have long ago stopped tahsildars or local magistrates from recording confessions.' The Superintendent of Police at Meerut has issued an order that no confessions are to be recorded till the accused has been produced before him. The Commissioner endorses the views of these two officers as to the harm done by confessions. These opinions and orders seem sound as applying to the kind of confession obtained during the course of an investigation, and when a gazetted officer supervises the proceedings of the police in which a person has confessed it is certainly advisable that he should see the accused apart from the subordinate police and question him carefully to determine whether his statement is true. There is however another kind of confession often made in murder cases, specially when the motive of the crime has been jealousy; the murderer rushes off hot foot to the police-station and reports all the circumstances of his guilt; on such an occasion there is no harm in getting his statement recorded by the nearest magistrate, for if he is left to get cool he may think better of his original intentions to welcome punishment. With reference to confessions of the first kind there are two points which the police are prone to overlook. The first is that the confession, if true, may be more useful as giving a direction to the course of the investigation than as a piece of evidence; it shows the police which line to follow and where to look for proof. The second is that especially in a dakaiti or gang case the confession should not be accepted as a whole till all the details have been checked as much as possible. Many a prosecution has failed because a confession, true in the main, is false in some particulars."

The comment made on this passage in the Government resolution was—

"In this connection it will be useful to consider the vexed question of how far confessions should be allowed to affect the work of police. It is impossible to lay down more than very general rules on this subject. It is absolutely necessary that the subordinate police should be made to understand that no sort of pressure, direct or indirect, is to be put upon persons to make them confess. His Honour sees no reason to suppose that there is anything like a general practice of putting pressure upon persons to make them confess. It has been broadly suggested in some quarters that such a practice exists, and some persons have gone so far as to imply that the use of physical torture is by no means uncommon. The Lieutenant-Governor is unable to find that the facts support these allegations. Occasionally it is discovered that confessions have been improperly obtained; but there is no justification for a general charge against the police of this province of using illegal and improper methods to extort confessions. His Honour considers that it would be exceedingly difficult for torture to be inflicted by a police officer in any case without certain risks of detection, and the fact that in hardly any instance has such torture been proved goes to show that the allegations of persons who assert the existence of such a general habit are without foundation. Even when a confession is made spontaneously and without any pressure being placed upon the person making it, it frequently leads to subsequent bad work in investigation. Too often an investigating officer considers that, once a confession has been obtained, the case is over. The real value of a confession is the clue it gives for carrying on the inquiry on right lines. If investigating officers would only recognise this fact less would be heard of cases failing owing to confessions being retracted in courts. This is another matter in which supervision by superior officers is essential. It is on their guidance of the subordinate police, their intelligence in pointing out correct methods and their restraining the use of incorrect methods that success in working out difficult cases must finally depend."

4. These remarks sufficiently indicate the place that the confession should in the opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor take in the work of investigation. The following instructions were issued in the form of a circular letter to all superintendents of police, dated the 15th July 1908, by the Inspector-General of Police, to impress the importance of these principles:—

"There is a growing tendency on the part of the police to deal with important cases of murder and other heinous crimes solely on confessions or statements unsupported by material or corroborative evidence. Instead of working on the information so obtained and procuring corroborative evidence, investigating officers generally take immediate steps to have the confession or statement recorded by a magistrate and then consider they have done all that is required in the case. It constantly happens that such confession or statement is subsequently retracted and, there being little evidence available, the case breaks down in court.

Superintendents of police must do all in their power to instil sounder methods of working into their subordinates, and in order to ensure that this is done in all important cases, it is desirable that the services of assistant and deputy superintendents should be freely utilized in supervising investigations.

The subordinate police will welcome the assistance that these officers can render them in the handling of such enquiries, and in any case this step will ensure that the investigation is thorough and complete.

Deputy Inspectors-General should, when inspecting districts, satisfy themselves that these orders are carried out, and should note in their inspection reports the number of cases in which assistant superintendents and deputy superintendents have been entrusted with investigations.

The subject should be noted on in the district annual reports."

There is reason to believe that the instructions given are being followed intelligently and that the defects found in 1907 are disappearing.

5. The next point to be considered is the manner in which a confession should be recorded. I am to suggest that what is required is a record of a confession which will, in practically all cases, prove itself as spontaneous and unimpeachable, or the reverse. The two main objects to be attained are to guard against improper pressure being put upon the person confessing, and to secure that, if improper pressure has not been put upon the person confessing, he shall not usually be able to retract his confession successfully.

6. This subject has already been considered by Sir John Hewett, and in October 1910 he examined closely the procedure adopted in recording confessions in this province.

The view which he took was that while it is for the Government to modify rules affecting matters of an executive nature such as those regarding custody of under-trial prisoners, directions as to the manner in which judicial officers should exercise their functions as courts of justice can only emanate from the chief judicial tribunals. This is the view which is accepted by the Government of India in the letter under reply. Although the Lieutenant-Governor considered that a modification of the procedure under which judicial officers recorded confessions was for many reasons desirable, there did not then seem to him to be sufficient grounds on which he could approach the highest judicial authorities on the subject. Conditions have since altered, and now that the opinions of the judicial authorities have been taken and their views are found to be in general accord with his own, His Honour proposes to make certain suggestions to the High Court and the Judicial Commissioner with the object of regulating and improving the procedure in vogue.

7. The Lieutenant-Governor considers it desirable that a rule should be made that no confession shall be recorded except by a magistrate of the first class or specially selected magistrate of the second class, and that it should be recorded, whenever possible, by the magistrate who decides the case or commits the case for trial. The suggestion will be placed before the High Court and the Judicial Commissioner. The employment of a tahsildar as the officer before whom confessions are recorded appears to the Lieutenant-Governor to be usually undesirable. It is not likely that there will be any inconvenience caused by prohibiting tahsildars from recording such confessions. There are now only 96 out of 216 tahsils which are not on a line of railway, and in the circumstances it will not in most cases entail any appreciable delay if an accused person who desires to confess is conveyed from a tahsil to headquarters. It will further be suggested that the magistrate shall first examine the accused, noting whether he is suffering from excitement, whether he appears tired, worn out or restless and generally whether he is in a normal and ordinary condition for a man of his class, and examine him closely for bruises or other marks of injury. It will be also proposed that a medical man, if procurable, should also examine the man thoroughly, and that the magistrate should make a careful and detailed note, stating the result of his examination, and adding to it the written note of the medical examination, if any. The Lieutenant-Governor will further suggest that in no case should the police, who have been concerned in the investigation or who have arrested the accused, be present while the latter is questioned and his statement taken down, and that the magistrate should, if possible, keep the prisoner for some time in his court, in other than police custody, after all police officers connected with the case have been excluded, so that any influence which may have been brought to bear on the prisoner may have a chance of being lessened or destroyed.

8. The Lieutenant-Governor will also suggest that questions in the following or some similar form should be put to the prisoner by the magistrate, the actual questions to be varied or amplified at his discretion, subject to the necessary condition that every question that is put must be recorded :

Q.—Do you understand that you will not return again to or go near the police officers connected with this case?

Q.—Are you making a statement of your own free will?

Q.—Have you been ill-treated in any way by the police or anyone else in order to make you confess?

Q.—Are you afraid that anyone will do you an injury if you do not confess?

Q.—Has a police officer or anyone else told you that you will gain anything if you do confess?

Q.—Do you hope to gain anything if you do confess?

Q.—Has a police officer or anyone else given you anything you wanted to make you confess?

Q.—Do you understand the position clearly? You have nothing to hope or fear from the police officers you have previously been with. You are not going near them again. They cannot help you or injure you. I promise you nothing. I do not promise you a pardon, or any mitigation of sentence. I have no reason for supposing that you will be pardoned or have your sentence reduced if you are guilty because you are confessing. Do you wish to make a statement?

Q.—What have you to say?

The suggestion will continue that, after fully satisfying himself that the prisoner is desirous of making a genuine confession, the magistrate should proceed to record his statement, as nearly as possible verbatim, and to ask any questions necessary to explain or even to amplify the confession made and should carefully record every question put, and that finally he should append a certificate to the effect that all the instructions above suggested have been fully carried out, recording his reasons for any deviation from them, and stating fully his reasons for believing the confession to have been a genuine one, if such be his conviction. It will further be suggested that when the confession is over the magistrate will have it carefully read to the man, and then send him in custody of police officers other than those connected with the case to the nearest magistrate's lock-up.

9. The Lieutenant-Governor will consider separately the necessity for providing restrictions to the restoration of a confessing prisoner to police custody. It may be possible to arrange that in no circumstances will such a person ever remain in police custody after he has made a confession with a provision that the police, if they wish, can interview him afterwards in the presence of the jail authorities, and that, further, when a man is sent up to confess and refuses to confess he will not be sent back to police custody. It may not, however, be possible to prohibit absolutely the detention of such persons by the police in any circumstances, but every attempt will be made, even if the prohibition be not made absolute, to reduce the occasions and the period of such detention to a minimum.

10. The question of confessions is connected intimately with the question of remands to the custody of the police. The Police Commission referred in paragraph 166 of their report to informal arrests. One of the abuses most difficult to eradicate from police work is the tendency of the police to keep a man in illegal detention and practically under arrest and to describe this procedure as the detention of him under observation. The practice was formerly common. It has been on the wane in this province for years and is gradually (though slowly) dying out. Sir John Hewett is of opinion that if the legal authority to remand in police custody were taken away the practice would again increase. The time when torture is to be apprehended is not the time after the man has been placed under legal arrest. For it becomes easy to bring home proof against an offending police officer by marks of torture. The opportunity for torture arises before legal arrest takes place, and the abolition of such remands, so far from assisting the suppression of torture by the police, would be likely to interfere with the discovery and the proof of this form of crime. At the same time the Lieutenant-Governor considers that remands for as long as fifteen days are unnecessary in places where communications are as good as they generally are in the United Provinces, and he would like to see the law altered so as to limit remands to police custody to a period of seven days except in more backward tracts and elsewhere under the express orders of the District Magistrate. A modification in the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure will be required before this object can be effected, but as the question of amending the Code is now under the consideration of the Government of India the present will be a suitable occasion for consideration of this proposal. It also seems desirable to Sir John Hewett that during such remands to police custody the superintendent of police should have the opportunity of satisfying himself by examining a person who is said to be willing to confess that his subordinates have not abused their powers in this respect. With the above modifications the power to remand to police custody may be retained with advantage. Amongst other reasons which can be advanced for its retention in a restricted form, one stands out especially. If effect is to be given to the intelligent procedure suggested in the report of 1909 by Mr. Trethewy, to which reference has been already made, for the guidance of police officers in obtaining and recording confession—a procedure which in the opinion of His Honour provides admirably for the prevention of false confessions and confessions obtained in an improper manner—a certain degree of latitude must be permitted to the police to retain accused persons on certain occasions in their own custody, and in many cases in which the superintendent of police is not at headquarters it will be necessary for investigating officers to retain the accused person in their own custody in order to bring him before the superintendent.

11. The Lieutenant-Governor is inclined to deprecate the addition of further restrictions. He is in absolute agreement with the learned Judges of the High Court and the Judicial Commissioner and the Additional Judicial Commissioner of Oudh that it will be inadvisable to forbid the recording of confessions before the trial commences except in very special circumstances and by the order of the District Magistrate.

12. There is, the Lieutenant-Governor is convinced, sufficient reality in the confession to justify its retention generally, if recorded by a responsible magistrate, and provided that precautions are adopted to ensure that the accused is not exposed to ill-treatment or fear of ill-treatment by the police after he has made his confession or has refused to make a confession before a magistrate. The confession should, whenever possible, be recorded before the magistrate who will hold the inquiry or trial, but provision must be made for cases where this is not possible without unreasonable delay.

13. Sir John Hewett is satisfied after consulting judicial officers of all grades and as a result of observing a very large number of confessions in judicial records which have come before him in applications for clemency of remission of sentence or otherwise that the cases of genuine confessions by Indian criminals are comparatively numerous. It is largely a matter of temperament and environment. For one thing, crimes of passion are much more common in India than in England. For another, the influence of public opinion in an Indian village has more effect on an Indian villager than any public opinion in England on an Englishman. For a third, the people are more emotional and superstitious. Given these causes, it cannot be regarded as surprising that confessions are volunteered in this country to an extent which would seem hardly credible in England. But if comparison were made with a continental country, such as Italy, it would probably be found that the difference was less striking. Some of the reasons which make for a large number of confessions in India make also for their subsequent retraction. The mental condition which drives a criminal to unburden himself is naturally more intense amongst the unbalanced peasants who for the most part commit crimes of passion in this province. But the frenzy which induced such a criminal to exalt his crime or the impulse which impels declaration to obtain a momentary respite is succeeded frequently in such an organization by a reaction under the influence of which the instinct of self-preservation reasserts itself. Under the second influence retraction follows. In addition, the retraction of confession is greatly influenced in this country by the practice of placing under-trial prisoners in close communication with each other in the police lock-up. And once a man has been remanded to the jail lock-up inter-communication between under-trial prisoners and men under sentence becomes practically unavoidable whatever the regulations may be. In the circumstances retraction is not surprising, and does not in any way necessarily reflect on the genuineness of the original confession.

14. I am to add that Sir John Hewett is of opinion that, while the imposition of conditions of the nature suggested will afford sufficient protection for the present, the way should be left open for subsequent consideration of the advisability of altering the law to enable accused persons to give evidence in the same manner as they now give evidence in England. Experience in England has shown that the admission of prisoners' evidence has operated in the interests of the innocent, and in the furtherance of justice, and he sees no reason why action on similar lines should not be adopted with advantage in India, although it is likely that such a change in the law would be opposed here by much the same interests as opposed it in Great Britain.

15. The opinions of the high judicial authorities who have been consulted go to show that they attach no importance to the mere fact that a confession has been retracted, provided that it has been recorded in the circumstances which safeguard its genuineness and its accuracy. It is not the experience of His Honour that the courts of this province attach no weight to a retracted confession per se or that simply because it has been retracted they demand additional evidence which would in itself be sufficient for a conviction in absence of a confession. The courts of this province usually take confessions for what they are properly worth. They take retractions for what they are properly worth, and judge the value of a retracted confession on reasonable principles.

Enclosure No. 5 (i).

No. 2258-XIV—380, dated Lucknow, the 27th September 1911.

From—L. G. EVANS, Esq., Judicial Commissioner of Oudh.
To—The Secretary to the Government of the United Provinces.

With reference to your letter No. 2294-VI—629-1911, dated the 23rd August 1911, I have the honour to submit the opinions of my colleagues and my own opinion on the points raised by the Government of India with reference to the procedure to be followed in the production of accused persons before magistrates with the object of recording their confessions and in recording such confessions.

Enclosure No. 5 (i) (a).

Opinion recorded by T. C. Piggott, Esq., First Additional Judicial Commissioner of Oudh, dated the 5th September 1911.

I would suggest that as a basis for any fruitful consideration of this question it is advisable first of all to arrive at a clear opinion as to the reason why any change in the existing law or procedure is considered necessary, or, in other words, as to the nature of the evils or abuses against which it is sought to guard. So far as my own experience goes, I do not think that there is any foundation for the suggestion that the lives or liberties of innocent persons are in danger under the existing law. I have occasionally come across cases in which the power of causing the confessions of accused persons to be recorded before the commencement of the enquiry or trial under the provisions of section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure seems to me to have been abused, and in which confessions so recorded are unreliable or altogether worthless as evidence. I think such cases are readily detected and exposed by the courts and that a person who is really innocent of all connection with a particular crime runs exceedingly little risk of being convicted on the strength of a confession under this section obtained from him by improper means. The real danger to be guarded against, in my opinion, is the temptation which the existing state of the law offers to overzealous, unscrupulous, or incompetent police officers. I do believe that serious failures of justice occasionally occur because a case has been sent up for trial mainly on the strength of some confession or confessions improperly obtained, irregularly recorded and of no evidential value when a more intelligent and straightforward investigation would have resulted in the production of evidence sufficient to bring home their guilt to the actual criminals. On this ground alone I am in favour of some modification of the existing procedure, though feeling strongly that the whole question is one of choice of evils, and that it is inadvisable to hamper the police in their contest with crime, especially with organized crime, by more restrictions than appear to be absolutely necessary.

2. I would strongly deprecate the suggestion that the power of recording confessions before the commencement of an enquiry or trial should be entirely taken away from the Indian magistracy. Such a power appears to be a necessary complement and corrective of the special provision of law in this country which prohibits the tendering in evidence of any confession made by a person while he is in the custody of a police officer. It is particularly valuable in two classes of cases—

- (a) in the investigation of organized crimes, such as dakaitis;
- (b) in connection with serious offences, such as murders, when it is obvious from the outset of the enquiry that a certain number of persons (as for instance a particular family, or the residence in a particular house or enclosure) must all of them know more or less of the truth regarding the commission of the crime and yet it is almost impossible to bring home the guilt to any particular person or persons except upon the statements made by members of the family or residents within the enclosure.

In the former class of cases the police may often find in their hands at an early stage of the inquiry a member of the gang which committed the offence who is prepared, for one reason or other, to make a clean breast of the whole matter. The inquiry must proceed for the time being upon the information which this individual is prepared to give, and it is of the highest importance that any statement which he may make should be made by him under the sense of responsibility imposed by the knowledge that it could be proved against him in the event of his being put upon his trial. Moreover, in many cases it would seriously hamper the court in trying to arrive at the facts and to estimate the value of evidence subsequently produced, if it were not in a position to take evidence as to precisely what the informer, or the accused who first fell into the hands of the police, had actually stated at the time of, or shortly after, his arrest.

In the second class of cases to which I have referred I am confident that, even as the law now stands, persons are put forward to make to the police and to repeat before a magistrate statements more or less of the nature of confessions, but conveying a false or seriously distorted version of the actual facts. This is done to choke off further inquiry, to put the police on to a wrong track, or simply to offer up one out of several guilty persons as a sort of scapegoat to the vengeance of the law. Confessions made under these circumstances are almost always retracted, and I am confident that in some cases they are carefully calculated beforehand with a view to their intrinsic falsehood becoming demonstrable at the trial, and so involving the failure of the prosecution even as against the individual who had undertaken the risk of "confessing." If statements of this sort were permitted to be made to investigating police officers under guarantee that under no circumstances could they be proved in evidence at the trial, and with the knowledge that the persons making them could not be asked to guarantee their truth by repeating them in the presence of a magistrate before the inquiry by the police was closed, I am convinced that the difficulties of the police in dealing with this class of crime, serious as they are at present, would be very much aggravated.

3. I incline however to the opinion that the class of magistrates empowered to record confessions under section 164, Code of Criminal Procedure, might with advantage be restricted. I arrive at this conclusion with reluctance, and in spite of a feeling that such a measure will in some cases unnecessarily hamper an honest investigating officer in the conduct of a difficult inquiry. At the same time I find from experience that in the majority of the cases (if not in all) in which a confession recorded before the commencement of the inquiry is found to have been obtained by the use of improper methods, to have been irregularly recorded or to be otherwise worthless as evidence, it has in fact been taken by a magistrate whose qualifications and experience were not equal to the responsibilities thus laid upon him. Moreover I think (and this is to my mind the principal advantage to be anticipated from any such change) that if the number of magistrates empowered to record such confessions were restricted, there would be some chance that any instructions which might be issued for their guidance under the authority of the Local Governments or of the High Court would be brought to their notice and would be observed with reasonable fidelity. The instructions issued by the various High Courts which are to be found printed in the appendix to the Government of India's letter under reply are mostly admirable, and it is obvious that very little difficulty would have arisen in this matter if any one of these sets of instructions had always been carefully followed by the magistrates for whose guidance it was intended.

4. I would suggest therefore an amendment of section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure confining the powers thereby conferred to magistrates who would be competent (apart from any question of territorial jurisdiction) to try or to commit for trial the offence under investigation. The practical result would be that confessions in important cases would be recorded only by magistrates of the first class, or by magistrates of the second class empowered to commit for trial by the court of session. Indeed, if it were thought more convenient to put the proposed alteration into this form my suggestion would be to restrict the powers conferred by this section to magistrates of the first class and magistrates of the second class, either especially empowered thereunder or empowered to commit for trial by the court of session. This would mean practically that the section would not be used except in cases of serious crime, and I do not know that any attempt is made to use it in petty cases as the law now stands.

5. I would further make it obligatory under the law that the magistrate should, before commencing to record any such confession, question the person making it in order to satisfy himself that it is being made voluntarily, and to put on record as part of the examination the question so put by him to the accused and the answers returned by the latter. Pending some such alteration in the law I think these results might be secured by executive orders addressed to District Magistrates and police officers.

6. When this has been done, and as supplementary to these changes in the procedure, I think all the High Courts might be asked to issue instructions as to the recording of such confessions, and that District Magistrates should be required to see that these instructions are clearly brought to the notice of the first and second class magistrates concerned. As regards the particular form of instructions to be issued, those shown in the Government appendix as issued under the authority of the Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces seem to me to meet the case. I should be disposed to require the magistrate to place on record the fact that no police officer connected with the investigation of the case or the arrest of the accused is present in the room, or even within sight or hearing of the accused, while the confession is being recorded: indeed I think the examination ought to commence by putting this fact in the form of a question to the prisoner himself and recording his own admission of its truth. I should be prepared to draw up a certain set of questions which magistrates might be directed in every case to put to the accused before commencing to record his statement, and even to embody such questions in a printed form to be issued for the recording of confessions under section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

7. If anything more than this is required, I think it should take the form of instructions issued departmentally by the head of the provincial police. In order to make such instructions of any value it would have to be clearly understood that a deliberate breach of the same on the part of an investigating officer would be considered an unpardonable offence, that is to say, unpardonable in the sense that some sort of punishment would in every case follow upon its commission. My own opinion is that if all investigating police officers could be got to understand once and for all that the obtaining of confessions in an improper manner, and getting them recorded under pressure, was an offence in the eyes of their departmental superiors and that they would not be allowed to plead in defence or extenuation that they really got hold of the right man or that no conviction of the guilty persons could have been secured at all unless some individual had been induced to speak by the exercise of trickery or judicious pressure, we should hear very little in the way of complaints about confessions obtained before the commencement of an inquiry or trial.

Opinion recorded by B. Lindsay, Esq., Second Additional Judicial Commissioner of Oudh, dated the 5th September 1911.

I have only a few observations to make on the proposals contained in the Government of India's letter.

(1) I do not think that it would be advisable to stop altogether the recording of confessions before trial.

(2) I would limit the power of recording confessions to magistrates who have been invested with powers to commit to sessions.

(3) I am of opinion that in these provinces generally magistrates do not take sufficient care to inquire into the circumstances attending the making of confessions so as to satisfy themselves that they are being made voluntarily. Before the confession is recorded there should be a full note made of the steps taken to ascertain the voluntary nature of the statement. I think it important, as laid down in some of the instructions, that the body of the accused should be examined in order to see if he has been subjected to any violence.

(4) I am in favour of the suggestion that before the confession is taken the accused should be allowed to spend a night out of police custody. And after the confession he should not again be remanded to police custody unless such a step is essential for the prosecution of the police inquiry.

(5) The law as to the admissibility of confessions against the person making them should be explained to the accused before he is allowed to make any statement, and a record of this having been done should be made in the proceedings.

(6) I approve of the direction issued by the Bombay High Court regarding the noting of the date and hour of the commission of the offence and the date and hour when the accused first came into police custody. The accused should himself be questioned on these points.

(7) I also strongly approve of the direction in the orders issued in the Central Provinces that the magistrate is not to ask "fishing" questions. No questions should be put except those that are necessary to enable the accused to explain any statement already made regarding the meaning of which the magistrate may have doubt.

Opinion recorded by L. G. Evans, Esq., Judicial Commissioner of Oudh

I agree generally with the notes made by my colleagues.

My experience is that it is fairly easy to ascertain whether a confession has in it any elements of truth.

Confessions made under police pressure can be detected if the circumstances under which it is (they are?) made are considered.

Broadly stated, true confessions come under two heads—

- (1) confessions made by a criminal immediately after a crime, when he has committed a crime in the heat of passion and he knows he cannot get off undetected;
- (2) confessions made by a criminal who has deliberately committed a crime, but who finds that sufficient evidence as to his guilt has been discovered by the police and his only hope of escape is to be an informer.

A striking instance of this occurred in a dakaiti case tried by the Judge of Gonda about fifteen months ago. A dakaiti occurred and by a piece of good luck the police got hold of overwhelming evidence against some six men, and then they all made desperate efforts to be treated as informers and gave good details of the affair. The genuine nature of these confessions was obvious.

The existing rules as to recording confessions are very good, but much more depends on the good sense and intelligence of the magistrate who records the confession, and for this reason I would restrict the power of recording confessions to first class magistrates only.

Persons who have confessed should not be sent back to the police, unless the magistrate certifies that such procedure is in his opinion absolutely necessary to complete the inquiry. Such certificates should not be given as a matter of form, but only after complete and careful consideration.

Enclosure No. 5 (ii).

No. 6090, dated Allahabad, the 18th November 1911.

From—S. P. O'DONNELL, Esq., Registrar, High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces,

To—The Secretary to the Government of the United Provinces.

I am directed to reply to your letter No. 2293-VI—629, dated the 23rd-24th August 1911, enclosing a copy of a letter Nos. 781—790, dated the 12th-19th July 1911, from the Government of India, Home Department, with reference to the procedure to be followed in the production of accused persons before magistrates with the object of recording their confessions, and in recording such confessions.

(1) The Court are opposed to the suggestion "that the recording of confessions should be prohibited except in very special circumstances and under the orders of the District Magistrate." Whilst recognizing that the admissibility of confessions as evidence in a trial leads occasionally to grave abuses, they consider that a prohibition so rigorous as that proposed is, in the conditions obtaining in this country, undesirable and impracticable.

(2) They are entirely in favour however of the proposal that confessions should never be recorded by a third class magistrate. In their opinion confessions should, if this is not impossible, be invariably recorded before a first class magistrate.

(3) In practice difficulties, they apprehend, are likely to attend the enforcement of an absolute rule that a prisoner, who has confessed, should, in no circumstances, be returned to the police. But in their opinion a prisoner who has been produced by the police for the purpose of having his confession recorded should not be returned to police custody without the special order in writing of a first class magistrate, and that, whether he has or has not actually made a confession.

(4) The suggestion that before a confession is recorded an accused person should have spent at least one night out of police custody, has much in its favour, provided adequate arrangements for the proper segregation in the lock-up of the accused person can be made. Where no such arrangements can be made the proposal is in the Court's view impracticable.

(5) The adoption of the Bombay rule that confessing prisoners should be questioned as to whether they have suffered ill-treatment at the hands of the police is not, the Judges think, likely in practice to be of much benefit. It is already the duty of the magistrate to satisfy himself that the confession is being made voluntarily and not as the result of ill-treatment, and the prescribing of particular questions to be put to a confessing prisoner might conceivably defeat the very object aimed at.

Enclosure No. 6.

No. 18.C., dated the 2nd December 1913.

From—The Hon'ble Mr. C. A. BARRON, C.I.E., Chief Secretary to the Government of the Punjab.

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

I am directed to reply to the letter of the Government of India detailed in the margin in which various suggestions are made for safeguarding accused persons who record confessions in criminal cases under investigation by the police.

The opinions of the Hon'ble Judges of the Chief Court were obtained and I am directed to forward a copy of those opinions. It will be noticed that the Hon'ble Judges are unanimous in expressing the opinion that confessions are of great evidential value; that in the vast majority of cases confessions made by accused persons are strictly voluntary; and that no general inference can be drawn from the frequent repudiation of confessions at a subsequent stage of enquiry or trial that they were, in the first instance, extorted by torture or undue pressure of other kinds. The Hon'ble Judges differ somewhat as to the necessity for minor alterations in the existing instructions relating to confessions, but on the broad question of the adequacy or otherwise of the procedure at present prescribed in providing the necessary safeguards they are entirely at one. With this general conclusion expressed so confidently by the highest tribunal in the Province Sir Michael O'Dwyer entirely concurs.

2. The Lieutenant-Governor does not consider that it would be expedient to abolish altogether the recording of confessions on the motion of the police. The existing rules of the Chief Court and of the Police Department direct that such confession should be recorded before the Magistrate exercising the highest powers, short of the District Magistrate, who can be reached within a reasonable time. Third class Magistrates are not allowed to record confessions unless in very exceptional circumstances, and resort to Honorary Magistrates is discountenanced. Magistrates who record confessions are already directed to enquire carefully from the accused whether any pressure or inducement has been brought to bear upon him, and it is their plain duty to examine the bodies of accused persons who make any complaint of personal injury. This duty, it has never been alleged, that Magistrates do not carry out conscientiously. Magistrates before remanding an accused person to police custody have to consider whether there are any reasons against this course, and ordinarily persons who refuse before a Magistrate to make any confession are not returned to the custody of the police. Those who do make confessions may be remanded to police custody if their assistance is required for the further investigation of the case, but are only so returned by written order of the Magistrate and for special reasons which should be recorded by the Magistrate.

3. Such being the instructions already in force on the subject, the Lieutenant-Governor does not advise that any radical alteration should be made in them except that he would be prepared to rule that confessions should usually be recorded only by the 1st or 2nd class Magistrates having jurisdiction in the case, exception being made for a proper discretion being exercised by other Magistrates with equal powers in urgent cases. His Honour would therefore exclude 3rd class Magistrates altogether, but would allow confessions to be recorded by specially empowered stipendiary Magistrates with 2nd class powers and by specially empowered Honorary Magistrates exercising 2nd class powers. Honorary Magistrates of the 1st class are rare in the Punjab and the powers are only conferred with the concurrence of the Chief Court on men of proved ability and experience. They are in His Honour's opinion perfectly fit to be entrusted with the duty of recording confessions. The Bombay rules referred to in paragraph 4 of your letter Nos. 781-790, dated 12th July 1911, correspond closely to the Punjab rules on the subject, but the Lieutenant-Governor would add to the latter the Bombay rule prescribing bodily examination of the accused when there is any allegation or suspicion of ill-treatment. Such a procedure is in the interests of the police themselves, and will tend to prevent the allegations of ill-treatment now so freely, and generally falsely, made at a subsequent stage when the accused retracts a confession.

4. In conclusion I am to express regret that as the result of a serious misunderstanding in office the reply to these letters has been so long delayed.

Enclosure No. 6 (i).

OPINIONS.

I am in favour of a confessing prisoner being taken at once to a Magistrate of the highest class available in order that his confessions may be recorded. There is usually no difficulty in finding a Magistrate of the 1st class and the duty of recording a confession should take precedence of ordinary duties.

It is a matter of common experience in this province that a prisoner, who confesses when he thinks denial is useless, withdraws his confession as soon as he has come in contact with experienced jail-birds, who advise him that the case against him is not as black as he thought. Record by a Magistrate tends to defeat the subsequent withdrawal. This Court has directed that prisoners should not be taken to a Magistrate of the 3rd class if one of a higher class is available without unreasonable delay. Magistrates have been directed to satisfy themselves that the confession is voluntary. For this purpose an examination of the prisoner's person is sometimes advisable. I would leave this to the discretion of the Magistrate. In my opinion confessions are usually made because the prisoner thinks denial hopeless or because his relations and neighbours know that he is guilty.

A. H. S. REID,
Chief Judge.

The 21st October 1911.

Enclosure No. 6 (ii).

I agree generally with the remarks of the Chief Judge, but wish to add one or two observations of my own.

I do not think confessions are by any means so useless as the letter of the Government of India would infer, nor do I think that the police of this province at any rate deserve that the inference should be drawn that torture is at least probable in all cases. I have come across some cases in which, in my belief, torture was to be very strongly suspected, but for one accusation of the kind which I have found to be true I have heard 99 certainly false. So far from my experience being that confessions "are adhered to," my own experience is that almost every confession, true or false, is retracted the moment the accused gets access to hardened criminals. In one case before me it was in evidence that one accused said to another who was being bullied to confess "what a fool you are—confess—and retract it afterwards," and I well remember years ago a Deputy Inspector of Police saying to me "Sahib, we have not much encouragement to treat prisoners well—whatever we do we are certain to be accused of torture." I know nothing of the police of the other provinces. I know the police of the Punjab well, and though I have had in the exercise of my duty to say hard things of individuals in the force, I think they do not in any way deserve the slur which would certainly be cast on them if some of these rules were brought into force. If we show no confidence whatever in our police, who else is likely to show any?

I think that confessions should be recorded before the Magistrate of the highest grade reasonably available and that, if any complaint of ill-treatment is made to him, or at any time to any Magistrate, then the Magistrate should immediately examine the person of the accused. A prisoner brought before a Magistrate to confess, and who refuses to do so, should not as a rule be allowed to go back into police custody. If he makes a confession which the Magistrate is convinced is voluntary the objection is less, but it should only be allowed by special order. I think confessions properly recorded and bearing on the face of them the marks of bona fides, are of the greater weight in most of the courts than either the Government of India letter or the remarks of Messrs. French and Wallace would imply. Students of criminology all point out that confessions, so far from being unusual and not to be expected, are the natural tendency of criminals of the "amateur" type, as most murderers in particular are. The principal precautions I recommend are—

- (1) Confessions only to be ordinarily recorded by Magistrate of the 1st class.
- (2) Magistrates should satisfy themselves that the confessions are voluntary.
- (3) Accused persons brought up to have confessions recorded should not, except by special order after confession, be remanded to police custody, and never if they refuse to confess. The real danger of course is that accused persons should confess for fear of ill-treatment if they do not. I see the police point of view, but the police, when the accused has confessed to them and given valuable information, should consider whether most advantage lies in putting the accused up to confess, and so having to surrender custody of his person, or in the opposite course. I would not forbid the recording of confessions before trial.

F. A. ROBERTSON,
Judge.

The 24th October 1911.

Enclosure No. 6 (iii).

I agree with my colleagues that the Government of India letter underrates the value of the existing law and practice as to confessions. The law is sound enough and should be maintained. The abuses which come to light are so rare that no case is established for abolishing or even largely restricting the powers of Criminal Courts to consider duly authenticated confessions. The practice in the Punjab also seems to me generally sound enough. It was not always so and some years ago I held the view now suggested that the District Magistrate's permission should always be obtained before allowing record to be made of a confession. In recent years so much attention has been paid to the subject, and the police so well understand their duties in the matter, and there has on the whole been so much improvement all round, that I no longer think reference to District Magistrates required, or worth the trouble and delay involved. In a highly criminal province like the Punjab District Magistrates will never have the time to look into all confession cases closely enough to prevent their being anything more than a fifth wheel in the coach. Their advice is only required in special cases of importance, difficulty or doubt, and in these they ought to be consulted by the District Superintendent of Police, without being tied up by further rules.

I agree that men sent to Magistrates for confession should not be relegated to police custody, whether they confess or not. Otherwise I would make no change.

A. KENSINGTON,
Judge.

Enclosure No. 6 (iv).

I agree with my colleagues. My experience is that the cases of torture or pressure on the part of the police to induce confessions are rare and that in by far the majority of cases the original confession is made voluntarily. In order, however, to minimise the risk of illegal action on the part of the police, I would support the suggestion that in no case should the accused person be relegated to police custody.

H. A. B. RATTIGAN,
Judge.

Enclosure No. 6 (v).

Though I am by no means convinced that a confession made by an accused person in the course of the police investigation in this country is of much evidential value, I do not think that the existing practice of recording such a confession should be done away with altogether. If it is recorded under proper safeguards, it may safely be treated as one link in the chain of evidence against the confessing accused; the weight to be attached to a confession so recorded is of course another matter, and it must vary according to the circumstances of each particular case.

I am certainly in favour of the proposal that ordinarily a confession should be recorded by a Magistrate of the first class, for Magistrates of lower grades do not usually realise the full responsibility of recording a confession strictly in accordance with the provisions of law on the subject and the general impression seems to be that they take down the confessional statements of the accused persons as a matter of routine without satisfying themselves that they are made voluntarily and not as the result of pressure or torture on the part of the police. The instructions which have been issued by our own Court on the subject are, in my opinion, generally sufficient to meet the necessities of the case, but unfortunately in practice they are not strictly observed by the Magistrates in the majority of cases, and that is one reason why complaints are rife as to confessions being improperly induced.

I also approve of the suggestion that an accused person who has once been brought to a Magistrate to have his confession recorded should not be remanded to police custody, whether he has made a confession or not. I further think that it would be a salutary rule to lay down that an accused person who is willing to confess should be kept out of the custody of the police for a reasonable length of time before his confession is actually recorded by a Magistrate, and the latter should expressly question him as to whether he has been ill-treated by the police.

The 15th December 1911.

M. SHAH-DIN,
Judge.

Enclosure No. 6 (vi).

The main points to be kept in view in dealing with the law as to confessions before trial are—

- (a) that the investigation and detection of crime must not be unnecessarily and unduly hampered;
- (b) that reasonable precautions must be taken to ensure that confessions are not improperly induced.

No doubt the second of these points is important, but I am inclined to think that in these humanitarian days the extreme importance of the first point is apt to be obscured. The task of detection of crime has always been difficult in the Punjab, and it is probably becoming more and more so as each year passes, and with a full sense of my responsibility I venture to express the opinion that the first point is, in the interests of the public at large, the more important of the two. I do not suggest that we should shut our eyes to the scandal and the cruelty of the illegal procuring of confessions; but before we proceed to make the work of the police more difficult than it already is, we should be quite certain that things are really as bad as they are said to be. Looking back on my 8 years' experience as a Magistrate and 10 years as a Sessions Judge, followed by 7 years in the Chief Court, I have formed the opinion that things are not really as bad as they are now said to be, and it is my firm opinion that no case has been made out for further stringency in the rules and the law. Vigilance is required now as always, for rules and laws are apt to be overlooked and infringed, but any further tying of the hands of the police and any further depriving them of their natural weapons against the criminal will do more harm than good.

The suggestion of the Government of India that the recording of confessions before trial might be given up altogether goes much too far. According to all rational theories of relevancy of evidence a voluntary confession before trial is relevant and extremely valuable, and the mere fact that sometimes it is hard to say whether a confession was voluntary or not is no sufficient reason for adopting the clumsy expedient of ruling out all confessions made before trial. To me it seems obvious that the proper course is to take reasonable precautions and then to leave the court trying the case to determine whether the confession was voluntary or not.

As regards precautions, I agree with my brother Robertson in his final summing up, and especially as regards remand to police custody. Such remand should never be made if the prisoner has, on being placed before a Magistrate, refused to confess, but it is obvious that there are many cases in which police custody of the prisoner is necessary for the proper completion of the investigation. I would go so far as to say that when a prisoner has confessed to a Magistrate before trial, there is ordinarily no objection to his being remanded to police custody, and that this should always be done, if the police intimate its necessity, unless the Magistrate sees some positive objection.

As regards questioning the prisoner and examination of his body before a Magistrate records his confession, in practice Magistrates do ask a prisoner if he has been ill-treated in any way, and no doubt, if his suspicions are aroused, a Magistrate will also look at the prisoner's body; but I would deprecate the passing of a rule that he should make such an examination.

I entirely agree in Kensington Judge's rejection of the proposal that no confessions should be recorded before trial except by order of the District Magistrate. The delays and trouble would be intolerable and the resulting good infinitesimal.

Enclosure No. 7.

No. 602T.—7P.-2, dated Maymyo, the 1st June 1912.

From—The Hon'ble Mr. W. F. RICE, C.S.I., I.C.S., Chief Secretary to the Government of Burma,
To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

I am directed to refer to your letter No. 781—790 (Police), dated the 19th July 1911, relating to the procedure to be followed in the production before Magistrates of accused persons to have their confessions recorded, and in the recording by Magistrates of the confessions of persons so produced.

2. The first question stated in your letter was whether, on a balance of advantages and disadvantages, it pays to have confessions recorded at all before the trial commences, except in very special circumstances and by order of the District Magistrate. And in support of the suggestion that the recording of confessions before trial might suitably be stopped altogether, it was alleged that while a genuine confession may possibly be obtained in the first excitement of an inquiry, the confession will frequently be retracted later, and experience shows that in such a case the Courts will demand such ample corroboration as would have been adequate for a conviction without the confession. The other question stated was whether, if it is considered impossible to go so far as to stop altogether the recording of confessions before trial, any and if so what additional safeguards should be prescribed. The Lieutenant-Governor consulted a number of officers of experience in this Province with regard to those questions, but His Honour does not think it necessary to trouble the Government of India with copies of all the correspondence; it is sufficient to note that only a small minority of the officers consulted were in favour of abolishing absolutely the recording of confessions before trial. The Hon'ble Judges of the Chief Court were included in that minority, and I am to submit a copy of their Registrar's letter* in which they "strongly recommend that recorded confessions made to any person in authority before the magisterial inquiry into an offence commences should be held inadmissible evidence." I am now to set forth the Lieutenant-Governor's own opinion in the matter.

3. Sir Harvey Adamson is strongly of opinion that the recording of confessions before trial should not be stopped. A confession is evidence for what it is worth; and the Lieutenant-Governor cannot admit that evidence should be intentionally ignored. His Honour indeed concurs fully in the opinion expressed in the following words by Mr. B. S. Carey, C.I.E., Commissioner of the Sanguing Division:—

"On the other hand the use of confessions against an accused is a practice which common justice demands. Evidence should not intentionally be ignored. It would in my opinion be wrong to disallow confessions entirely. It is our business to teach and control the police by other means than by handicapping the administration of justice, and I disapprove of the proposal to do away with confessions, as being a departure from the plain course which justice dictates."

Nor can the Lieutenant-Governor admit the correctness of the remark in your letter, that in the case of a retracted confession the courts demand such ample corroboration as would be adequate for a conviction apart from the confession; and Sir Harvey Adamson is not without experience on which to base his contrary opinion. During the last five years, in the Home Department of the Government of India and as head of this Province, His Honour has had occasion to deal with every one of the numerous cases of sentences of death which come up for clemency to the Governor-General in Council and to the Local Government respectively; and His Honour had also previous experience as Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma and as Chief Judge of the Chief Court of Lower Burma. Sir Harvey Adamson ventures to say, without fear of contradiction, that the High Courts, Chief Courts and Judicial Commissioners throughout India frequently find that retracted confessions have been voluntarily made, and having so found attach weight to them; and that in many cases in which the accused persons have been found guilty the independent corroboration was in fact not sufficiently ample to have led to a conviction without the confession.

4. The Lieutenant-Governor has no doubt that to a European mind the prevalence of confession in the East is very astonishing. As an instance of this, it may be remarked that for some time after the annexation of Upper Burma almost every prisoner, if guilty, at once confessed his guilt. Further acquaintance with civilization and with our methods of administering justice has altered this practice in Upper Burma, but there can be no doubt that in Burma at the present day, and in India too, there is a strong tendency for the guilty to confess. In China, as the Lieutenant-Governor is informed, confession, however obtained, is a necessary antecedent to conviction. The following extract from a letter received from Lieutenant-Colonel D. J. C. Macnabb, I.A., Commissioner and Sessions Judge of the Magwe Division of Upper Burma, may suitably be given here, not only as illustrating the tendency of the Burman, when guilty, to make true confession, but also as affording proof that even retracted confessions are of value as evidence:—

“If prisoners are willing and anxious to confess, they should be allowed to do so. All the senior Magistrates in this Division concur in the opinion that the great majority of confessions made in this Province are true and assist the administration of justice. If a Burman, after arrest, the natural revulsion of feeling following the commission of a crime, the effort of concealment or evasion of arrest, combined in a large number of cases with the knowledge that his whole village knows he is guilty, induce him to confess. Just as surely the realization that such general knowledge will not avail to convict him, and the advice of advocates and relatives, lead him to retract later. In two cases during the past year I have convicted in murder cases on retracted confessions, and both convictions have been maintained in appeal.”

Whatever may be the cause of the tendency to confess, there is certainly a great difference in this respect in the temperament of the Oriental and the European. Undoubtedly confession is prevalent in the East; and Sir Harvey Adamson thinks that few will deny that only a small proportion of the confessions made are due to police torture and illegal inducements. Whatever the cause, at one time or another there comes to many criminals the desire to confess. If taken at this psychological moment, the criminal produces evidence against himself which is the best evidence possible, being the evidence of his own lips. If not taken at the proper time the criminal regains his normal confidence and decides to divulge nothing, with the result that evidence which might have been recorded against him is lost. Sir Harvey Adamson believes it to be beyond dispute that the detection of crime by evidence apart from confession is far more difficult in the East than in England. When a serious crime has been committed in England, the ordinary citizen is against the criminal and on the side of the police. Evidence is easily obtainable, for all persons who know anything material are ready to produce what they know. But in the East it is quite the reverse. Whether from direct antipathy, apathy, fear of reprisal or a disinclination to be mixed up in the matter, the instinct in India is to stand aloof and to give no assistance to the police. It is a matter of common occurrence, within the experience of every District Magistrate and police officer, that a serious crime occurs, the circumstances of which render it morally certain that many persons in the neighbourhood know all about it, and yet not a single witness is obtainable. In these conditions criminal justice in the East cannot, in Sir Harvey Adamson's opinion, afford to ignore any available source of evidence; and His Honour believes that it would be disastrous to discard the evidence of confession.

5. At the same time the Lieutenant-Governor believes that the existing procedure in recording confessions is in urgent need of improvement; and His Honour's opinion to that effect has been already placed before the Government of India in Mr. Fell's letter* relating to the proposed amendment of the Code of Criminal Procedure, to which I am to invite a reference. The frequent retracting of confessions has given rise to serious scandal, but in His Honour's view it is not surprising that confessions, recorded as they are at present, inspire little confidence. The practice is to record a confession simply as the accused chooses to make it; and this puts a premium on tutored confessions, because it is easy to tutor a person as to the substance of a confession when the tutor knows that the statement will be recorded without any attempt to test its truth. The instructions which have been laid down require a Magistrate to question a confessing prisoner as to whether he has come voluntarily to confess, but when the prisoner's statement has been recorded in his own words, the High Courts discourage any further examination of the prisoner with a view to elicit the truth. In Sir Harvey Adamson's opinion what is wanted is to make the confessions themselves contain evidence not only of their voluntary nature but of their truth, so that the Courts which subsequently deal with them may have internal evidence on which to judge of their weight. It is easy for a tutored prisoner to say what he has been told; it is not easy for him to sustain a cross-examination on all the facts which he has stated, and on all the facts which he must know if what he has stated is true. Much greater reliance could be placed on confessions, whether retracted or not, if Magistrates were enjoined, after recording the confession in the prisoner's own words, thereupon to examine him closely as to the statements made by him, as if he were a witness whose evidence the Magistrate distrusted. In Mr. Fell's letter which I have cited the Lieutenant-Governor recommended the amendment of the Criminal Procedure Code on the lines of Scotch Law, by which a prisoner is subjected to examination, before trial, at the hands of the Sheriff and the Procurator Fiscal, and Sir Harvey Adamson adheres to that recommendation. His Honour is aware that objection may be taken to that proposal on the ground that an accused person ought not to be compelled to submit to examination, but in the cases which are now under discussion the position is different. When an accused person has volunteered a confession, there can be no reasonable objection on his part to every means being taken to ascertain from his own lips whether the confession is both voluntary and true. The Lieutenant-Governor's recommendation therefore is that the law should be amended, if necessary, so as to provide that when a confession has been recorded, its truth should be forthwith tested by the Magistrate who has recorded it, by closely questioning the accused on the statements made by him, with the object of ascertaining whether the confession is true or is the mere result of suggestion.

6. While the remarks in the foregoing paragraphs are applicable to India as a whole, I am to submit the following considerations to show that even if the recording of confessions were stopped in India, there are good grounds for extending a different treatment to Burma. In my letter No. 601-T.—7-P-2, dated the 31st May 1912, the Lieutenant-Governor has pointed out that in Burma cases of serious ill-treatment of prisoners in police custody are comparatively rare, and that cases of actual torture are almost non-existent. In support of that statement certain extracts from letters written by officers of experience were submitted. In addition to those extracts, I am now to cite the following opinion recorded by the Commissioner of the Magwe Division, namely, that "neither I nor the senior officers in this Division know of a single case of proved police torture or extortion of a confession in Burma." There is indeed a general consensus of opinion, in which the Lieutenant-Governor concurs, that torture or serious ill-treatment of prisoners by the police in order to compel them to confess is very infrequent in Burma. The grinding poverty which oppresses large classes of the population in India does not exist in this Province; the police share the merits and failings of the general population, which is more truthful and less skilled in intrigue than other races in India; the people of Burma are more independent and less afraid of the police; there is in Burma, as the Government of India are aware, a thoroughly efficient system of village administration, and the village headmen, who take an important part in investigating crime, are entirely independent of the police; and finally, District officers in Burma are in touch with the people, and serious oppression is not likely to pass unnoticed. The Lieutenant-Governor regards it as beyond doubt that abuses in the matter of extorting confessions are less frequent in Burma than elsewhere in India, and believes that the existing safeguards are sufficient for the protection of prisoners in police custody. His Honour therefore recommends that if the Government of India decide to abolish the system of recording confessions in India, Burma may be excepted from the rule, and that in this Province confessions may continue to be recorded and given in evidence as heretofore.

7. In conclusion, and with regard to the minor safeguards suggested in your letter, I am to say that, in the Lieutenant-Governor's opinion, confessions should be recorded by those Magistrates only who have some experience; and His Honour would therefore restrict the power of recording confessions to Magistrates of the first class and to Magistrates of the second class who have been specially empowered in that behalf. But as regards the proposals (1) that a prisoner who has confessed should in no circumstances be given back into police custody, and (2) that a prisoner about to confess should have spent at least one night out of police custody, I am to explain that both of these are quite impracticable in Burma. In the great majority of cases occurring in this Province,—i.e., in all cases occurring elsewhere than at a comparatively few stations where there are jails,—there is no custody except police custody into which a prisoner could be returned after confession or in which he could be detained beforehand.

Enclosure No. 7 (i).

No. 92—16-3, dated the 9th January 1912.

From—W. B. BRANDER, Esq., L.C.S., Officiating Registrar, Chief Court, Lower Burma.
To—The Chief Secretary to the Government of Burma.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 321—7 P-5, dated the 11th August 1911, and to say that the Honourable Judges have considered the subject mentioned in this correspondence and have, in accordance with the requests conveyed in your letters of the 18th August and the 21st October, issued a general letter No. 6, dated the 20th September 1911, and a circular which is at present in press, copies of which are attached.

2. As regards the recording of confessions, the system of recording confessions by a Magistrate other than the one who holds the enquiry, and before the enquiry begins, gives rise to the most numerous cases of complaints against the police so far as they come before the Courts. If the law did not permit confessions to be recorded before the commencement of the magisterial inquiry the Honourable Judges feel confident that complaints against the police would greatly diminish. They would hope that as the motive for procuring confessions from accused would be lessened, malpractices on the part of the police with a view to obtaining them would diminish.

The Honourable Judges would strongly recommend that recorded confessions made to any person in authority before the magisterial inquiry into an offence commences should be held inadmissible in evidence.

The reasons already stated above justify this suggestion; but there are others. In the experience of the Honourable Judges retracted confessions are more frequently a source of weakness in the prosecution of a case than a means of securing a conviction.

They would not prevent a prisoner from making a confession during the inquiry to the Magistrate holding it. If an accused should make a statement incriminating himself during an inquiry, he would do so with full knowledge that he was being proceeded against to the end and in many cases he would do so after he had been away from police influence for a considerable time. Such a confession would necessarily have great weight, although it might subsequently be retracted.

The Honourable Judges believe that the adoption of this course would have the following good results:—

The police would in their investigations be compelled to do their utmost to secure sufficient evidence to secure the conviction of the offender apart from any confession of guilt he might wish to make. The case would not be weakened by a subsequent withdrawal of dubious confession and allegations of ill-treatment in connection with it. Investigations by the police would be specially held and not dragged on from day to day in the hope that the time might lead to a confession on the part of the accused. If an accused showed signs of a willingness to confess, the police would have every incentive to complete the investigation with a view to the appearance as soon as possible of the accused before the Magistrate. They would, however, quickly learn that it was not advisable to send up an accused on weak evidence in the hope that he would admit his participation in the crime charged against him.

The Honourable Judges are convinced that if their suggestion is accepted the detective efficiency of the police force will increase and all round better work will be secured.

3. If, however, the system of confessions taken before the commencement of magisterial inquiry is retained, the Honourable Judges do not think it advisable to limit the recording of confessions by reference to circumstances, the special nature of which is to be decided on by the District Magistrate. Such a system would, in their opinion, scarcely be practicable. They think it would be sufficient if the power to record confessions were confined to first class and second class Magistrates.

4. The proposals that it should be made an absolute rule that once a prisoner has confessed he should in no circumstances be given back into police custody and that it might also be possible to lay down that before a confession is recorded an accused person should have spent at least one night out of police custody would not, in the opinion of the Honourable Judges, be practicable in this province.

5. As the proposal that all the persons when produced before the Magistrate should be questioned as to whether they have suffered ill-treatment at the hands of the police, and that an examination of the prisoner's body should be made, if an allegation of ill-treatment is made, has already been adopted, no comment appears to be necessary.

6. To the proposal that the law should be amended if necessary so as to provide that when a confession has been recorded, its truth should be forthwith tested by the Magistrate who has recorded it by close questioning of the accused on the statements made by him with the object of ascertaining whether the confession is true or merely the result of tutoring, the Honourable Judges have no objection.

7. Although actual ill-treatment of prisoners by the police is believed to be uncommon in this province, there is ground for belief that the exercise of inducement in various forms other than actual ill-treatment with a view to obtaining confessions from prisoners is far too frequent. This practice would best be met by making confession whilst in police custody futile as proof against a prisoner.

Malpractices generally on the part of the inferior police can only adequately be met by constant and close supervision by the superior officers of the force, and by frequent visits of Magistrates to lock-ups with a view to seeing that prisoners under detention there are properly treated.

Further a system under which all complaints by prisoners must be brought to the notice of the District Magistrate should inspire confidence in them that their complaints will be duly considered.

Enclosure No. 7 (i) (a).

No. 6, dated Rangoon, the 20th September 1911.

From—W. B. BRANDER, Esq., I.C.S., Officiating Registrar of the Chief Court of Lower Burma,
To—All Sessions Judges and Magistrates.

The attention of all Sessions Judges and Magistrates is invited to the provisions regulating retracted confessions and alleged misconduct by the police contained in paragraph 129 of the Courts Manual.

At the request of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, the Honourable Judges further direct that in all cases in which strictures are passed upon the conduct of the police by any Court whether in a judgment or by means of a separate note, a copy of the judgment or separate note should be sent at once to the District Magistrate concerned, or in Rangoon Town to the Commissioner of Police.

Enclosure No. 7 (i) (b).

No. , dated Rangoon, the January 1912.

From—W. B. BRANDER, Esq., I.C.S., Officiating Registrar of the Chief Court of Lower Burma,
To—All Sessions Judges and Magistrates.

The Honourable Judges have had their attention drawn to the fact that confessions are not recorded in the manner prescribed by law.

Under section 164 read with section 364, Code of Criminal Procedure, it is necessary that each question and answer should be recorded separately. Instead of following this course Magistrates frequently record confessions in one continuous narrative.

When confession is taken in this fashion contrary to the provisions of the Code, no presumption of genuineness arises under section 80, Indian Evidence Act, and the confession as it stands is not admissible as evidence. This error can be cured in the manner provided in section 533, Code of Criminal Procedure, by the Court which tries the case examining the Magistrate who recorded the confession as indicated in that section. He should be asked to state so far as he can remember the nature of the questions put up to the accused. It is desirable to ascertain whether any leading questions were put and whether the Magistrate at the time of recording the confession had any knowledge from other sources of the facts of the case and of the facts which the accused might be expected to state. The accused should be present at the examination of the Magistrate and should be given an opportunity of cross-examination.

2. The confession itself is recorded in Form Criminal 68 which has been amended so as to make obvious the necessity for recording separately each question and answer. Form Criminal 69 is at the request of the Local Government also being amended so as to provide that before a Magistrate signs the certificate prescribed by section 164, Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, he shall satisfy himself that no inducement, threat or promise has been made in order to induce a confession and shall arrive at a positive belief that the confession has been voluntarily made. In this connection, the Magistrate shall wherever possible examine the body of the accused, provided that the accused consents to such examination, and if there appear to be grounds for suspecting violence he shall also, if possible, have the accused examined by a medical officer. The following additions are being made to the rules regarding confessions contained in paragraph 127 of the Courts Manual:—

To rule 2 add after “is voluntarily made”—

“and that no inducement, threat or promise has been made in order to induce a confession.”

As the second sentence to Rule 2 insert (the present second sentence becoming the third)—

“The Magistrate must, wherever possible, examine the body of the accused, provided that the accused consents to such examination, and if there appear to be grounds for suspecting violence he must also, if possible, have the accused examined by a medical officer.”

Add at the end of rule 5—

“It is of the utmost importance that a Magistrate should arrive at a positive belief that the confession has been voluntarily made before signing the certificate.”

Enclosure No. 8.

Dated Calcutta, the 31st March 1912.

From—The Hon'ble Mr. H. LEMESURIER, C.S.I., C.I.E., Chief Secretary to the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam.

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

I am directed to refer to Sir A. Earle's letter No. 781—790, dated the 12th-19th July 1911, in which the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam was requested to examine the rules in force in this province on the subject of the procedure to be followed both in the production before Magistrates of accused persons in order to have their confessions recorded, and in the recording by Magistrates of the confessions of persons so produced.

The Government of India invited the Lieutenant-Governor's attention to the following specific questions in connection with the amendment of the existing rules, and have asked that the Provincial Regulations on the subject may be submitted to a searching examination in the light of the suggestions made and where necessary amended in consultation with the highest judicial authority:—

- (1) In the first place it is asked whether, on a balance of advantages and disadvantages, it pays to have confessions recorded at all before the trial commences, except in very special circumstances, and by order of the District Magistrate;
- (2) whether in case it is not possible to stop altogether the recording of confessions before trial on the motion of the police, the safeguards which are already prescribed with a view to ensure their voluntary character might not be made more stringent;
- (3) whether the power of recording such confessions should not be taken away altogether from Magistrates of the third class and restricted to the Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the case or at least to first class, or specially selected second class Magistrates;
- (4) whether it should not be made an absolute rule that once a prisoner has confessed he should never be remanded to police custody, and that before his confession is recorded an accused person shall have spent at least one night out of police custody; and
- (5) whether a rule similar to that obtaining in Bombay should not be framed requiring that all confessing prisoners when first produced after arrest should be questioned as to whether they have suffered any ill-treatment at the hands of the police.

2. The subject has received the most careful consideration of the Lieutenant-Governor. Selected officers both of the Executive and the Judicial, members of the service including the High Court have been consulted and a copy of the opinion of the Hon'ble Judges is annexed to this letter. In regard to the first question, the weight of opinion and notably that of the High Court is against the exclusion of such confessions from evidence, inasmuch as they are often of great assistance in elucidating the facts of a case. In this view Sir Charles Bayley concurs. He agrees however to the proposed alternative that such confessions should only be recorded by a first class magistrate or a Subdivisional Officer. He further concurs in the proposal that before a confession is recorded the prisoner should have been out of custody of the police for at least 24 hours. It is very essential that he should during this period also be kept apart from other prisoners in the jail in which he is confined.

3. The Lieutenant-Governor is in full agreement with the views of the Hon'ble Judges of the High Court quoted below, in regard to the remand of a confessing prisoner to police custody for the purpose of verifying his confession:—

"The practice of verifying confessions should be carefully limited and should be confined to a verification of the facts which have been stated by the prisoner. Cases have been brought to notice in which the so-called verification has been used as a means of obtaining admissions to corroborate facts which have come to light after the confession has been made. This practice should be discontinued and a verification for the purpose of amplifying a confession should not be allowed. A verification of a confession should be entrusted to an experienced Magistrate who should accompany the accused to the places referred to by him, and his proceedings should be restricted to verification and discovery of facts and local features which themselves either prove or disprove the truth of the statement. The investigating police officer should not be present at the time of the verification and only a sufficient police guard to prevent the prisoner from escaping." The rules already in force in this province provide that the guard shall consist not of police officers but of jail warders or persons of the Magistrate's Court and have thus anticipated the High Court's wishes.

4. As regards the desirability of a rule directing that when an accused person is first produced after arrest he should be questioned as to whether he has suffered any ill-treatment at the hands of the police, I am to refer to paragraph 9 of my letter No. 833-Pl., dated the 16th March 1912, in which the Government of India have already been informed that such a rule will be embodied in the Eastern Bengal and Assam Police Manual and circulated to Magistrates through Commissioners.

5. In conclusion His Honour is convinced of the profound truth of the Hon'ble Judges' comment that the best safeguard against the acceptance of an untrue confession improperly obtained will be found in the care and ability displayed by the Magistrate who is entrusted with the duty of recording it. No effort has been spared to impress upon Magistrates the importance of exercising these qualities when recording confessions, and the Lieutenant-Governor's displeasure has been communicated to police officers who have endeavoured to obtain advantage by producing a prisoner before inexperienced and incompetent Magistrates in order to obtain a confession unfairly. He ventures, however, to point out that as a corollary it is essential that the Courts should receive with fairness and candour the testimony, whether oral or conveyed by the certificates signed under the provisions of the law, by Magistrates who have recorded confessions as to the correctness of the record and the due observance of the precaution laid down by law or by rule. Instances have not been unknown in which Judicial officers influenced either by solicitude for the prisoner's defence or by the insistence of his pleader have allowed their attention to be directed rather to the action of the Magistrate by whom the confession was recorded than to the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused—a state of things which has not always been conducive to the object with which Courts have been established.

Enclosure No. 8 (i).

No. 75, dated Calcutta, the 29th February 1912.

From—R. L. Ross, Esq., I.C.S., Registrar of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, Appellate Side,
To—The Secretary to the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam, Revenue and General Departments.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 2844-Pl., dated the 24th August 1911, with which you forwarded a copy of a letter No. 781-790, dated the 12th July 1911, and enclosures, from the Government of India in the Home Department, regarding the procedure to be followed both in the production before Magistrates of accused persons to have their confessions recorded, and in the recording by Magistrates of the confessions of persons so produced. You requested that the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam might be favoured with the expression of the views of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice and Judges on the subject.

2. In reply, I am to say that the first question on which the opinion of the Court is asked is whether, on a balance of advantages and disadvantages, it is desirable to have confessions recorded at all before the trial commences, except in very special circumstances and by order of the District Magistrate. In the opinion of the Judges, the answer to this question should be in the affirmative. They think that any man who is alleged to be implicated in a crime should, if he so desire, be permitted to make any statement either admitting his guilt or explaining any facts or circumstances which appear to incriminate him, and to have that statement recorded by a trustworthy and experienced magistrate.

3. The next point raised in Sir Archdale Earle's letter touches the safeguards which exist and suggests that they may be made more stringent.

On this point the Court recommends that the statement made by an accused person should ordinarily be recorded by a Magistrate who has jurisdiction to try or enquire into the case. Only in the event of such a magistrate not being available should a junior or an honorary Magistrate be allowed to record it. No police officer who has been engaged in the investigation should be allowed to be present when the statement is recorded and only those officers who may be necessary to guard the prisoner.

4. The Judges think that the practice of verifying confessions should be carefully limited and should be confined to a verification of the facts which have been stated by the prisoner. Cases have been brought to notice in which the so-called verification has been used as a means of obtaining admissions to corroborate facts which have come to light after the confession has been made. This practice should be discontinued, and a verification for the purpose of amplifying a confession should be disallowed. A verification of a confession should be entrusted to an experienced Magistrate who should accompany the accused to the places referred to by him, and his proceedings should be restricted to the verification and discovery of facts and local features which themselves either prove or disprove the truth of the statement. The investigating police officer should not be present at the time of the verification and only a sufficient police guard to prevent the prisoner from escaping.

5. Where the prisoner alleges that improper influence, physical and moral, has been brought to bear on him to induce a confession, the charge should be promptly investigated; and where physical violence is said to have been used the prisoner should be examined at once by a medical officer.

6. In conclusion the Judges desire to suggest that the best safeguard against the acceptance of an untrue confession improperly obtained will be found in the care and ability displayed by the magistrate who is entrusted with the duty of recording it. They think that no advantage would be gained by a further elaboration of the rules in force in this province regulating the procedure to be followed after the prisoner has been brought to the presence of the Magistrate. The only essential is that the magistrate who records the statement shall be an officer of intelligence and experience sufficient to enable him to determine whether it is a free and voluntary confession and not a statement which is the result of outside influence.

Enclosure No. 9.

No. 116, dated Nagpur, the 4th April 1912.

From—E. A. DEBRETT, Esq., I.C.S., Chief Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

I am directed to refer to Mr. (now Sir Archdale) Earle's letter No. 781—790, dated the 12th July 1911, on the subject of the procedure to be followed both in the production before Magistrates of accused persons to have their confession recorded, and in the recording by Magistrates of the confessions of persons so produced.

The first question put by the Government of India is whether, on a balance of advantages and disadvantages, it pays to have confessions recorded at all before the trial commences except in very special circumstances under the orders of the District Magistrate. The two great disadvantages which are said to attach to the present system are—(a) that the police are tempted to devote their efforts to obtaining confessions to the neglect of the evidence, and (b) that the confessions are often obtained by ill-treatment or actual torture. It is also said that the confessions, when obtained, are seldom of any use, since they are generally retracted, and if not retracted but confirmed at the trial, are superfluous. It is claimed that the repeal of section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, would lead to a great improvement in police work and would remove the occasion for a great deal of abuse now heaped on the police on account of some real and many imaginary cases of torture, while it would deprive the Courts of little or no material of real value. On the other hand, it is urged that the confessions that are of value to the police are those which lead to the discovery of property or of circumstantial evidence, and that the fact that confessions could no longer be recorded by a Magistrate would in no way diminish the temptation to extort such confessions by improper means, that the old type of police officer whose sole idea was to get a confession and then sit down with folded hands and wait for the necessary sequel of a conviction, is rapidly disappearing, that it cannot be said either that subsequently confirmed confessions are superfluous or that retracted confessions are valueless, and that to repeal the section would in certain classes of cases deprive the prosecution of a valuable weapon. -

3. The Chief Commissioner has consulted the Judges of the Judicial Commissioner's Court, the Inspector-General of Police and all Commissioners and District Magistrates, and I am to enclose for the information of the Government of India the opinions recorded by the Judges of the Judicial Commissioner's Court and by Mr. J. Hullah, I.C.S., Deputy Commissioner, Narsinghpur. There is much difference of opinion, but, broadly speaking, the Judges are in favour of maintaining the present system with added safeguards, and the police and the majority of executive officers are in favour of abandoning recorded confession altogether. Mr. Fox-Strangways hesitates in such a matter to put aside the almost unanimous opinion of the Police Department supported as it is by several District Magistrates of experience. But he agrees with those officers who have expressed the view that the abandonment of the magisterial record of confessions would in no way reduce either the temptation or the opportunities to put pressure on accused persons and that thus what he takes to be the main object of the proposed change would not be served. As to the improvement in the efficiency of police investigations which is expected to follow from the removal of the snare of the recorded confession, the Chief Commissioner believes that the steady improvement of the police force, especially in the investigating ranks, is eliminating this source of weakness and that Government should not seek a somewhat problematical improvement in general methods by abandoning altogether the use of confessions so long as it can be shown that they are of definite use in certain cases.

4. There are certainly cases where without a confession recorded early in the proceedings no conviction would ever be obtained. Mr. Fox-Strangways believes that in the Alipur Bomb case the confessions of some of the accused were of extreme value and that without them some of the persons convicted would have escaped. Then there are confessions of crime, such as murder, to which there were no eye-witnesses, confessions made out of bravado by the dacoit or political offender who glories in his crime, and the confession made at or near the scene of the crime, among people who know the facts and the actors and under the pressure of a public opinion which the accused cannot resist. All of these may be retracted later, but a confession made with great detail may often bear upon it such an impress of truth that subsequent retraction does not destroy its value. Again an early confession may have great value in enabling the prosecution to select approvers, and the magisterially recorded confession is at least undoubted evidence of the confession having been made and may thus be admissible under section 27 of the Evidence Act when the evidence of the police might be distrusted.

5. The Chief Commissioner agrees with the generally expressed opinion that the power to record confessions before trial might be restricted to first class or specially selected second class Magistrates and does not think it is necessary to limit it to the Magistrate actually inquiring into the case. He does not consider it either practicable or necessary to lay down that an accused person who has confessed should not be remanded to police custody. It is not the man who has confessed, but the man who has not yet confessed who is in need of protection. In order to make certain that the confession was not due to fear of police ill-treatment it would be necessary that the accused should be assured that if he were put up to confess and refused to do so or made only a partial confession he would not be remanded to police custody. The Chief Commissioner considers that this could not be done and that in many cases confessing prisoners must be returned to police custody for the purpose of pointing out property, and so on. In his opinion it is hardly practicable to provide that the accused should always spend one night out of police custody before confessing, though it might be an executive order that this should be arranged for where time and other circumstances allow.

6. As regards the actual procedure before the Magistrate, the Chief Commissioner agrees with the Judicial Commissioner that no further precautions other than those prescribed in section III of Criminal No. 1—7 appear necessary to safeguard the interests of justice.

Enclosure No. 9 (i).

No. 559, dated Narsinghpur, the 30th August 1911.

From—J. HELLAR, Esq., I.C.S., Deputy Commissioner, Narsinghpur.
To—The Commissioner, Nerbudda Division, Hoshangabad.

I have the honour to reply to your endorsement No. 466, dated the 17th August 1911, forwarding certain papers in which it is suggested that the practice of recording confessions under section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code may be abandoned, and to say that I am wholly opposed to this suggestion.

2. The question may be considered in two aspects—

Firstly: as affecting the administration of justice and the discovering of truth;

Secondly: as tending to improve police work and to prevent oppression by the police.

3. As regards the former of these two aspects, I do not think that we should allow to pass unchallenged the Government of India's statement that "in an unsophisticated community a confessing prisoner will ordinarily persist in his confession throughout the proceedings." Experience, I would submit, shows that this is not "ordinarily" the case. However unsophisticated a prisoner may be, he will almost invariably meet in the under-trial ward of the jail other under-trial prisoners who are a good deal less unsophisticated than himself, and who will point out to him the folly of his confession; moreover there is good reason to believe that the subordinate jail officials are themselves not infrequently guilty of similar well-meant or ill-meant interference.

4. Next, as regards the value of confessions. While it is obvious that considerable value must be attached to confessions which are not retracted until a late stage in the proceedings has been reached—as, for instance, a confession persisted in before the committing Magistrate, but retracted before the Sessions Court—yet I am quite prepared to agree that in many cases confessions, especially those retracted at an early stage of the proceedings, are practically valueless. Such valueless confessions are usually mere bald admissions of guilt with little in the way of supplementary detail or narrative. But there are other confessions, which, though immediately retracted, are so full of detail that they bear on their face the unmistakable impress of truth. The value of detail in a confession does not seem to have received sufficient notice in such rulings as I have been able to consult on the subject of confessions. But I have found one ruling (Indian Law Reports, 20 Allahabad, 133) where this point is well emphasized. The ruling is concerned with the conviction of two persons against whom there was practically no evidence except their own confessions subsequently retracted. The High Court, in upholding the conviction, remarked as follows:—

"Where confession is not supported by the evidence of witnesses, a Judge must examine very carefully to see whether it gives those details which indicate that it is a natural narrative of what took place in the presence of the man making it . . . . In the present case the confession is full of detail, it is very circumstantial and bears on it, in our opinion, the impress of truth."

If we abandon the practice of sending accused persons before the Magistrates for making confessions, we run the risk of losing not only the three kinds of confessions referred to in paragraph 3 of the Local Administration's letter, but also the not infrequent cases where the confession is full of detail, and therefore of the utmost value.

5. Still a further consideration, in considering the question in its bearing on the courts of justice, is the fact that the Magistrate's record of the confession is conclusive proof that the confession, even if untrue or subsequently retracted, was actually made. Section 27 of the Evidence Act allows the proof of such information, whether it amounts to a confession or not as relates to a fact discovered thereby, and the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner has remarked that such confessions would not be affected by the repeal of section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code. In reply to this suggestion I would submit that if the practice of recording confessions under section 164 is abandoned, it will always be open to the accused to deny that he ever gave information to the police at all, and to say that therefore the fact discovered could not have been discovered in consequence of such information. The trying court may be over-distrustful of the police, and may be inclined to believe the accused's statement that he never gave the information leading to the discovery of important evidence: in short, that the story of the giving of the information is itself a pure fabrication. But not even the most distrustful court can disbelieve that the accused did make a confession if it has the Magistrate's record to consult.

6. As regards the improvement of police work, there can be no doubt that of late years methods of investigation have much altered, and the alteration has been in the direction of greater judicial acumen. This is partly owing to a higher standard of education among police officers and partly owing to the influence of the bar, which has made it necessary for the police to strengthen the prosecution as much as they can so as to make it unassailable. One of the lessons that they have certainly learnt, is that they must not relax their efforts through reliance on a confession, but must take care to support their cases with evidence as well. While therefore the repeal of section 164 may perhaps make the police even more careful than at present, I think they already realize sufficiently the importance of evidence apart from confessions, and I certainly do not think that the repeal of section 164 will effect such an improvement in police work as will outweigh the considerations that may be urged against such a measure.

7. But after all there can be no doubt that the chief motive underlying the suggestion now under criticism—at least in so far as it may have been made by persons who have no practical experience of India—is the desire to prevent oppression by the police. Here again I do not believe that the measure suggested will effect any real improvement. If the police are over-keen on obtaining confessions, this is not because they regard confessions as important in themselves, but because a confession immediately gives them a line on which to direct their investigation and a clue to evidence that they could not otherwise obtain. To obtain such evidence they will continue to work for confessions even if section 164 is repealed, and accused persons will not be any more secure than before. The way to prevent oppression is not to abandon the recording of confessions by Magistrates, but severely to punish oppression when it is proved, and to aim at improving, by education and precept, the morality of the force. In this direction there has already been considerable progress, and more is certain to follow in the future.

8. To sum up I oppose the suggestion for the following reasons:—

- (i) We shall lose many confessions which, owing to the amount of detail which they contain, are obviously true.
- (ii) The accused can deny that he ever made a confession, and so defeat section 27 of the Evidence Act.
- (iii) Police methods of investigation will not be much improved, and do not really stand in much need of improvement as regards appreciating the value of confessions.
- (iv) Oppression will not be diminished, as confessions will still be worked for so as to obtain a line on which to conduct the investigation.

9. There remain to be considered the points raised in paragraph 4 of the Government of India's letter.

10. I agree that no Magistrate below a 1st class Magistrate should be allowed to record confessions. Magistrates of lower class through inexperience and want of ability, are apt to overlook important and indispensable formalities, and are also less independent in their attitude towards the police.

11. I do not at all agree with the suggestion that once a prisoner has confessed he should in no circumstances be given back to police custody. It is before, not after, his confession that he chiefly runs the risk of ill-treatment, while his presence may be absolutely necessary to elucidate the facts revealed by his confession. His return to police custody may be allowed, subject to sanction of the District Magistrate.

12. I do not agree with the suggestion that before a confession is recorded an accused person should have spent at least one night out of police custody. He is likely to come under contaminating influences in the under-trial ward. A recent case in this district strengthens me in my opinion. Three accused persons gave the district superintendent of police an account of a murder, which by its abundance and exactness of detail convinced him of its absolute truth. The accused were at once taken before a Magistrate who refused to record the confession as it was late in the evening and he had no facilities for doing so, not being in court. Next day the accused were brought up for having their confession recorded and denied all knowledge. They persisted in this denial in the Sessions Court, but the Sessions Judge offered pardon, and thus obtained a full confession corresponding exactly in its details with that given to the district superintendent of police. But when an accused is brought up for confession and then refuses to make one, then I think that under no circumstances should he be given back to the police, for in such cases the police are specially likely, through resentment, to exercise oppression.

13. The Bombay rule, regarding questions about ill-treatment, may be adopted. The Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner has already directed in the Local Administration's letter No. 299-IV, dated the 15th August 1911, that the Bombay rule, regarding the examination of prisoner's bodies, shall be adopted.

Enclosure No. 9 (ii).

No. 3187-1-37-2-11, dated the 14th September 1911.

From—A. C. BEET, Esq., I.C.S., Registrar, Judicial Commissioner's Court, Central Provinces,
To—The Secretary to the Hon'ble the Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, in the Police Dept.

With reference to Mr. Hamilton's letter No. 289-IV-1-37, dated the 8th August 1911, in which the Judicial Commissioner was requested to express his opinion on certain questions relating to confessions by accused persons, I am directed to inform you that the Judges of this Court met to consider the matter and that opinions have been obtained from the three most experienced of the Sessions Judges now serving under the Local Administration.

2. A copy of the letters received from Sessions Judges is enclosed. It will be observed that only Major Morris is in favour of taking away from all Magistrates the power to record a confession made by an accused person before the commencement of an inquiry or trial.

3. The Judges of this court arrived unanimously at the conclusions set out in the subjoined paragraphs of this letter.

4. The power in question should certainly be retained. Besides the three kinds of voluntary confession mentioned in paragraph 3 of the letter under reply there is one which is not uncommon, namely, that made because the accused is among people who know the truth and are anxious that the investigation should be completed: the average criminal is not qualified to judge how far the certainty reached by his fellow-villagers is based on evidence admissible in a court of justice, and thinking denial to be useless, he makes a clean breast of his guilt. Whatever be the motive leading to a voluntary confession, the fact that it is voluntary should be regarded as warranting its prompt commitment to writing by an unbiassed authority, if only for the reason that in some cases independent evidence sufficient for conviction is not obtainable. Power to secure such a record may also be regarded as almost essential if proper advantage is to be taken of section 26, Indian Evidence Act, which allows proof to be given of a confession made by a person in the custody of a police officer, provided a magistrate was actually present at the making: in some cases the police will be able to procure a magistrate to be present, and an authorised record of what may be said is obviously a safer guide than oral evidence. Moreover, the present seems to be altogether an unsuitable time for withdrawing from the police a power they have enjoyed for nearly 40 years, inasmuch as the efforts of Government to improve the system of investigating officers have already begun to bear fruit. Again, a record made under section 164, Criminal Procedure Code, has a special value in cases where it is desirable to tender pardon to one of several accused persons: the Court conducting the trial of the other participators in the crime is hereby enabled to know precisely what the approver's original story was.

5. Although, however, the power to record confessions given by section 164 should not be withdrawn, experience shows that its possession by every magistrate is not desirable. The "nearest magistrate" to whom an accused person should be forwarded under section 167 (1) is too often a naib-tahsildar or an honorary magistrate who may be quite unable to appreciate such elaborate but essential instructions as those contained in sections III and IV of this Court's Criminal Circular No. 1-7. In practice the police do not trouble to get confessions recorded except in serious cases such as no magistrate of the 2nd or 3rd class could enquire into or try: the power in question may therefore be confined to 1st class magistrates without fear of hampering the investigation. At the same time the general power of authorising detention in police custody which section 167 (2), Criminal Procedure Code, confers should also be restricted: this is frequently exercised without regard to the principles laid down in paragraph 3, section IV of the circular above cited, and by the time the order is scrutinized under paragraph 4 ibid the harm sought to be avoided has been done. The authority allowed to deal with applications for detention in police custody should be at least equal in intelligence and independence to the highest class of police officer likely to present such an application, and, speaking generally, this qualification is not likely to be met with except in stipendiary magistrates with powers of the 1st and 2nd class. If the legislature is unwilling to amend section 167 (2) in this sense, the necessary directions should be given by executive order to the magistracy and police and compliance therewith should be rigorously exacted.

6. If the foregoing recommendations are adopted, no further precautions other than those prescribed in section III of Criminal Circular No. 1-7 seem essential to safeguard the interests of justice.

Enclosure No. 10.

No. 141, dated Bangalore, the 13th January 1912.

From—P. B. WARBURTON, Esq., I.C.S., Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Coorg.
To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 781-790, dated the 12th-19th July 1911, on the subject of recording confessions of accused persons, and in reply to submit the following remarks.

2. The rules* now in force are contained in the Judicial Commissioner's Circulars Nos. 12, dated 27th February 1895, and 2, dated 21st December 1906, and the Standing Orders issued by the District Magistrate of Coorg.

3. The suggestions made in paragraphs 3 and 4 of the letter under reply are—

- (1) The prohibition altogether of the recording of confessions on the motion of the police.
- (2) The absolute prohibition of the recording of confessions by 3rd class magistrates, and the limitation of such power to the magistrate having jurisdiction or at least to a 1st class, or specially selected 2nd class magistrate.
- (3) An absolute rule that after confession an accused should not be given back into police custody.
- (4) That before confession an accused person should spend at least one night out of police custody.
- (5) The questioning of accused persons as to ill-treatment and examination of their persons before recording a confession.

4. As regards (1), the local authorities remark that confessions are readily volunteered in the early stages of an investigation in Coorg. There is no reason in their opinion to apprehend that they are extorted by ill-treatment or undue pressure from the police, yet in nearly every instance they are retracted when the case comes on for trial. The reason is not far to seek. After detention for a few days in Mercara Jail with other "under-trials" less unsophisticated than himself, the confessing prisoner determines to have a fight for liberty. He engages a lawyer and retracts his confession, or even if he cannot engage a lawyer, he still retracts and hopes to have a better chance of escape. In such cases the Chief Commissioner is of opinion that a properly recorded confession may be of great use. Important witnesses can be gained over and a clever vakil may be able to make the worse appear the better cause, but it is always difficult to explain away a genuine confession. On the other hand, the recording magistrate, if he exercises due care should have little difficulty in placing the proper value on a false confession which is being made under the influence of fear or ill-treatment. There can be little doubt that in cases of serious crime a prompt enquiry will often elicit the truth and the guilty man will blurt out his complicity in the crime. If, on the other hand, the accused person is taken into police custody without a magisterial record of his first confession and is subsequently placed in jail, the result may be and often is that he will deny his guilt. It may also be argued that in these circumstances an accused may be left longer in police custody and that a confession made by him at a later date may have been induced by undue influence on the part of the police.

5. In regard to the second point, the Chief Commissioner is in favour of the recording of confessions by the highest magistrate available, but to provide against an accused being unduly long in police custody en route he would require that all confessions shall be so recorded if the accused can be produced before such magistrate in one day's march; if not, the duty should be performed by the taluk magistrate, who, in Coorg, is ordinarily a man of experience with some length of service and quite fit to be trusted to record a confession with due care, though he may be a 3rd class magistrate. It is therefore proposed to frame a rule as follows:—

"All confessions shall ordinarily be recorded by a 1st or 2nd class magistrate if the accused can be produced before him within 24 hours. If not, the duty shall be performed by the nearest 3rd class magistrate."

6. Third point.—The return of confessing prisoners to police custody should be prohibited, except when this is unavoidable to secure the identification of persons or property or the discovery of property: magistrates should be required to state clearly in their order in such cases why it is unavoidable.

7. Fourth point.—The present practice in Coorg on this point is regulated by Magisterial Standing Order No. 2 of 1909 which is as follows:—

"In continuation of Judicial Commissioner's Circular No. 2 of 1906 and of District Magistrate's Standing Order No. 2 of 1908 (Magisterial), magistrates are reminded of their discretion to postpone the recording of a confession which they may have reason to believe is not voluntarily produced. In such cases it will ordinarily be sufficient if the accused is removed from police custody for a few hours, and either remanded to a sub-jail or made to remain in the office or court-room. It is not usually necessary to put off recording a confession to another day, as in that case the accused may be subjected to influences preventing him from making any disclosure, however voluntarily he might previously have been ready to make it." It is proposed to continue the existing practice.

8. Fifth point.—The Chief Commissioner does not think that the body of a prisoner need be examined unless on enquiry he alleges ill-treatment; there are other means of inducing confessions besides physical ill-treatment. If such allegations are made and marks of violence are discovered on the accused's body the magistrate should have him examined by a medical officer without delay, and should place on record the result of the examination.

9. The existing orders seem to deal very completely with the question of confessions. The Chief Commissioner would, however, suggest the following alterations and additions to the rules issued in Judicial Commissioner's Circular No. 2 of 1906 :—

(1) The addition of the rule mentioned in paragraph 5.

(2) For Rule IV, substitute—

“No attempt shall be made to draw unwilling or unguarded admissions from the accused person by close and inquisitorial questioning; but he may properly be questioned so far as may be necessary, to enable the magistrate—

(a) to elicit from him whatever facts he is willing to state,

(b) to understand exactly what is his meaning and how far he intends his confession or admission to go.

Rule IX.—Delete the latter portion of the note to Rule IX (b), viz. :

“As to whether the prisoner should be sent to a magisterial lock-up or remanded to the police, the magistrate should be guided according to the opinion formed—

(i) whether the confession is voluntary or improperly obtained, and

(ii) whether in case of opinion that the confession is voluntary, he considers that the return of the prisoner to the police is of importance to the proper preparation of the case.”

(4) Insert after Rule IX (b) the following :—

“Magistrates should use their discretion to postpone the recording of a confession which they may have reason to think is not made voluntarily. In such cases it will usually be sufficient if the accused is removed from police custody and from their presence and either remanded to the sub-jail for a few hours or made to remain in the office or court-room. Where no suspicion exists it is inadvisable to put off recording the confession until next day as the accused may meanwhile be subjected to influences which will prevent him from making any disclosure, however ready he might previously have been to make it.”

(5) Add a new rule as Rule IX (d), relettering the subsequent clauses :—

“The magistrate shall ask the accused if he has any complaint to make of ill-treatment by the police. If any allegation of ill-treatment is made, the magistrate shall there and then examine the accused's person, if the accused consents, to see whether there are any marks of injuries as alleged, and shall place on record the result of his examination. If there appear to be marks of violence on the accused's body the magistrate shall have him examined by a medical officer without delay.”

(6) Add Rule X :—

“A confessing prisoner must on no account be remanded to police custody after confession unless the magistrate is satisfied that such remand is unavoidable in order to secure the identification of persons or property or the discovery of property. The magistrate in such cases will state clearly in his order why the remand is unavoidable.”

Enclosure No. 10 (i).

Circular No. 12, dated Bangalore, the 27th February 1895.

From—MR. A. RAMAYA PUNJA, Registrar, Court of the Resident, Mysore, and Judicial Commissioner of Coorg,

To—The Sessions Judges and all Magistrates in the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore and Coorg.

In a recent criminal case it appeared that the statement of an accused person taken under section 164 and section 364, Criminal Procedure Code, was not recorded by the magistrate in the language in which he was examined. The magistrate who was examined stated to the court that he had recorded the confession in the language of the court, first because it was his custom, secondly because his head clerk was absent, thirdly because the statement of the accused was difficult to record or transliterate as it was delivered in “butcher Hindustani.” The Resident and Judicial Commissioner therefore invites the attention of all magistrates to the provisions of section 364 of the Criminal Procedure Code which are not satisfied by a plea of custom, of inconvenience or of difficulty.

2. The law admits a confession not recorded as directed in the section only where it is not practicable to record such a statement in the language in which the accused is examined or makes his statement; and in the case referred to a grave miscarriage of justice resulted from the omission to comply with the law because the High Court could not admit the confession as evidence.

Enclosure No. 10 (ii).

Circular No. 2, dated Bangalore, the 21st December 1906.

From—MR. N. S. THIRUMALAI AIYANGAR, Registrar, Court of the Resident in Mysore and Judicial Commissioner of Coorg.

To—The Sessions Judges and all Magistrates in the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore and Coorg.

In continuation of Circular No. 12, dated 27th February 1895, the following instructions on the subject of taking and recording statements and confessions of accused persons are issued for guidance:—

- I.—Every statement or confession by an accused person, recorded under section 364 or section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, shall, whenever practicable, be recorded in the language in which such statement or confession is made.
- II.—When such language is not the language of the court as determined by the local Government under section 558 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, or the language prescribed by an order under section 357 of the Code, the record of the statement or confession should, in all appealable cases, be translated into the language of the district, or into the English language where the sessions judge or magistrate ordinarily writes his proceedings in English, and such translations should be authenticated by the signature of the translator and also of the judge or magistrate before whom the statement or confession is made.
- III.—The statement or confession should be written down fully and accurately, and, if not written by the magistrate with his own hand, the magistrate should, as the examination proceeds, make a memorandum of such statement or confession in the language of the court or in English, with his own hand and under his signature.
- IV.—The magistrate should only question the accused person so far as may be necessary to enable the magistrate to understand clearly the accused person's meaning. The statement must be recorded in the form of question and answer, and every question put and every answer made to such question, should be written down in full.
- V.—When the accused person has concluded his statement or confession the written record of his statement or confession should be read out or shown to him by, or in presence of, the magistrate, and any explanations or additions by the accused person to such statement or confession should be written down in the manner prescribed above.
- VI.—The magistrate shall then desire the accused person to add his signature or mark to such statement or confession. If the accused person declines to sign or affix his mark, the magistrate shall state the fact and the reason, if any, assigned by the accused person for so declining.

NOTE.—In cases in which the magistrate records an English rendering of the statement made by the accused in his own vernacular, the mark or signature of the accused should be affixed to the statement recorded in the accused's vernacular and not to the English counterpart.

- VII.—The magistrate shall then certify, under his own hand, that the statement or confession of the accused person was made voluntarily; that it was taken in his presence and hearing; that it was read over to him and was admitted to be correct, and that it is a full and true account of the statement made by the accused.
- VIII.—The magistrate may state in writing any other circumstance attending the making or recording of the statement or confession of an accused person. Any such memoranda made by the magistrate, if not embodied in the certificate, must be separately signed by him.

IX.—When the statement to be recorded is a confession under section 164 of the Code, the following additional formalities must be observed :—

- (a) It is not desirable that any police officers should be present when a confession is being recorded under section 164, except such as may be necessary to secure the safe custody of the accused person when, in the magistrate's opinion, the duty cannot safely be left to other attendants. In any case it is undesirable that the police officer making the investigation should be present.
- (b) Before recording the confession the magistrate shall write (in the form appended to this circular) in the language in which he ordinarily writes his judgments, a brief memorandum of the enquiry made by him, and which he is by law bound to make, in order to ascertain that the accused person is acting voluntarily in making a confession. The certificate at the foot of the form becomes a useless formula to a superior court unless the recording officer shows by what steps he has satisfied himself the confession is voluntarily made.

NOTE.—Magistrates should enquire into the circumstances under which a confession is made, the length of time a confessing prisoner has been under suspicion before arrest, and the opportunities afforded to his accusers or to the police to induce a confession improperly. As to whether the prisoner should be sent to a magisterial lock-up or remanded to the police, the magistrate should be guided according to the opinion formed—

- (i) whether the confession is voluntary or improperly obtained, and
- (ii) whether in case of opinion that the confession is voluntary, he considers that the return of the prisoner to the police is of importance to the proper preparation of the case.
- (c) One important point upon which the magistrate should invariably question the accused person is as to the length of time during which he (the accused person) has been in the custody of the police. It is not sufficient to note the date and hour recited in the police papers, at which the accused person is said to have been formally arrested.
- (d) When recording the confession he should note (i) the date and hour of the commission of the alleged offence, (ii) the date and hour of the first detention in custody by the police, (iii) the section of the Code under which the confession is recorded.
- (e) The record will be forwarded in due course to the magistrate by whom the case is inquired into or tried.
- (f) In every case in which the record of a confession by an accused person taken under section 164 is received by the magistrate inquiring into or trying the case, the magistrate shall ask the accused person whether he made the statement purporting to have been made by him before the magistrate from whom the record of the confession was received. The statement shall be shown or read to the accused person, and the fact noted by the magistrate, and the accused person's answer to the question shall be recorded in full.
- (g) Confessions taken under section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall be recorded in the form appended to this circular. A reference to the provisions of section 80 of the Evidence Act will show the great advantage to be derived in subsequent proceedings, in the form of presumption dispensing in the first instance with proof, if magistrates are careful in observing the directions laid down by law and supplemented by the above instructions.

Standing Order No. 2 of 1908.Magisterial.

*Coorg District Magistrate's Office.
 Dated 6th March 1908.*

From some specimens of confessions recently recorded by magistrates, it appears that the nature of the memorandum required by Judicial Commissioner's Circular No. 2, dated 21st December 1906, to be prefixed to the statement of the accused is not clearly understood. Attention is therefore drawn to the provisions of paragraph IX (b) and (c) of the Circular, which require the magistrate to record not the actual questions he asks accused in order to find out if the confession is voluntary or not, and accused's answers, but a statement of the grounds which lead him to believe that the confession is voluntary.

2. The following is a specimen of the kind of entry which should be made under the heading "Memorandum of Inquiry into the voluntariness of the confession" :—

"The police papers show that accused has been in custody for seven days, and accused's own statements confirm this. Three of those days were spent in travelling, and for only two has he been in the custody of the officer conducting the investigation. Before questioning accused all police officers were excluded from the court. Accused assures me that what he has to say will be said of his own free will, and not in consequence of any inducement offered by the police or others, or any ill-treatment caused to him. I see no reason to suppose that he has been subjected to any form of pressure, and I believe that his confession will be voluntarily made.

Enclosure No. 10 (iii).

Standing Order No. 2 of 1908.
Magisterial.

Coorg District Magistrate's Office,
Dated 6th September 1909.

In continuation of Judicial Commissioner's Circular No. 2 of 1906, and of District Magistrate's Standing Order No. 2 of 1908 (Magisterial), magistrates are reminded of their discretion to postpone the recording of a confession which they may have reason to believe is not voluntarily produced. In such cases it will ordinarily be sufficient if the accused is removed from police custody for a few hours, and either remanded to a sub-jail or made to remain in the office or court room. It is not usually necessary to put off recording a confession to another day, as in that case the accused may be subjected to influences preventing him from making any disclosure, however voluntarily it might have been made previously.

Enclosure No. 11.

No. 3383-G., dated the 20th November 1911.

From—The Hon'ble Lieutenant-Colonel Sir GEORGE ROOS-KEPPEL, K.C.I.E., Chief Commissioner and Agent to the Governor-General, North-West Frontier Province.
To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department.

I have the honour to address you with reference to your letter No. 781—790 of 12th July 1911, dealing with the question of confessions. I am not in favour of altering the existing rules in this province which appear to me to work well. It is true that many persons who make initial confessions withdraw these later, but in these cases it is very rare for an accused to give as a reason for the withdrawal of his confession that it has been obtained by pressure; he is usually content to flatly deny that he ever made such a confession at all.

2. While these confessions are often of little value in the conviction of an individual offender, they are frequently of incalculable value in a country where raiding, gang robbery, murder by gangs, cattle lifting and rioting are rife, as an arrested person may and often does in the first despondency of the moment of arrest make a confession and tell the whole story of the crime, giving the names of his companions and mentioning where the stolen property is deposited; the man may deny this confession later, but in the meantime the police, working on the information which he has given them and which they could have obtained from no other source, have discovered the stolen goods, arrested the receiver in whose house they were found and arrested many members of the gang, with the result that people who were afraid to come forward while the gang was at large become willing and ready to give evidence and a dangerous organization is broken up. So far from restricting the power of taking confessions, I would encourage it by all the means in my power, leaving it to the sense of the magistracy and judiciary to assess individual confessions at their proper value and to bring to notice any case in which the prisoner states that his confession has been extorted by torture. Under our dual system of judicial trial, with its numerous appeals, and of the trial of accused persons by their peers under the Frontier Crimes Regulations, it is almost impossible for an innocent man to be convicted in criminal cases, and I am glad to say that it is my belief that the practices of extorting confessions, suborning witnesses and of judging the police by the percentage of convictions to cases are not prevalent in this province.

3. The measures you propose are, I presume, intended to be used as a remedy and not as a prophylactic, and I cannot too strongly urge in the interests of a simple and direct administration that the Government of India may consider the advisability of deferring their application in this province until there are some symptoms of disease. In no part of India do the police live so hard and so dangerous a life as in the North-West Frontier Province, and nowhere is it so necessary to support and protect them. As I have attempted to explain, circumstances deter them from the practice of oppression, and district and police officers are fully aware of the views of the Government of India and of my wishes regarding police procedure. All ranks of the police have worked honestly, on the whole the results are satisfactory, and I can only express the hope that the Government of India will allow a system, which is working well, to continue and will not tie my hands by the imposition of a number of rules which, while they are doubtless required in the more developed and civilised parts of India, are singularly inapplicable to the province in my charge.

Enclosure No. 12.

Extract from Lord Brampton's address to English police constables.

"Much discussion has on various occasions arisen touching the conduct of the police in listening to, and repeating statements of, accused persons. I will try, therefore, to point out what I think is the proper course for a constable to take with regard to such statements."

"When crime has been committed, and you are engaged in endeavouring to discover the author of it, there is no objection to your making inquiries of, or putting questions to, any person, from whom you think you can obtain useful information. It is your duty to discover the criminal if you can, and to do this you must make such inquiries, and if in the course of them you should chance to interrogate and to receive answers from a man who turns out to be the criminal himself, and who inculcates himself by these answers, they are nevertheless admissible in evidence, and may be used against him."

"When, however, a constable has a warrant to arrest or is about to arrest a person on his own authority, or has a person in custody for a crime, it is wrong to question such a person touching the crime of which he is accused. Neither judge, magistrate or juryman can interrogate an accused person—unless he tenders himself as a witness, or require him to answer questions tending to criminate himself. Much less, then, ought a constable to do so, whose duty as regards that person is simply to arrest and detain him in safe custody. On arresting a man a constable ought simply to read his warrant, or tell the accused the nature of the charge upon which he is arrested, leaving it to the person so arrested to say anything or nothing as he pleases. For a constable to press any accused person to say anything with reference to the crime of which he is accused is very wrong. It is well, also, that it should be generally known that if a statement made by an accused person is made under or in consequence of any promise or threat, even though it amounts to an absolute confession, it cannot be used against the person making it. There is, however, no objection to a constable listening to any mere voluntary statement which a prisoner desires to make, and repeating such statement in evidence; nor is there any objection to his repeating in evidence any conversation he may have heard between the prisoner and any other person. But he ought not, by anything he says, or does, to invite or encourage an accused person to make any statement, without first cautioning him that he is not bound to say anything tending to criminate himself, and that anything he says may be used against him. Perhaps the best maxim for a constable to bear in mind with respect to an accused person is, 'keep your eyes and your ears open, and your mouth shut.' By silent watchfulness you will hear all you ought to hear. Never act unfairly to a prisoner by coaxing him by word or conduct to divulge anything. If you do, you will assuredly be severely handled at the trial, and it is not unlikely your evidence will be disbelieved."

CANTONMENTS.

REGULATIONS.

No. 139.—The following draft of a Notification, which it is proposed to issue in exercise of the powers conferred by section 24 of the Cantonments Act, 1910 (XV of 1910), is published as required by section 25, sub-section (1) of the said Act, for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby, and notice is given that the draft will be taken into consideration by the Governor-General in Council on or after the 7th March 1914.

Any objection or suggestion which may be received from any person with respect to the draft before the date fixed aforesaid will be considered by the Governor-General in Council.

DRAFT NOTIFICATION.

No. 140.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 24, clauses (1) (2) and (3) of the Cantonments Act, 1910 (XV of 1910), the Governor-General in Council is pleased to make the following rules regulating the grant and occupation of land belonging to Government in the Cantonment of Aden:—

1. Land for building or other purposes shall ordinarily be granted on lease, but may be disposed of otherwise in the discretion of the Cantonment Authority subject to the approval of the General Officer Commanding. Quit rent at the rate of six pies per square yard shall be leviable annually in the case of such land.
2. Land may be granted temporarily for any purpose by the Cantonment Authority on permit in Form A hereto appended and subject to such conditions as the Cantonment Authority consider advisable. Quit rent at the rate of two pies per square yard shall be leviable annually in the case of land granted temporarily under this rule.
3. Before any land is granted to any person on lease or otherwise under these rules and before the right to obtain a lease of any land is put up to auction under the following rule, the written approval of the General Officer Commanding shall be obtained where such approval is required by any restrictions attaching to the land under the Indian Works of Defence Act, 1903, or a Notification published thereunder.
4. The right to obtain a lease may be put up to auction to the highest bidder or a lease may be granted by private agreement as the Cantonment Authority may direct subject to the approval of the General Officer Commanding.
5. (1) The term for which a lease is granted shall not exceed 99 years but any less term may be fixed by the Cantonment Authority.
(2) Leases may be granted in one of the forms indicated in Schedule VI of the Cantonment Code, 1912, but the Cantonment Authority may vary the form in their discretion: Provided that the terms of the lease to be executed for any plot shall be notified with the conditions of sale under rule 6 (a).
6. When the right to obtain a lease has been put up to auction, the following provisions shall apply:—
(a) Notice of the sale shall be given in Form B hereto appended, the terms of which may be varied by the Cantonment Authority.

- (b) The reserve price shall be fixed by the Cantonment Authority.
- (c) The area of a plot shall not ordinarily be less than 640 square feet, and each plot shall be conveniently marked out, numbered and mapped, so that intending purchasers may know the plots which are for sale.
- (d) Each plot shall be put up separately to auction and shall be knocked down to the bidder offering the highest price above the reserve.
- (e) The purchaser of a plot shall be entitled, subject to the provisions of this rule, to have a lease of the plot purchased, but nothing in these rules shall be deemed to imply that the purchaser shall acquire any right over the land other than that which is expressed by the terms of the lease granted to him, and the proprietary right in the soil shall not be conveyed by the sale.
- (f) At the conclusion of the auction, the purchaser shall deposit 10 per cent. of the purchase-money, and in default of such deposit the sale shall be void and the plot may be re-sold.
- (g) It shall be optional to the purchaser in whose favour a sale is confirmed to pay the purchase-money in a lump sum or to pay a yearly rent equal to  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the purchase-money, and at the conclusion of the auction the purchaser shall state in writing which of the above alternatives he elects to adopt in case the sale is confirmed, and such election shall be irrevocable.
- (h) The sale shall be subject to confirmation by the Cantonment Authority and it shall be in the discretion of the Cantonment Authority not to accept the highest bid and if the sale is not confirmed it shall be void and the deposit shall be returned to the purchaser.
- (i) When the sale has been confirmed then—
  - (i) if the purchaser has elected to pay the purchase-money in a lump sum, he shall, within 15 days from the day on which he receives notice of the confirmation, pay the balance of the purchase-money and shall execute a lease in the form notified previous to the sale; in default of such payment or of due execution of such lease the sale shall be void and the 10-per-cent. deposit shall be forfeited to the Cantonment Authority and in the event of re-sale of the plot within one month of the default, if the price realised is less than the price bid by the defaulter, the defaulter shall be liable to pay the difference to the Cantonment Authority on demand.
  - (ii) If the purchaser has elected to pay rent on the  $4\frac{1}{2}$ -per-cent. basis, he shall be entitled to the return of  $5\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the purchase-money after execution of a lease in the said form and the remainder of his deposit, that is,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the purchase-money, shall be held to his credit as the first year's rent; but if the purchaser fails to execute, within 15 days from the confirmation of the sale, a lease in the form notified previous to the sale, the sale shall be void and the whole deposit shall be forfeited to the Cantonment Authority; and in the event of re-sale of the plot within one month of the default, if the price realised is less than the price bid by the defaulter, the defaulter shall be liable to pay the difference to the Cantonment Authority on demand.
- (j) All sums declared to be payable by the defaulting purchasers or in connection with the execution of leases and counter-parts under this rule shall be recoverable as arrears of land revenue.

- (k) No person shall be entitled to any compensation by reason that a sale has not been confirmed or that delay has occurred in confirmation or that any sale has been declared void or that any forfeiture has been made or by reason of anything done in good faith and purporting to be in accordance with this rule.
- (l) No purchaser shall enter into possession of a plot until a lease has been duly executed and until the permission of the Cantonment Authority has been obtained.
- (m) Every lease shall be deemed to commence on the 1st April next preceding the date of confirmation of the sale.
- (n) Every lease shall be executed in counterpart. The original shall be sealed with the common seal of the Cantonment Authority and signed by the Secretary and one member of the Cantonment Authority and by the General Officer Commanding. The counterpart shall be executed by the lessee. All expenses connected with the execution, stamping and registration of leases and their counterparts shall be paid by the lessee in each case.
- 7. Every application for land shall contain the particulars as provided for in Chapter XXI of the Cantonment Code, 1912.
- 8. Quit rents levied on land leased under rules 1 to 6 shall be credited to the general account of the Cantonment Fund. All sums realised by way of purchase-money or rent under these rules shall be credited to a separate head called the "Capital Account" and shall be expended on public improvements.
- 9. All powers vested in the Cantonment Authority by rules 1 to 6 shall be exercised under the control of the General Officer Commanding.
- 10. (1) The Cantonment Authority may permit the subdivision of a grant subject to such conditions as they may see fit to impose with a view to better sanitation; alignment of houses; provision of new streets; or improvement of existing streets or other objects of public utility.
- (2) Fresh leases will be given for such subdivisions for such periods and with such conditions as the Cantonment Authority may fix in their discretion but subject to these rules, and such subdivisions will thereafter be registered as separate grants.
- (3) No subdivisions shall ordinarily be of an area less than 640 square feet.

CONDITIONS.

1. The right to obtain a lease of each of the above plots will be put up for sale by auction and knocked down to the bidder offering the highest price above the reserve.
2. The sale will be subject to confirmation by the Cantonment Authority and it will be in the discretion of the Cantonment Authority not to accept the highest bid and if the sale is not confirmed it will be void and the deposit hereafter referred to will be returned to the purchaser.
3. At the conclusion of the auction each purchaser shall deposit 10 per cent. of the purchase-money and in default of such deposit the sale shall be void and the plot may be re-sold.
4. It shall be optional to the purchaser in whose favour a sale is confirmed to pay the purchase-money in a lump sum or to pay a yearly rent equal to  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the purchase-money. At the conclusion of the auction the purchaser shall state in writing which of the above alternatives he elects to adopt, in case the sale is confirmed and such election shall be irrevocable.

5. If the sale is confirmed, then—

- (i) Where the purchaser has elected to pay the purchase-money in a lump sum, he shall, within 15 days from the day on which he receives notice of the confirmation, pay the balance of the purchase-money, and shall execute a lease in the form appended hereto; in default of such payment or of due execution of such lease the sale shall be void and the 10-per-cent. deposit shall be forfeited to the Cantonment Authority; and in the event of re-sale of the plot within one month of the default if the price realised is less than the price bid by the defaulter, the defaulter shall be liable to pay the difference to the Cantonment Authority on demand.

(ii) If the purchaser has elected to pay rent on the 4½-per-cent. basis, he shall be entitled to the return of 5½ per cent. of the purchase-money after execution of a lease in the said form and the remainder of his deposit, that is, 4½ per cent. of the purchase-money, shall be held to his credit as the first year's rent; but if the purchaser fails to execute, within 15 days from the confirmation of the sale, a lease in the said form, the sale shall be void and the whole deposit shall be forfeited to the Cantonment Authority, and in the event of re-sale of the plot within one month of the default, if the price realised is less than the price bid by the defaulter, the defaulter shall be liable to pay the difference to the Cantonment Authority on demand.

6. No person shall enter into possession of a plot till a lease has been duly executed and until the permission of the Secretary, Cantonment Authority, has been obtained.

7. Every lease shall be deemed to commence on the 1st April next preceding the date of confirmation of the sale.

8. The purchaser of a plot shall be entitled, subject to these conditions and the rules aforesaid, to have a lease of the plot purchased, but shall not acquire by the purchase any right over the land other than that which is expressly conferred by the terms of the lease.

9. No person will be entitled to any compensation by reason that a sale is not confirmed, or that delay occurs in confirmation, or that a sale is declared void, or that any forfeiture is made, or by reason of any thing done in good faith and purporting to be in accordance with the rules aforesaid of these conditions.

10. Leases shall be executed in counterpart and all expenses connected with the execution of the lease and its counterpart, including the cost of stamping and registration, shall be paid by the lessee.

11. Any plot sold shall be liable to such quit rent, assessment, rates, taxes and other dues as may be levied under the law and rules in force for the time being, in addition to the rent or purchase-money paid under the lease.

Conditions.

Condition I.—The godowns to be erected on the land shall be commenced within six months from the execution of the lease, and shall be completed within the period specified in the note endorsed on such plan or within such further period (if any) as the authority which sanctioned the application under Chapter XXI of the Cantonment Code, 1912, may, by order in writing, allow.

Commencement and completion of buildings.

Condition II(1).—The said godowns shall be erected in accordance with the particulars specified in the lessee's application under sections 261 and 262 of the said Cantonment Code, and the plans and documents accompanying the same and the site plan appended hereto or where a proposed building alteration or addition is not in accordance therewith then in accordance with such further or other particulars as may be permitted in writing by the authority which sanctioned the application under Chapter XXI of the said Code.

Erection of buildings.

(2) Any such permission may be given subject to any conditions which may be agreed upon between such authority and the lessee.

Condition III.—The land shall not be used for any purpose other than those specified in the lessee's application under section 261, clause (d) of the Cantonment Code, 1912, nor shall the buildings erected on the land be permitted to fall into such a state as absolutely to prevent their being used for the purposes so specified. Provided always that if the said buildings or any part thereof shall at any time be destroyed by earthquake, fire, cyclone, or other act of God or shall be so injured thereby as to render them unfit for the purposes above specified, then and in such case, the lessee shall, within six calendar months from such destruction or injury as aforesaid, commence to rebuild the same, and shall reinstate the same fit for use for the purposes aforesaid within such period not exceeding two years after the same shall have been so destroyed or injured as aforesaid as to the Officer Commanding the Brigade shall seem fit. Provided nevertheless that in no such case shall the lessee be required to reinstate the same fit for use as aforesaid within a shorter period than 12 calendar months from the date of such destruction or injury.

Use of land and maintenance of buildings.

Condition III. (A)—The lessee shall pay the said yearly rent of Rs. by equal monthly instalments of Rs. and the said instalments shall be paid on the 15th day of every month during the continuance of this demise for the month immediately preceding.

This clause to be struck out if the land is rent free.

Condition IV (1).—Whenever the lessee intends to transfer by sale, gift mortgage or exchange his interest in the land or in the buildings erected on the land or in any part of the land or buildings he or the intended transferee shall give the Cantonment Magistrate one month's notice in writing before the transfer is completed.

Power to veto transfer of lessee's interest in certain cases.

(2) The Officer Commanding the Brigade shall have power within the said period of the month and with the concurrence of the Local Government to impose by order in writing his veto on any such transfer and if in any case the Cantonment Authority considers it desirable that the said power of veto should be exercised it shall report the case to such Officer Commanding the Brigade without delay.

(3) If notice of any such transfer is not given as aforesaid or if any such transfer is made after the same has been vetoed, the transfer shall be void.

Condition V.—Every person on whom the lessee's interest in the land or in the buildings erected on the land may devolve by transfer, by succession, or by operation of law shall send to the Cantonment Authority, within one month from the date of such devolution, a report in writing of the fact together with such particulars as may be required by that authority for entry in the register maintained under section 271 or section 272, as the case may be, of the Cantonment Code, 1912.

Condition VI.—(1) If the lessee does not commence or complete, as required by Condition I, the buildings to be erected on the land, the Cantonment Authority may, by notice in writing, require him to remove all or any buildings or materials which he may have erected or collected thereon, and if he fails to comply with such notice, the Cantonment Authority may, after giving him six hours' further notice in writing, cause such removal to be effected and recover the cost from him and may also cancel the lease.

(2) If the lessee erects any building or makes any alteration or addition otherwise than as allowed by or under Condition II, the Cantonment Authority may, by notice in writing, require him to remove the building or to alter the same to its satisfaction and, if he fails to comply with such notice, the Cantonment Authority may, after giving him six hours' further notice in writing, cause such removal or alteration to be effected and recover the cost from him.

Condition VII.—(1) So long as the lessee shall (* duly pay the said rent of Rs.                      and) observe the conditions hereinbefore specified and on his part to be observed, he may, subject to Condition IX, hold the land for the term of                      years computed from the day of                      without interruption by the Secretary of State.

(2) At the expiry of the said term of                      years, the lessee may be granted a renewal of the lease for a further period of                      years, such renewal and the period thereof to be at the discretion of the General Officer Commanding the Brigade.

(3) If the lessee shall (fail to pay the said rent of Rs.                      for 21 days after the same shall become due or shall) in the event of the said buildings being destroyed or injured by earthquake, fire, cyclone, or other act of God, fail to commence rebuilding the same as provided in Condition III hereof within six months of such destruction or injury and to reinstate the same fit for use as provided in the said Condition III hereof, and within such period as therein provided or shall break any of the Conditions hereinbefore specified other than Condition I or Condition II and on his part to be observed, the Local Government may, after giving one month's notice in writing, resume the land or any portion thereof and may, on such resumption, declare all or any part of the right and interest of the lessee in the buildings erected on the land to be forfeited.

Condition VIII.—The lessee shall not be entitled to compensation for any loss incurred by reason of anything done in pursuance of Condition VI, or Condition VII, clause (2).

Condition IX.—(1) At the expiration of the said term of years the lessee shall deliver up to the Local Government and without receiving any compensation whatever the land comprised in this demise, together with all erections and buildings which may be then standing thereon.

Report of devolution of lessee's interest.
Procedure on breach of Condition I or Condition II.
Forfeiture for breach of any other condition.
To be struck out in cases where it is intended that the lease shall not be renewable.
The words in brackets to be omitted, if the land is rent free.
Land and buildings to be delivered up at expiration of term without compensation and right of Government to resume land prior to expiration of term on payment of compensation.
To be struck out when sub-clause (2) is to be used.

(2) If at the expiry of the said term of _____ years the General Officer Commanding the Brigade in the exercise of his discretion declines to renew the lease, the lessee shall deliver up to the Local Government and without compensation whatever therefor the land comprised in this demise, together with all erections and buildings which may be standing thereon, on payment of compensation for such erections and buildings only as shall have been erected under proper authority.

If there shall be any dispute as to the amount of such compensation, the same shall be referred to a Committee of Arbitration as hereinafter provided.

Provided, always that the Local Government may at any time prior to the expiration of the said term resume possession of the said land or any portion thereof upon giving one calendar month's previous notice in writing in that behalf to the lessee under the hand of some duly authorised officer and upon paying to the lessee compensation for such erections and buildings standing on the land of which possession shall be resumed as aforesaid as shall have been erected during the said term under proper authority. If there shall be any dispute as to the amount of such compensation, the same shall be referred to a Committee of Arbitration which shall be constituted as provided in Chapter XX of the Cantonment Code, 1912, and the lessee shall be bound by the decision of such Committee. In calculating the amount of such compensation there shall be taken into account the following:—

- (i) The original cost of materials and construction.
- (ii) The condition of the buildings and their value at the date of resumption.
- (iii) The rent or profit (if any) or the equivalent which the lessee may receive or enjoy from the use of the buildings or on account thereof.
- (iv) The period within which the buildings would become the property of Government without payment of any compensation to the lessee.

The lessee shall not at any time during the said term remove the buildings erected on the said land or any part thereof nor make any structural alteration thereof or addition thereto without the like written permission mentioned in Condition II hereof.

REVISED RULES FOR THE EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES IN INDIA FOR ADMISSION TO THE GENERAL LIST OF THE INDIAN FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

(Vide Resolutions No. 281 F.E., dated Calcutta, the 17th January 1911, and No. 1186 F.E., dated Simla, the 6th October 1913, by the Government of India, Finance Department.)

I.—A register of candidates will be kept from which not less than three candidates for each vacancy will be nominated by the Government of India from time to time as vacancies are expected. Only candidates so nominated will be entitled to compete.

II.—Names will ordinarily be entered in the register only on the recommendation of a Local Government.

III.—On or before the first of May in each year, Local Governments will send to the Government of India the names of any persons whom they desire to recommend for entry in the register. The list should be accompanied in the case of each person by copies of certificates of character and education, by a statement of age, and by information regarding any services that may have been rendered to the State by his parents or family. Before being recommended by a Local Government, each applicant must give satisfactory proof that he is a native of India within the meaning of the Statute 33 Vict., chap. 3, section 6.*

* The words "Native of India" shall include any person born and domiciled within the dominions of His Majesty in India of parents habitually resident in India and not established there for temporary purposes only.

IV.—The Government of India will also be prepared occasionally to receive direct applications for registration from suitable candidates. Such applications should be submitted in the applicant's own hand-writing to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Finance Department and should contain the information required by rule III.

V.—The names of persons not possessed of high educational qualifications will not be registered. Clear and distinct hand-writing and a business familiarity with the English language are indispensable.

VI.—The Government of India reserve an absolute discretion not only in regard to the selection of persons to be entered on the register of candidates but also as to the nomination of candidates to compete at the examination. It must be clearly understood that registration of a candidate's name does not in any way imply that he will be nominated for admission to examination.

VII.—The name of a registered candidate will be struck off the register when he has reached the age of 25, or has failed in two examinations.

VIII.—A candidate nominated for admission to one examination will not be admitted to a later examination unless again nominated.

IX.—The age of a candidate on the first day of the month in which the examination is held must not be less than twenty-two and not more than twenty-five years. A candidate who has been continuously in Government employ since before the age of twenty-five may, however, at the discretion of the Government of India, be allowed to compete at the examination up to the age of thirty, provided that he is satisfactorily recommended by the Head of his Department.

X.—A nominated candidate before appearing at the examination must produce a certificate in the annexed form by a Commissioned Medical Officer or by a Medical Officer in charge of a Civil Station:—

Certificate.

I do hereby certify that I have examined A. B., a candidate for employment in the Indian Finance Department, and that I cannot discover that he has any disease, constitutional affection or bodily infirmity unfitting him, or likely to unfit him, for the public service in any part of India.

XI.—Such candidate must also, before appearing for examination, produce a certificate of age from the officer in charge of the district in which his family reside, or, if they reside in a presidency town or a Native State, from the Presidency Magistrate or Political Agent respectively. To obtain this certificate the date and place of the candidate's birth must be proved before the district officer, Presidency Magistrate or Political Agent, as the case may be, by documentary evidence, supplemented, where this is not conclusive proof, by statements of relatives and others on oath or solemn affirmation.

XII.—Nominated candidates will be examined in the subjects describe in the schedule attached to this Resolution. No candidate will be admitted to the Department who fails to show a competent knowledge of the compulsory subjects, and the Government reserve the right of declining to make any appointment when no candidate reaches a high standard of proficiency.

XIII.—The examination will be mainly by written questions and answers. The questions will be prepared, and the examination conducted in such manner as the Governor-General in Council from time to time directs.

XIV.—Some months before an examination is to be held, its date and place, and the conditions of examination, will be notified in the Gazette of India, and the number of vacancies open to competition will at the same time be stated.

XV.—Subject to the above conditions, candidates will be appointed to the posts thrown open to competition according to their order of merit at the examination.

NOTICE is hereby given that the plaintiffs have brought a title suit No. 350 of 1911 in the 2nd Court of Munsif at Tamluk against the defendants. The subject-matters of the suit are, (I) a Pani nala (public drainage) (II) a public pathway of the residents, owners and occupiers of the lands of the villages Sultanpore, Bhabanichack in the pargana of Aranganagore, under the police-station of Nandigram and (III) a Govagar with pond, gosara attached to it (a place for throwing dead bodies of cattle) used by the residents of the northern part of Sultanpore, some portion of the Pani nala and the pathway. The whole of Govagar with gosara pond have been converted by the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in collusion with other defendants into the newly dug khai (ditch, pond and its pahar (bank) of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2. The disputed pathway has also partly been levelled to the paddy land and the rest made a part and parcel of the bastu and dhosa of defendants Nos. 1 and 2. The suit is for the establishment of the rights of easement and the customary rights to the disputed land and for the recovery of possession of the same.

The plaintiffs sue in their own right and also on behalf of and for the benefit of the other residents, owners and occupiers of the land of the aforesaid villages. Any resident, owner or occupier of lands of the said villages willing to join the said parties may apply to the said Court on or before the 5th March 1914, otherwise the residents, owners and occupiers of the said villages will be considered as consenting to the said plaintiffs bringing the suit for themselves and on behalf of and for the benefit of other residents of the said villages.

Notice.

No. 846.

SEALED Tenders for the supply by Contract from 1st April 1914 to 31st March 1915 of unscreened Indian steam coal (Bengal Desharghur) or unscreened South Welsh steam coal, as on Admiralty List or unscreened English steam coal of the estimated quantities specified below, at the ports mentioned, will be received by the Director of the Royal Indian Marine at his office in the Royal Indian Marine Dockyard, Bombay, up to 3 P.M. (Standard time) on Wednesday, the 4th March 1914, after which hour no tender will be received:—

	Estimated quantity for either Indian steam coal or English coal.	Estimated quantity for South Welsh coal.
	Tons.	Tons.
Bombay	... 16,000	10,560
Calcutta	... 14,000	9,240
Colombo	... 400	264
Karachi	... 3,200	2,112
Madras	... 350	231
Rangoon	... 9,000	5,940

2. It will not be necessary for Tenderers to tender for all ports, but for such port or ports as they may desire.

3. The Indian coal tendered must have a calorific value of not less than 7,000 calories or 12,600 British thermal units with ash not exceeding 15 per cent. or the evaporative power of the Indian coal must be not less than 7 lbs. of water per lb. of Indian coal with ash not exceeding 15 per cent. For North Welsh coal or similar coal such as Davison's West Hartley tendered as English steam coal the evaporative power must be the same as the foregoing but the ash must not exceed 9 per cent.

4. Tenders must be accompanied by a Bank of Bombay receipt for the amount to be deposited or by Government loan paper, which is not to be endorsed to any Government Officer, but to stand in the name of the owner, interest being made payable at the Bombay Treasury. Tenders must be sent by registered post; if forwarded in any other way they will not be received. Informal Tenders will be rejected and no reason will be assigned for the rejection of any Tender. The Director of the Royal Indian Marine does not bind himself to accept the lowest or any Tender.

5. Any Tender containing a conditional clause contrary to these requirements or making stipulations not provided for either in this notice or the printed Tender and Schedule Forms will be summarily rejected.

6. Printed Tender Forms, and any other information in connection with this contract can be obtained at this office and the forms can also be had from the Deputy Director of the Royal Indian Marine, Calcutta, Port Officer, Karachi, Presidency Port Officer, Madras, and from the Principal Port Officer, Burma, Rangoon.

7. The attention of all Tenderers is invited to the necessity for carefully observing the conditions mentioned in this notice.

8. Each Tender is to be superscribed "Tender for Supply of either Indian Steam Coal, or English or South Welsh Coal."

WALTER LUMSDEN,
Director, Royal Indian Marine.

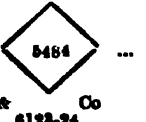

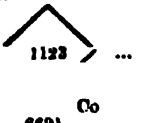

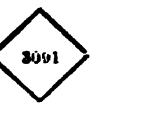

Royal Indian Marine Dockyard, Bombay, the 6th February 1914.

THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

Published in FOUR SERIES, viz.

CALCUTTA, MADRAS, BOMBAY AND ALLAHABAD.

THE Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor-General in Council, are printed in monthly Parts, which are issued, as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

The Reports comprise four Series—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court.

The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the Series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt; and the Madras, Bombay and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, respectively.

Persons desiring to subscribe for or purchase the Reports should apply to—the Officer in charge Bengal Secretariat Book Depôt, Calcutta, or the Superintendent, Government Press, Madras, or the Superintendent, Government Central Press, Bombay, or the Curator of Government Books, United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, Allahabad.

Secretary to the Bengal Legislative Council.

CALCUTTA,

The 16th February 1914.

No. 371L., dated the 18th February, 1914.—The following Act, passed by the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bengal, received the assent of His Excellency the Governor on the 24th January, 1914, and, having been assented by His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General on the 10th February, 1914, is hereby published for general information:—

BENGAL ACT No. III OF 1914.

THE DOVETON TRUST ACT, 1914.

An Act to abolish the Parental Academic Institution and Doveton College and Doveton Institution for Young Ladies, and to provide for the application of the property and funds thereof as nearly as possible in accordance with the intentions of the founders.

Preamble.

WHEREAS, on the first day of March, 1823, an Educational Society was established in Calcutta, under the designation of "The Parental Academic Institution," with the object of establishing one or more schools under its own control in order to procure the means of affording to youth the best education of which existing circumstances would admit, and, as far as the state of funds would allow, to provide education for the orphans of members dying not possessed of property sufficient to educate their children;

And whereas the designation of the said Society was changed in the year 1855 to that of "The Parental Academic Institution and Doveton College";

And whereas the said Society was registered as a Society under the Societies Registration Act, 1860, on the twenty-ninth day of August, 1881; XXI of 1860.

And whereas the designation of the said Society was again changed in the year 1886, on the incorporation therewith of "The Young Ladies' Institution," to that of "The Parental Academic Institution and Doveton College and Doveton Institution for Young Ladies";

And whereas various properties and funds have from time to time been vested in the Governing Body of the said Society, and in other persons, for the benefit of, or in trust for, the said Institution or pupils to be educated therein;

And whereas the said Institution is now governed by certain persons claiming to be a Committee duly elected or appointed under an order made by the High Court, Calcutta, on the eighth day of April, 1907;

And whereas it appears to the Governor in Council that the said Committee are unable satisfactorily to manage the said Institution according to the intentions of its founders, and that portions of the property and funds of the Institution have been wasted away in litigation and by mismanagement, and that it is expedient that the Legislature should intervene in order to prevent further waste and mismanagement;

And whereas it appears to the Governor in Council that the objects of the founders of the said Institution would best be met by providing for the application of its property and funds, under the direction of the Government, to the education of Christian children of what is known as the Homeioiled Community of Bengal;

And whereas the sanction of the Governor General has been obtained, under section 5 of the Indian Councils Act, 1892, to the passing of this Act; 55 & 56 Viet., c. 14.

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

It title.

1. This Act may be called the Doveton Trust Act, 1914.

2. The "Parental Academic Institution and Doveton College and Doveton Institution for Young Ladies" is hereby abolished.

The Dooeton Trust Act, 1914.

(Sections 3-6.)

Vesting and application of trust property and funds.

3. All property, movable and immovable, which is vested in the Managing Committee of the said Institution, or in any other person, for the benefit of the said Institution or any-wise in trust therefor, and all sums standing to the credit of the said Institution, shall vest in the Accountant-General, Bengal, as bare trustee, and shall be applied —

- (a) to the discharge of all debts and liabilities properly payable out of, or chargeable upon, the property or funds of the said Institution, and
- (b) to making provision for the education of Christian children of what is known as the Domiciled Community of Bengal, by the granting of scholarships, by grants-in-aid to Institutions intended for the education of such children, or in such other similar manner as to the Local Government may seem reasonable and proper.

Appointment of ad-
him.

4. The Local Government shall, by notification in the Calcutta Gazette, appoint an officer of the Government (not being the Accountant-General, Bengal) by the name of his office to administer the property and sums referred to in section 3; and all powers in respect of such property and sums, which have hitherto been exercisable by the said Managing Committee or by any other person, may henceforth be exercised by such officer, subject to the control of the Local Government.

Power to make rules.

5. (1) The Local Government may make rules to carry out the purposes of this Act.

(2) In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may prescribe

- (a) the method of applying property and funds held under this Act to the purpose specified in clause (b) of section 3;
- (b) the securities in which funds held under this Act and not required for immediate disbursement shall be invested;
- (c) the accounts to be kept by the Accountant-General, Bengal, and by the officer appointed under section 4, and the mode in which such accounts are to be audited;
- (d) the periodical publication of a list of all property and funds held under this Act, and of an abstract of all accounts kept hereunder;
- (e) the fees (if any) to be paid to the Government in respect of property held and administered under this Act.

(3) The power conferred by this section to make rules is subject to the condition of the rules being made after previous publication.

(4) All rules made under this section shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette, and on such publication shall have effect as if enacted in this Act.

Indemnity

6. (1) No suit shall be instituted against the Government in respect of anything done or purporting to be done under this Act, or in respect of any alleged neglect or omission to perform any duty devolving on the Government under this Act, or in respect of the exercise of, or the failure to exercise, any power conferred by this Act on the Government.

(2) No suit shall be instituted against the Accountant-General, Bengal, or any officer appointed under section 4, except—

- (a) for divesting him of property on the ground of its not being subject to this Act, or

The Doreton Trust Act, 1914.
(Section 6.)

- (b) for making him chargeable with or accountable for the loss or misapplication of any property vested in or managed by him under this Act, or the income thereof, where the loss or misapplication has been occasioned by or through his wilful act, neglect or default.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Act of the Governor General of India in Council received the assent of the Governor General on the 3rd February 1914, and is hereby promulgated for general information:

ACT NO. II OF 1914.

An Act to prevent the introduction into British India of any insect, fungus or other pest, which is or may be destructive to crops

WHEREAS it is expedient to make provision for preventing the introduction into British India of any insect, fungus or other pest, which is or may be destructive to crops; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called the Destructive Insects and Pests Act, 1914.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "crops" includes all agricultural or horticultural crops, and trees or bushes;

(b) "import" means the bringing or taking by sea or land; and

(c) "infection" means infection by any insect, fungus or other pest injurious to a crop.

3. (1) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, prohibit or regulate, subject to such restrictions and conditions as he may impose, the import into British India, or any part thereof, or any specified place therein, of any article or class of articles likely to cause infection to any crop.

(2) A notification under this section may specify any article or class of articles, either generally or in any particular manner, whether with reference to the country of origin, or the route by which imported or otherwise.

4 A notification under section 3 shall operate as if it had been issued under section 3.

Operation of notification if it had been issued under section 3. der section 19 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, and the officers of Customs at every port shall have the same powers in respect of any article with regard to the importation of which such a notification has been issued as they have for the time being in respect of any article the importation of which is regulated, restricted or prohibited by the law relating to Sea Customs, and the law for the time being in force relating to Sea Customs or any such article shall apply accordingly.

5. (1) The Local Government may, subject to the control of the Governor General in Council, make rules for the detention, inspection, disinfection or destruction of any article or class of articles in respect of which a notification has been issued under section 3 or of any article which may have been in contact or proximity thereto, and for regulating the powers and duties of the officers whom it may appoint in this behalf.

(2) In making any rule under this section the Local Government may direct that a breach thereof shall be punishable with fine, which may extend to one thousand rupees.

6. No suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding shall lie against any person for anything in good faith done or intended to be done under this Act.

W. H. VINCENT,

Secretary to the Government of India.

Entrance to the Haiho—Establishment of river mouth leading marks and Inward and outward turning transit marks.

No. 100 (first publication).—The Coast Inspector, Shanghai, has given Notice (No. 563 of 1913), that the following aids to navigation have been established, to assist vessels in navigating between the Deep Hole and the entrance to the Haiho :—

Two black pyramidal Beacons, to be known as the River Mouth Leading Marks, have been established on the northern bank of the Haiho, about 1 mile to the north-westward of the Fort Light.

The high (or rear) Beacon exhibits a white light. The low (or front) Beacon exhibits a red light. The lights are Fixed, Dioptric, of the Sixth Order. These Beacons in transit mark the channel from the Spit Light-boat towards the entrance to the Haiho, until Central Fort (about 4 cables S.S.W. of Fort Light). is abeam.

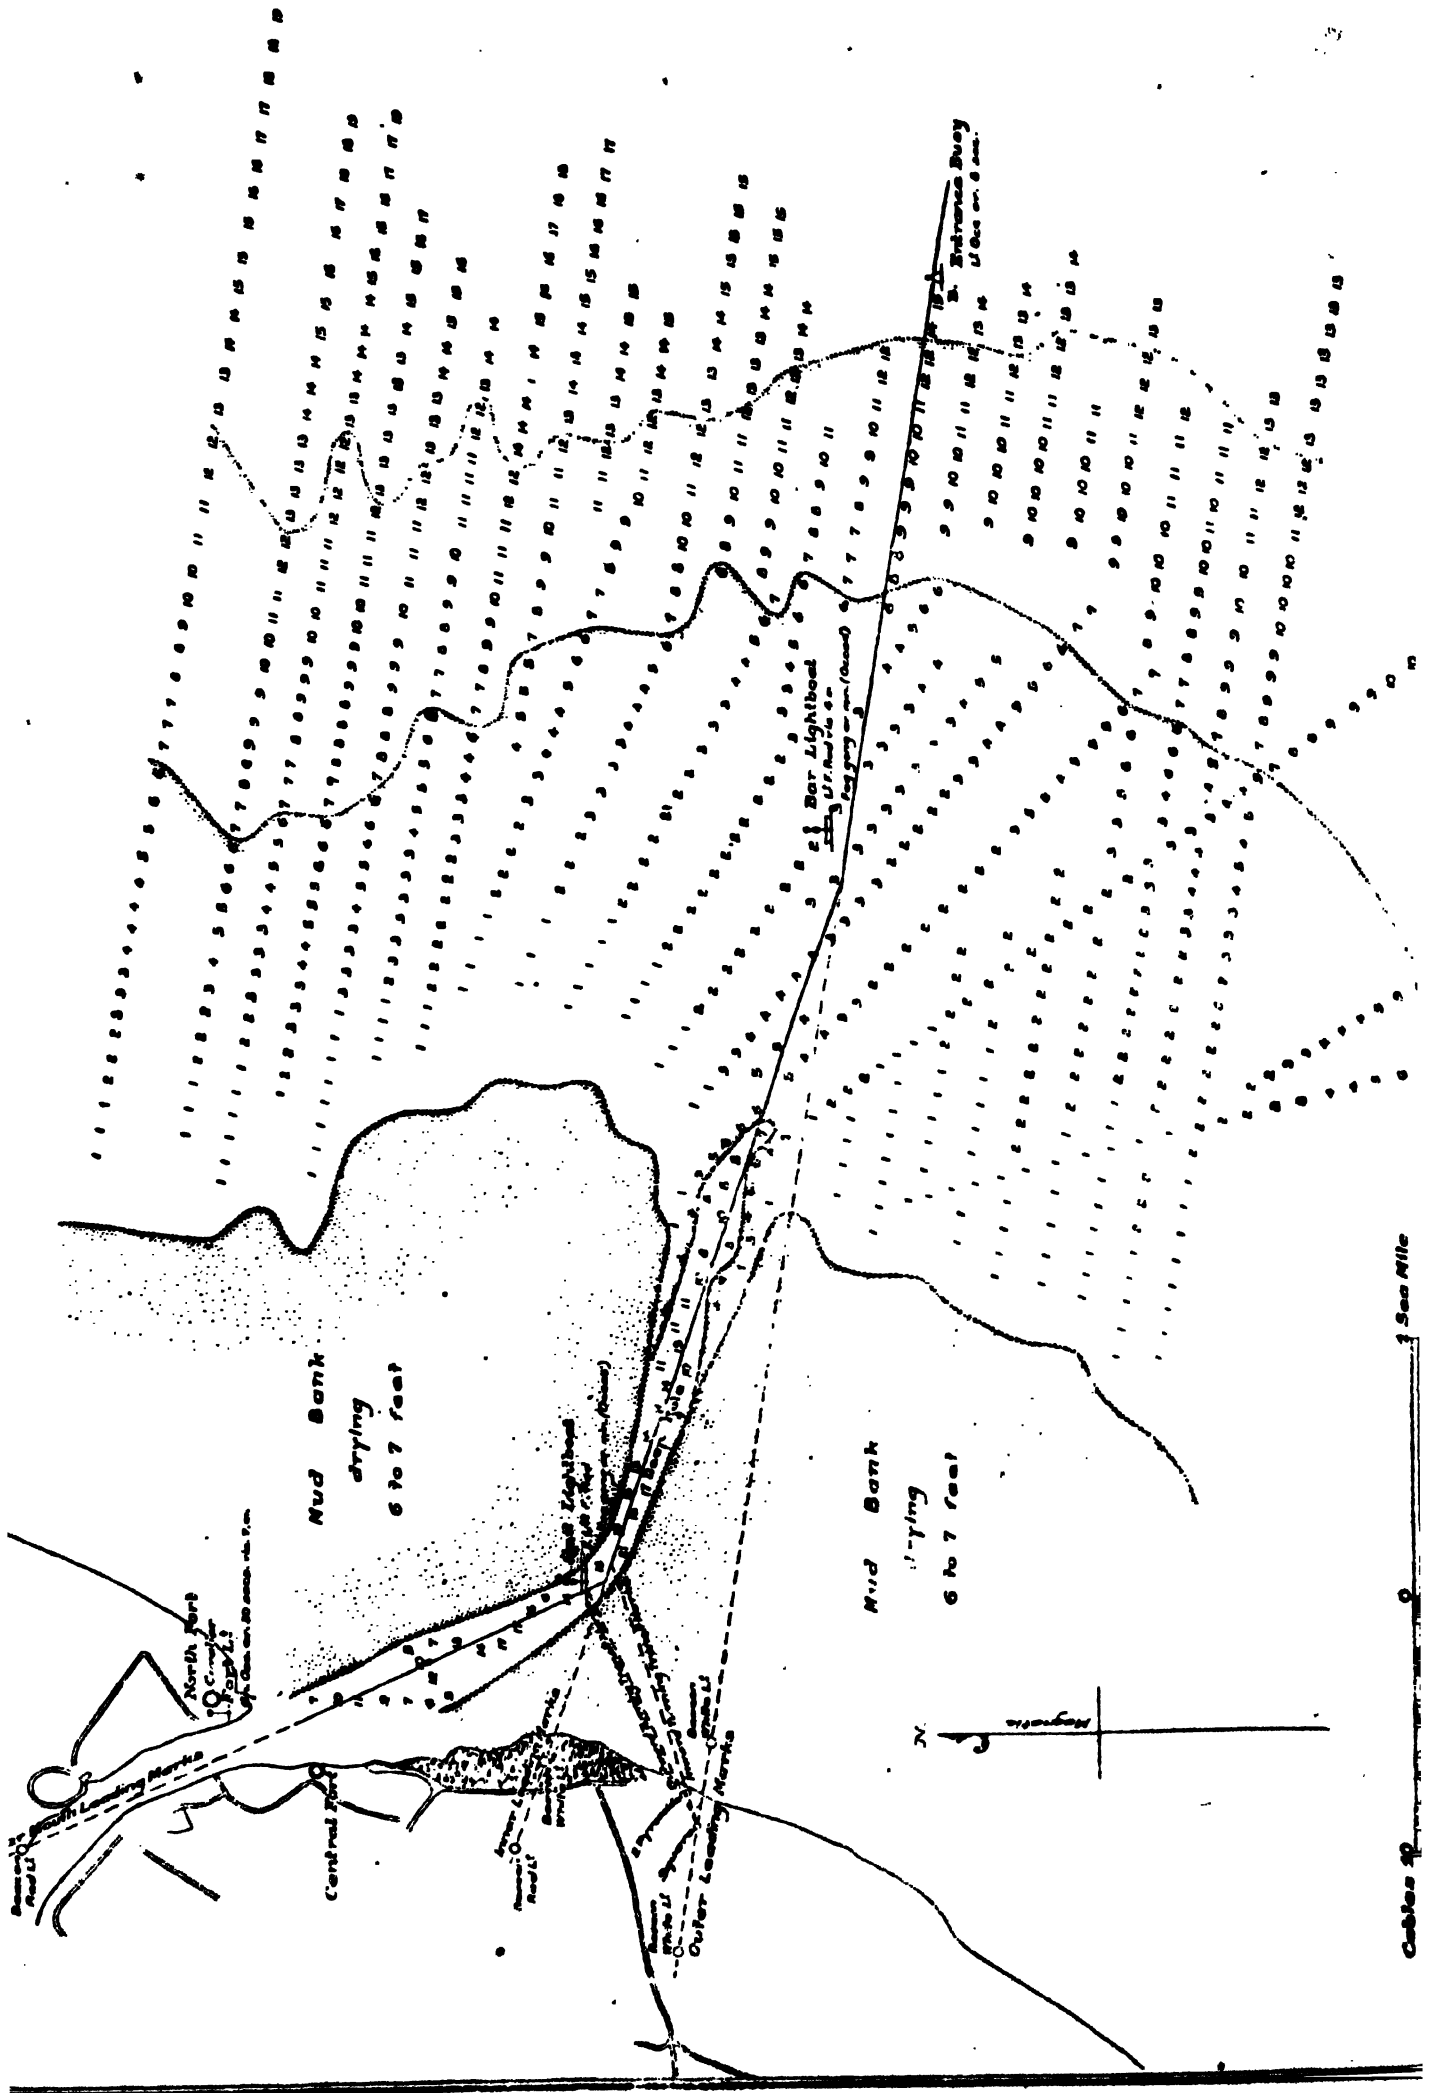

Three Beacons, forming two sets of unlighted transit marks, and to be known as the Inward and Outward Turning Transit Marks, have been established in the neighbourhood of the Taku Bar Outer Leading Marks.

The high (or rear) Beacon is a black square. The low (or front) Beacons are two black pyramids.

The southernmost of these two sets of transit marks—the Inward Turning Transit Marks—indicate, when in line, where an inward-bound vessel should leave the Taku Bar Inner Leading Marks and proceed on the River Mouth Leading Marks. The northernmost of these two sets of transit marks—the Outward Turning Transit Marks—indicate, when in line, where an outward-bound vessel should leave the River Mouth Leading Marks and proceed on the Taku Bar Inner Leading Marks.

The accompanying plan shows the position of aids to navigation marking the entrance to the Haiho.

The customary withdrawal of the floating aids to navigation during the winter months is not affected by this Notice. The lighting of the several Leading Marks will be continued during the winter.

BRITISH POSSESSIONS.

No. 74 (second publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 1 of 1914), are republished :—

PART I.

CLOSING OF PORTS.

(1) My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, having taken into consideration the fact that local or other circumstances may arise in which it may be necessary, on account of periodical exercises, manoeuvres, or otherwise, to forbid all entrance to certain ports of the Empire, this is to give Notice that on approaching the shores of the United Kingdom, or any of the ports or localities of the British Empire, referred to in Part III of this Notice, a sharp look-out should be kept for the signals described in the following paragraph, and for the vessels mentioned in paragraph (5), Part II, of this Notice, and the distinguishing and other signals made by them. In the event of such signals being displayed, the port or locality should be approached with great caution, as it may be apprehended that obstructions may exist.

(2) If entrance to a port is prohibited, three red vertical lights by night, or three red vertical balls by day, will be exhibited in some conspicuous position, in or near to its approach, which signals will also be shown by the vessels indicated in paragraph (5), Part II, of this Notice.

If these signals are displayed, vessels must either proceed to the position marked "Examination Anchorage" on the Admiralty charts and anchor there, or keep the sea.

(3) At all the ports or localities at home or abroad referred to in Part III of this Notice, search-lights are occasionally exhibited for exercise.

Instructions have been given to avoid directing moveable search-lights during practice on to vessels under way, but mariners are warned that great care should be taken to keep a sharp look-out for the signals indicated in paragraph (2) above, when search-lights are observed to be working.

PART II.

EXAMINATION SERVICE.

(4) Under certain circumstances it may become necessary to take special measures to examine vessels desiring to enter the ports or localities at home or abroad, referred to in Part III of this Notice.

(5) In such case, vessels carrying the distinguishing flags or lights mentioned in paragraph (7) will be charged with the duty of examining ships which desire to enter the ports and of allotting positions in which they shall anchor. If Government vessels, or vessels belonging to the local port authority, are found patrolling in the offing, merchant vessels are advised to communicate with such vessels with a view to obtaining information as to the course on which they should approach the Examination anchorage. Such communication will not be necessary in cases where the pilot on board has already received this information from the local authorities.

(6) As the institution of the Examination Service at any port will never be publicly advertised, especial care should be taken in approaching the ports, by day or night, to keep a sharp look-out for any vessel carrying the flags or lights mentioned in paragraph (7), and to be ready to "bring to" at once when hailed by her or warned by the firing of a gun or sound rocket.

In entering by night any of the ports mentioned below in Part III, serious delay and risk will be avoided if four efficient all-round lamps, two red and two white, are kept available for use.

(7) By day the distinguishing flags of the Examination Steamer will be a special flag (white and red horizontal surrounded by a blue border) and a blue ensign.

Also, three red vertical balls if the port is closed.

By night the steamer will carry :—

(a) Three red vertical lights if the port is closed.

(b) Three white vertical lights if the port is open.

The above lights will be carried in addition to the ordinary navigation lights, and will show an unbroken light around the horizon.

(8) Masters are warned that, before attempting to enter any of these ports when the Examination Service is in force, they must in their own interests strictly obey all instructions given to them by the Examination Steamer. In the absence of any instructions from the Examination Steamer they must proceed to the position marked "Examination Anchorage" on the Admiralty Charts and anchor there, or keep the sea.

Whilst at anchor in the Examination anchorage Masters are warned that they must not lower any boats (except to avoid accident), communicate with the shore, work cables, move the ship, or allow anyone to leave the ship, without permission from the Examination Steamer.

(9) In case of fog, Masters of vessels are enjoined to use the utmost care, and the Examination Anchorage itself should be approached with caution.

(10) The pilots attached to the ports will be acquainted with the regulations to be followed.

BRITISH EMPIRE.

Signals to be made by vessels approaching ports when inconvenienced by searchlights.

No. 75 (second publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 2 of 1914), are republished :—

Any vessel approaching a port in the British Empire when searchlight are being worked, and finding that they interfere with her safe navigation, may make use of the following signals, either singly or combined :—

(a) By flashing lamp, four short flashes followed by one long flash.

(b) By whistle, siren, or fog-horn, four short blasts followed by one long blast.

Whenever possible, both flashing lamp signals and sound signals should be used.

On these signals being made, the searchlights will be worked, as far as circumstances will permit, so as to cause the least inconvenience, being either extinguished, raised, or altered in direction.

The signals should not be used without real necessity, as unless the vessel is actually in the rays of a searchlight it is impossible to know which searchlight is affected.

Note.

These signals are designed to assist mariners and do not render the Government liable in any way.

ADMIRALTY PUBLICATIONS.

The introduction of TRUE bearings.

No. 76 (second publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the British Admiralty (No. 4 of 1914), are republished :—

Former Notices.—No. 1619 of 1911. No. 2 of 1912 and No. 3 of 1913 (This office No. 61 of 1912.)

Notice is hereby given that TRUE bearings are being gradually introduced in all Admiralty Publications.

Details of the new system are as follows :—

(a) On charts :

A new pattern compass is being gradually introduced which enables True Bearings to be laid off on the chart in addition to Magnetic Bearings. (See diagram overleaf.)

The compass consists of two graduated circles, clearly separated from each other.

The outer circle is a True compass, graduated from 0° (True North) to 360°, measured clockwise.

The inner circle is a magnetic compass, graduated in points and in degrees from 0° to 90° as heretofore.

The bearings of leading and clearing marks, etc., are given both True and Magnetic, and a note to this effect is placed in the title of the charts. (See overleaf.)

Example.—The bearing N. 62° W. true, with a Variation of 8° Westerly, will be shown thus: 298° (N. 54° W. Mag.).

(b) In Sailing Directions :

Bearings will be given as True only, in degrees from  $0^{\circ}$  (North) to  $360^{\circ}$ , measured clockwise; and a note to this effect will be given in the title page, in the Advertisement, and in the page immediately preceding page 1 of all volumes of Sailing Directions. The Variation will continue to be given on each page as at present, so that Magnetic bearings may be obtained when required.

This alteration only applies to new editions of Sailing Directions and their Supplements. In the case of Sailing Directions in which Magnetic bearings are still given, Magnetic bearings will be given in their Supplements.

(c) In Notices to Mariners :

All bearings are given both True and Magnetic in a similar manner to that adopted on charts.

(d) Lists of Lights :

Bearings will be given in all Parts of the List of Lights for 1914 as True only, in degrees from  $0^{\circ}$  (North) to  $360^{\circ}$ , measured clockwise.

On each page of the List of Lights, a footnote is placed stating that all bearings are TRUE FROM SEAWARD.

RESOLUTION.

READ—

The Administration Report of the Commissioners of the Port of Calcutta for the year 1912-13.

1. Income.—The income of the Trust, which amounted to Rs. 1,42,46,317, during the year, was the highest hitherto earned and exceeded that of last year, viz., Rs. 1,35,90,408, which was the largest amount earned previously, by Rs. 6,55,909. This great improvement was largely due to the increase in the traffic dealt with at the Foreign Import Jetties and at the Wet Docks, which resulted in a larger income not only from these sections but also from the receipts from river dues, port dues and the terminals paid by the railways. During the past decade the income has expanded from Rs. 79,65,376 in 1903-04 to Rs. 1,42,46,317 in 1912-13, in spite of reductions made in rates and charges which are said to represent an annual relief of Rs. 15½ lakhs on the traffic of the present time.

2. Expenditure.—The total expenditure during the year amounted to Rs. 1,47,00,316, against Rs. 1,33,38,940 in 1911-12. After allowing for a sum of Rs. 1,54,049, which should properly have been adjusted in previous years, the total expenditure is reduced to Rs. 1,45,46,267, thus leaving a net deficit of Rs. 2,99,950 on the years' working. This deficit is due in great part to additional charges on account of interest and Sinking Fund payable on loans raised from Government and the public to carry out capital works, and to the annual instalment towards the repayment of the dock loan having increased from two to four lakhs of rupees.

On the subject of the growth of these charges the Commissioners sound a warning note in the following passage in their report :—

“So great has been the expansion of the traffic during the past five years that, even with the additional berths constructed both at the jetties and docks, the accommodation of the port is altogether insufficient to meet the requirements of the shipping and the trade. A still heavier programme of capital expenditure has therefore to be undertaken in the immediate future, and to meet the charges on this expenditure it appears to the Commissioners that it will be necessary to revise the tolls, dues and rates from which the revenue of the Trust is derived. The Commissioners have in the past reduced their rates to the minimum compatible with financial equilibrium, but it is clear that those rates no longer suffice and that the shipping and trade must contribute more to the cost of the extended facilities which they demand. The Commissioners have under consideration the question of the additional revenue that will be required, and the manner in which it should be levied, to meet the capital expenditure to be incurred and also the natural and unavoidable increase in the cost of maintenance and other working expenses.”

3. The receipts and expenditure under the more important heads of account were as follows :—

Jetties.—The total earnings rose from Rs. 15,76,784 in 1911-12 to Rs. 18,86,697 during the year, an increase of Rs. 3,09,913, whereas the expenditure incurred was Rs. 10,23,673 against Rs. 8,72,696, an increase of Rs. 1,50,977 which was chiefly due to the increased charges on account of labour, maintenance and repairs, and extra staff engaged to supervise the work of the sheds.

One thousand seven hundred and thirty vessels, with a gross tonnage of 7,074,830, entered the port, as against 1,706 vessels, with a gross tonnage of 6,762,228, in the previous year.

Despite the fact that a certain number of foreign import vessels were sent to the docks to discharge, the congestion at the jetties still continued. A great improvement, however, has been effected through the greater attention which has been paid to the sorting and stacking of goods at the time of landing, which has enabled the Commissioners to reduce the free time allowed to importers for the clearance of goods from three to two days, and to levy double the rent charges on goods which are not cleared within three days from the expiration of the free time. An additional jetty has also been constructed and there has been some re-arrangement of the existing jetties and sheds, etc. But it cannot be hoped that such improvements, however successful, will suffice to relieve entirely the congestion at the jetties, and it has been found necessary to institute special enquiries upon a broad basis as to the general facilities afforded to the trade of the port and the lines upon which they can be improved and augmented. In order to carry through such enquiries, and in accordance with the wishes of the mercantile community of Calcutta, as expressed at an influential conference convened by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce in August 1913, Government has appointed a Committee to deal with the whole question of the development of trade facilities within the port of Calcutta and its approaches.

Sale Tea Warehouse.—There was an increase of Rs. 26,531 in the income under this head over that of the previous year, the number of chests of tea sold showing an increase of 92,788 chests as compared with the previous year. Increased facilities are required to meet the expansion of this traffic.

Petroleum Wharf.—The total receipts on account of wharfage, landing and storage charges on imported oil, and from rents paid by the several oil companies decreased by Rs. 46,716, which was chiefly due to the large falling off in the importation of oils in tins and cases, on which stevedoring and handling charges are recovered. The expenditure was also less by Rs. 13,750. The whole of this decrease was in respect of labour charges.

It is noticeable that in the year 1896-97 American oil represented 30 per cent. of the total imports and Russian oil 67½ per cent., while Burma oil totalled only 1 per cent. The corresponding figures for the past year were 15½ per cent. for American oil, 1 per cent. for Russian oil, and 67 per cent. for Burma oil.

Inland vessels' wharves.—The income derived from the inland vessels' wharves increased from Rs. 4,95,214 during 1911-12 to Rs. 5,23,432 during the year, an increase of 28,218. The income from this source has been steadily increasing yearly.

Port Approaches.—The expenditure under this head has risen by Rs. 46,171. The following figures show how the work of survey in these approaches has expanded during the past 28 years—

			1885	1900-01	1912-13
Miles sounded	...	...	1,295	5,864	6,927
River plans, charts and notices	...	...	20	606	1,021
Number of buoys (Calcutta to Diamond Harbour)	...	...	7	30	48
River marks ...	...	...	57	115	263

The dredger "Sandpiper" has proved of great value during the year, and the work done in improving the various channels in the Upper Reaches of the river has been very noticeable. The new dredger "Belari," which is specially designed for work in the lower reaches, where the dredger "Sandpiper" is less effective, has been put into commission after a series of most satisfactory trials.

Railway.—The earnings under this head advanced from Rs. 14,03,086 to Rs. 15,71,721 on account of heavy traffic in jute and coal and large bookings of imported sugar. The expenditure also increased from Rs. 10,97,865 to Rs. 11,83,460, owing to the heavier traffic carried and extensive repairs to the permanent way.

Ferry service.—There are 13 steamers now in commission, and the number of passengers carried increased from 8,754,961 to 9,538,189. The southern section of the ferry service has been extended to Muteabruz and Rajabagan and to Rajgunge, and further extensions are under the consideration of the Commissioners. The service has proved valuable to the public and is greatly appreciated.

Kidderpore Docks.—The total import and export traffic at the docks exceeded five million tons, exports of coal alone rising to 3,153,404 tons and imports of sugar to 272,755 tons. The exports of tea and jute continue to show satisfactory development.

The income of the wet docks rose from Rs. 32,81,463 to Rs. 35,52,858, while the expenditure increased from Rs. 29,19,699 to Rs. 32,76,005. Much of the increase in expenditure is due to maintenance and repair charges.

River dues.—These charges, which are levied on goods, rose from Rs. 22,45,074 to Rs. 25,01,943. The increase was due principally to the coal traffic and the increase generally in exports and imports.

Establishment charges.—There was a slight reduction in the percentage of establishment charges to income.

4. During the year under review a sum of Rs. 50,31,128 was raised by the issue of debentures of Rs. 50 lakhs. The capital debt of the Trust at the close of the year, after allowing for the amount of Rs. 1,32,17,067 at the credit of the Sinking Fund for debenture loans, and of Rs. 8,32,812 repaid on the Kidderpore Dock loan, was Rs. 8,74,21,287, as against Rs. 8,45,39,050 on 31st March, 1912.

The assets, which were valued at Rs. 11,37,37,911, exceeded the liabilities by more than Rs. 2½ crores; but the value of the Strand Bank and the Howrah foreshore lands has not been included in the assets, which also have not been credited with any increase in the value of landed property since that property was acquired.

Over and above the value of property and the amount at the credit of the Sinking Fund, the Commissioners have other funds accumulated out of revenue, viz., the Reserve Fund, the Vessels Replacement Fund and the Fire Insurance Fund. The total amount at credit of these funds on the 31st March 1913 was Rs. 45,16,850.

5. The expenditure under the head of Capital amounted to Rs. 39,90,856, the following being the most important works in progress or completed during the year :—

Completion of No. 27 berth at the docks, the last of the four new produce berths.

Construction of a fifth produce berth, with double storeyed transit shed.

Provision of increased transit shed accommodation in Dock No. 1 and paving the quays at No. 10 berth with stone sets.

Erection of a new railway bridge over the boat canal, to give direct access for grain trains to the receiving and marshalling lines at Durgapore from which the grain traffic is distributed to the Kantapuker shed.

Extension of the Kantapuker grain depôt by the construction of two sheds.

Remodelling of the dock junction for the purpose of carrying out all the marshalling operations without interference with the reception and despatch of foreign trains, which retarded the working in the past.

Provision of 300 covered goods wagons and six new locomotives.

Construction of an additional jetty berth No. 9.

Provision of additional trolley equipment and other facilities for the handling of goods at Nos. 2 and 7 jetties.

Extension of No. 5 jetty shed.

Construction of a large double storeyed transit shed for the traffic of the Inland Vessels Wharves.

Provision of a new suction dredger for the port approaches and of a new double ladder dredger for dredging at the Jetties and wharves with two hopper barges.

Purchase for the ferry services of two new light draft steamers.

6. In addition to the works mentioned above the scheme for lighting the lower reaches of the river between Saugor and Mud Point, with a view to their navigation at night, as recommended by a committee of experts convened by the Port Commissioners, was sanctioned by Government after careful consideration of the views expressed by the members of the Liners' Conference and their representatives in India and by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, who were in favour of the scheme, and also of the views of the Bengal Pilot Service, who are opposed to it.

The plans for the extensions at the docks are maturing and the Commissioners have determined upon the construction of four riverside berths in Garden Reach for export as well as import traffic, the plan and estimate for which have been submitted to the Government of India for provisional sanction. The recommendations of the Committee appointed by the Commissioners in England to advise them on the entrance to the new dock system and connected works are receiving the attention of the Commissioners.

7. The thanks of Government are due to the Commissioners for the able assistance they have rendered to the administration in their efficient discharge of the important duties entrusted to them, and to the Hon'ble Mr. H. J. Hilary for his successful labours as officiating Vice-Chairman and the excellent report submitted by him. The Governor-in-Council desires also to take this opportunity of acknowledging the debt which he and all who are connected with the Port of Calcutta owe to Sir Frederick Dumayne, who took long leave preparatory to retirement in March last, for the conspicuous ability and zeal with which he performed the duties of Vice-Chairman during the twelve years of his tenure of that appointment. During that period the income and the expenditure of the Port have nearly doubled and the responsibilities of this post have increased in proportion. The experience and the energies of Sir Frederick Dumayne have been placed unsparingly at the disposal of the authorities of the Port during a critical term of expansion and development and have merited the cordial tribute of thanks which His Excellency now desires to place upon public record.

By order of the Governor in Council,

H. H. GREEN,

Secretary.

MONTHLY WEATHER AND CROP REPORT OF BENGAL FOR JANUARY 1914.

I. Character of the season.—During the month under review no rain fell throughout the province excepting a few scattered showers at Jessore, Khulna, Jalpaiguri and Darjeeling. The rainfall in Darjeeling was, however, slightly in excess of the normal. The usual rainfall statement is appended.

II. Progress of agricultural operations.—Harvesting of winter rice was entirely finished and that of rabi crops was in progress. Fields were being prepared for autumn rice and jute. Cutting and pressing of sugarcane were also going on.

III. State of standing crops.—The condition of standing crops was generally good at the end of the month.

IV. The prospects and probable outturn.—The prospects of the spring crops were favourable and a fairly good outturn was expected.

V. Damage to crops.—No damage was reported to have been done by insect-pests or any other natural causes during the month.

VI. Condition of agricultural stock.—The condition of agricultural stock was fair. Cattle-disease was found to be prevalent in parts of Nadia, Murshidabad, Burdwan, Bankura, Malda and Mymensingh.

VII. Failure of pasturage and fodder.—Fodder was reported to be insufficient in parts of Midnapore only.

VIII. Prices of food-grains.—During the second fortnight of the month under review the price of common rice rose in fifteen districts, fell in five districts only and remained stationary in the rest. It varied from 6 seers 12 chitaks per rupee at Mymensingh to 10 seers 4 chitaks at Bankura.

IX. Condition of agricultural people.—The condition of agricultural population was reported to be fairly good excepting in the Contai subdivision of the Midnapore district, where gratuitous relief and agricultural loans continued to be granted to those people who were in distress on account of the floods which occurred during the rainy season last year.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 1301 Regn.—The 7th February 1914.—The following rules for Departmental Examinations in the Registration Department having been approved by the Governor in Council are published for general information :—

1. All Probationers and Sub-Registrars appointed direct to the higher grades shall be liable to pass a Departmental Examination in the following subjects :—

- (i) The Bengal Registration Manual, 1912, excluding Parts II and III in Chapter IV.
- (ii) The Stamp Act (II of 1899), Chapters I-IV and VII and Schedule I, the Notifications of the Government of India under section 9 of that Act (pages 185-189 of the Bengal Stamp Manual, 1911), Board's Circular Orders Nos. 1-3 at pages 177-181, and the High Court Ruling at pages 181-182 of the Stamp Manual.
- (iii) The General Clauses Act (X of 1897) so far as it bears on the work of the Registration Department.
- (iv) Order V, Rules 9-30 in the First Schedule to the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908).
- (v) Rules 64 to 71 of the Rules framed under section 69 of the Registration Act and published under Eastern Bengal and Assam Notification No. 8627, dated the 2nd September 1911, prescribing the procedure in the case of documents presented for registration under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

2. To direct and control these Departmental Examinations, which will be held half-yearly, there shall be an Examination Board consisting of the Inspector-General of Registration as President and the Inspectors of Registration Offices as members.

3. The examination of all candidates will be held at a single centre in Calcutta.

4. Each District Registrar will report to the Inspector-General of Registration, the names of intending examinees.

5. The first half-yearly examination will be held in May and the second in the month of November. Exact dates will be communicated to the District Registrars by the Inspector-General of Registration.

6. (a) It will be the duty of the Board to prepare, previous to each half-yearly examination, two papers containing at least five questions each. The question papers shall be placed in a sealed envelope which shall remain in the custody of the President.

(b) For the examination in Law and Rules there will be two papers—

(i) One paper containing questions of a more difficult and practical character to be answered with books.

N.B.—Only unannotated edition of Acts or Codes will be allowed in answering this paper

(ii) One paper containing questions of a simple, general character to be answered without books.

7. (a) The answers of the candidates will be examined by the Board and marks will be allotted. The minimum number of marks for a pass will be 50 per cent. of the total number of marks. Candidates obtaining 75 per cent. of the total will be held to have passed with credit.

(b) There will also be a practical examination in which each of the candidates will be expected to register a document correctly and their ability to read documents in the language commonly used will be tested. The minimum number of marks for a pass will be 50 per cent. of the total number of marks. Failure to qualify in this practical test will involve failure in the whole examination whatever be the percentage of marks obtained in the written paper.

8. The results of the examination will be published in the Calcutta Gazette, the names of successful candidates being arranged in order of merit.

9. No Probationer will ordinarily be eligible for promotion to the fifth grade of Sub-Registrars and no Sub-Registrar appointed direct to one of the higher grades will be eligible for promotion unless he has passed this examination. Ordinarily, he will be superseded by those who pass. But the penalty for delay in passing will cease to operate when he passes, i.e., on passing he will be placed, as soon as practicable, in the same position with regard to future promotions as if he had passed in the ordinary course.

10. If a Probationer or Sub-Registrar, as the case may be, fails to pass within two years of his first appointment, he will be liable to removal from the service, subject to the approval of Government.

11. Probationers attending at the half-yearly Departmental Examinations will be allowed travelling allowance subject to the rules laid down in section IV, Chapter LIV, of the Civil Service Regulations.

12. The Governor in Council reserves to himself the right of exempting for special reasons, any Probationer or Sub-Registrar, from the obligation to pass the Departmental Examination.

DRAFT RULES FOR THE MAGRA HÂT CHANNELS.

1. Every vessel entering or making use of the Magra Hât channels shall be liable to measurement for the purpose of ascertaining the tolls payable. In case of any reasonable doubt, the persons appointed by the Governor in Council as Collectors of Tolls or Navigation Canal Officers shall have authority to again measure a vessel notwithstanding that it was measured before.

2. Vessels for the purpose of the determination of maundage shall be divided into three classes as follows :—

Class I.—To include all vessels of the usual native types of build known as saltees, but not bond fide tal (or palm-tree) dongas and not exceeding 50 maunds by canal measurement.

Class II.—To include all other vessels of usual native types of build or cutters.

Class III.—To include all steamers, flats, barges and other square-built boats.

The net maundage of every vessel, whether laden or empty, shall, for the purposes of the Canals Act, 1864, and of these rules be determined by the following measurements :—

CLASS I.

A.—The product of one-quarter the inside length of the vessel, measured along the centre line from stem to stern, multiplied by the interior greatest breadth of the vessel multiplied by three-quarters of the depth, measured from the top of the vessel amidships to the interior bottom of the vessel is to be taken as equal to the number of maunds upon which toll shall be levied.

B.—The measurement of the length to be made in feet, rejecting inches, and of the breadth and depth in feet and quarters of a foot, rejecting any remainder of less than a quarter of a foot.

C.—Any vessel the maundage of which calculated as above exceeds 50 maunds shall be reckoned as a vessel under class II.

CLASS II.

A.—The product of one-quarter the length of the vessel from stem to stern measured outside and along the water line, multiplied by the greatest interior breadth of the vessel multiplied by the greatest interior depth from the water line to the interior bottom of the vessel, is to be taken as equal to the number of maunds upon which tolls shall be levied.

B.—The measurement of the length is to be made in feet, rejecting inches, the measurement of the breadth and depth is to be made in feet and quarters of a foot, rejecting any remainder less than a quarter of a foot.

C.—The maundage on which the amount of toll is calculated shall be reckoned to the nearest integral multiple of  $12\frac{1}{2}$  maunds, rejecting any remainder of less than  $12\frac{1}{2}$  maunds. In the case of boats exceeding 500 maunds by measurement the maundage shall be reckoned to the nearest integral multiple of 50 maunds rejecting any remainder of less than 50 maunds.

CLASS III.

A.—For vessels of class III, the number of maunds obtained by the system of measurement prescribed for vessels of class II shall be increased by one-half. For vessels of this class exceeding 1,000 maunds by measurement, the maundage shall be reckoned to the nearest integral multiple of 100 maunds rejecting any remainder of less than 100 maunds. In the case of steamers, the maundage determined as above shall be reduced by one-third as an allowance for engine space.

B.—In case of steamers that have been surveyed under the Inland Steam-vessels Act, 1884, the registered tonnage entered in the certificate may be accepted as the tonnage of the steamer in lieu of measurement.

3. All vessels under class I, known and defined as saltees, will be charged under a system of compounded tollage in accordance with rules contained in Appendix A.

4. Every vessel included in classes II and III entering or passing along the canal shall be furnished with a ticket on paying the prescribed toll. The ticket shall specify the station at which it has been issued, the name of the person in charge of the vessel, the date on which the voyage commenced, the point to which the vessel may proceed on the line of navigation, the maundage of the vessel, the amount of toll charged, the number of days allowed for the voyage, and the date of such last day. The number of days so allowed without additional payment shall be calculated as follows:—

Boats.—One day for every eight miles or portion of eight miles, to be traversed together with one day for every 100 maunds of measurement or part of 100 maunds.

Floats (timber).—One day for every five miles for any number of timbers not exceeding fifty, and one day for every additional fifty or part of fifty.
